Programme of Course of Instruction given at Albert Institution, Glasnevin, by Mr. Downing, Literary Teacher.

Reading, grammar, English composition, geography, book-keeping, the elements of political economy, arithmetic, geometry, trigonometry, mensuration, algebra. The elements of natural philosophy; also land surveying, levelling, and mapping.

Synopsis of lectures delivered by Thomas Baldwin, esq., Agricultural Superintendent, to the Pupils of the Albert Institution.

Lectures on soils, manures, implements, crops, live stock, farm buildings, the reclamation of land, farm accounts, and agricultural economy generally.

The leading features of the system pursued at Glasnevin are explained; and the circumstances are pointed out for which they are and are not suited.

Syllabus of the Course of Lectures delivered by Mr. Boyle, Agriculturist, to the Pupils of the Albert Institution, Glasnevin.

Introductory.

1. The history, progress, and present state of agriculture and of agricultural education—number and size of holdings in Ireland—English, Scotch, and Irish farming compared—the number and value of live stock in Ireland, and approximately in England and Scotland—the value of labour, and how men and horses are to be judiciously employed, and farm work anticipated, &c.—the qualifications and conditions necessary to farm successfully, &c., &c.

Farm Capital.

2. Amount per acre required under several systems of farming—the commercial value of land and how this varies—the impolicy of trying to farm on a large scale with small capital—"floating" and "fixed" capital, &c.

Selecting a Farm.

3. Points for consideration—the quality of the land, and how to judge it—the accommodation as to roads, buildings, markets, railways, &c.—the advantage of a good supply of water, fuel, lime, timber, &c., &c.

PERMANENT IMPROVEMENTS.

4. Drainage.—Principles of—beneficial effects of—sources of wetness in the soil—several systems of drainage—how to lay out the work and execute it—cost of drainage under various circumstances, &c.

5. Subsoiling and Trenching.—How these operations improve the soil—the conditions under which each should be performed—cost of—under several circumstances, &c., &c.

6. Farm Fences.—Stone walls, hedges, palings, &c., &c.—kind suitable in several situations; cost of construction, and best time for erection, &c., &c.

7. Farm Roads.—How to lay out, construct, and keep in repair—cost of—kind and quantity of material required, &c., &c.

8. Farm Buildings.—Their position on the farm—extent of accommodation required—dimensions of houses, sheds, and stalls, for the several classes of live stock, &c.

9. Soils.—Formation and classification of—properties and qualities of each class or kind—the crops for which each is best adapted—technical and local names for soils explained—such as "heavy," "light," "sharp," "thin," "poor," "rich," "warm," "cold," &c., &c.

10. Reclamation of Waste Land.—Bog, moor, marsh or mountain side—burning land—when useful and when injurious—the value of lime in reclaiming land—its chemical and mechanical effects, &c., &c.

11. "Fallowing."—Principles of—antiquity of the practice—the lessons to be derived therefrom—the substitute for the "bare" or "naked" fallows, &c.; &c.

12. Manures.—Principles of manuring—the action and use of manures—farm-yard manure, its collection and preservation—"special" or "artificial" manures—their history, sources of supply, quantities per acre—crops for which each kind or class is best suited, &c., &c.—liquid manure—its value, &c. "Green Manuring."—principles of—when it may be had recourse to—plants grown for this purpose, &c., &c.

13. Irrigation.—Principles and practice of—how to take advantage of favourable situations to carry out irrigation—several systems of, &c., &c.

14. Farm Implements and Machines.—Number and kinds required by the farmer—their cost and construction—how they are worked to advantage—their care and management while at work, and their preservation when not in use, &c., &c.

15 Autumn Cultivation.—The value of this practice to the farmer—how best carried out—the preparation of land for crops generally, &c., &c.

16. Rotations of Cropping.—Principles on which founded—several systems of rotation—soils for which each is best adapted—the advantages of a regular system of cropping, &c., &c.

17. Farm Crops.—Their classification—common and proper names of—dates of sowing, seed per acre, change of seed, thick and thin seeding—principles of—cultivation of each crop—cost thereof—harvesting of crops—the sale and consumption of crops—produce per acre of each crop, &c., &c.

18. Permanent Pasture.—Best means of improving old pasture, and of laying down new pasture—the advantage of "laying down" land to grass without a grain crop, &c., &c.

19. Live Stock.—The principles of breeding—the value of pedigree—judicious crossing of distinct breeds—the distinguishing "points," or marks, of several breeds of the various classes of farm animals—how to judge of quality, condition, age, &c. Rearing of calves—the treatment and management of "store stock"—fattening of beasts—buying and selling—live and dead weight of fat cattle, sheep and pigs—the use of the "cattle gauge." The feeding, treatment, and management of farm horses—diseases of farm animals, treatment of common diseases and casualties, &c., &c., &c. Copy of Letter from Major-General Sir Thomas A. Larcom, K.C.B., to the Secretaries, Board of National Education.

Dublin Castle, 6th April, 1861.

Gentlemen,—I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to transmit herewith, for the information of the Commissioners of National Education, copy of a letter from the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, relative to the estimates for public education in Ireland for the year ending 31st March, 1862.

I am, &c., &c.,

(Signed), Thomas A. Larcom.

The Secretaries.

Enclosure in Sir Thomas A. Larcom's Letter of 6th April, 1861, to the Secretaries.

Treasury Chambers, 1st April, 1861.

Sir,—I am directed by the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to acquaint you that they have had under consideration the estimates for public education in Ireland, furnished, through the Irish Government, by the Commissioners, for the year ending the 31st March, 1862. My Lords request that you will move His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant to cause the Commissioners to be informed that my Lords have sanctioned the estimate with the exception of two items—namely, the sum of £960, being the salary of one agricultural Inspector, two Sub-Inspectors, and one agricultural clerk, &c.

* * * * * *

With regard to the former of these items, the sum voted for the year ending the 31st March, 1861, was £670 for the same numbers and class of officers. The Commissioners state in note 10 the contemplated increase in the salaries and allowances of the Inspectors of literary schools as the reason for the proposed increase in the salaries of the agricultural and sub-agricultural Inspectors. My Lords, however, are not prepared to admit, without further explanation, that the mere circumstance of increasing the salaries of one description of Inspectors (supposing them to be increased) would be, in itself, a sufficient reason for increasing the salaries of another description of Inspectors; and their lordships have further to observe that an increase from £670 to £960 in the salaries of four officers appear to be so unreasonably large as to render further explanation necessary. My Lords have, therefore, inserted in the estimate for the year 1861–2 the sum of £670 instead of £960.

* * * * * *

I am, &c., &c.,

(Signed), G. A. Hamilton.

The Chief Secretary for Ireland.

Memorandum.

In accordance with the foregoing letter, the sum of £670 only was included in the estimate for 1861–2, under the head referred to, being the same sum as appeared in the estimate for the previous year for the same service.

Copy of Letter from the Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Chief Secretary for Ireland, to the Secretaries, Board of National Education.

Dublin Castle, 4th December, 1862.

Sir Robert Peel begs to request that the Secretaries to the Board of National Education in Ireland, will bring under the notice of the Commissioners, in the preparation of their estimate for the ensuing financial year 1863–4, the discussion which took place in Parliament last Session, upon the Agricultural Training Establishment and Model Farm, Glasnevin, on which occasion a pledge was given by the Government (as the Resident Commissioner expressed himself fully aware in conversation with Sir Robert Peel yesterday) that the vote would be subject to revision; and that as the feelings of the Committee elicited from members on both sides of the House were directly adverse to the vote, steps would be taken in the preparation of the estimates for 1863–4, with a view to the reduction of the vote. Lord Naas and Mr. Henry Herbert, predecessors in the office of Chief Secretary for Ireland, thought that the time had arrived when the institution might be put an end to, and Sir Robert Peel hopes that, under the circumstances, the Commissioners are prepared to recommend a sensible reduction in the amount to be asked for from Parliament for the Model Farm at Glasnevin, in the estimates for the ensuing financial year.

National Education Commissioners.

9906—62. Estimates.

Office of National Education,
8 December, 1862.

SIR,—Referring to your letter of the 4th instant, we are directed by the Commissioners of National Education to inform you that they have reduced their estimate for 1863-4, for the Agricultural Department, by a sum of £1,510, as compared with the estimate for 1862-3.

This reduction has been made in conformity with the wish expressed in your letter, and the pledge given by the Government when the estimate for 1862-3, came before Parliament. The Commissioners, however, are of opinion that, in order to the full and efficient working of the Agricultural Department, a sum similar in amount to that voted for this service in the estimate for 1862-3, would have been required, subject, perhaps, to some trifling reductions.

The manner in which these reductions have been made, is shown in notes appended to the complete estimate, now forwarded by direction of the Resident Commissioner.

We have the honour to be, sir,
your very obedient servants,

(Signed), MAURICE CROSS, JAMES KELLY, } Secretaries.

Right Hon. Sir Robert Peel, Bart., M.P.,
Chief Secretary, Dublin Castle.

COPY of LETTER from the Right Hon. Sir R. PEEL, Bart., CHIEF SECRETARY for IRELAND, to the SECRETARIES, BOARD of NATIONAL EDUCATION.

Dublin Castle, 10th January, 1865.

GENTLEMEN,—With reference to your letter of the 23rd ultimo, transmitting in duplicate an estimate of the sum required to be voted for the Department of National Education, for the year ending the 31st March, 1866, I am directed by the Lord Lieutenant to state that, previously to forwarding it to the Treasury, His Excellency is anxious to obtain some further detailed explanation with reference to the following subjects:—

* * * * * *

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

Dr. Kirkpatrick, the late Inspector, having, it is understood, resigned, it would appear from the estimate that his successor has been appointed at a salary of £250 to £300 per annum, and that the salary of the Sub-Inspectors had been raised from £150 to £200 per annum.

The cost of the agricultural department of the National Board has often engaged the attention of Parliament, and as it will very likely be again discussed upon the passing of the present estimate, I am to request the Commissioners will favour His Excellency with a statement of their reasons for filling up Dr. Kirkpatrick's vacancy, and their not having availed themselves of it to reduce the cost of the inspection staff.

It is further to be observed that, according to the former estimate, the joint salaries of the agricultural Inspector and Sub-Inspector amounted to £450 a year, whereas, according to the present estimate, upon the Superintendent reaching his maximum salary of £300, there will be an ultimate increase of £50 per annum to the cost of inspection.

Office of National Education,
Dublin, 23rd January, 1865.

SIR,—The Commissioners of National Education have had before them your letter of the 10th inst., referring to the estimate for National Education in Ireland for the year 1865-6, and requesting some further explanations on points contained therein for the consideration of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant.

The Commissioners, accordingly, have directed us to submit the following statement in explanation of the several points to which His Excellency has called their attention:—

* * * * * *

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

The Commissioners, before making an appointment to Glasnevin, consequent on the resignation of Dr. Kirkpatrick, not only instituted a searching inquiry into the entire past working of the department, but fully considered also what arrangements should be adopted for its future management; and it was only as the result of the most mature deliberation they came to the conclusion that such an appointment was absolutely required. It will be seen that there is a decrease on the whole in the estimate to the amount of £264, under the head of the agricultural department; and in regard to the entire changes, at least the principal of them, recently adopted, as consequent on the retirement of Dr. Kirkpatrick, a not inconsiderable economy has been effected, as will be seen from the following table:—

ESTIMATE FOR 1865-6.

The Commissioners have further to request that it will be borne in mind that, within the last eight years, they have reduced the estimate for agricultural education from a sum little less than £10,000 to a sum of little more than £5,000.

Constitution and Rules of the Board of Commissioners of National Education.

No. 1.—Copy of Memorandum sent to the Most Rev. Dr. Murray, explanatory of what took place at the Conference (from which he was unavoidably absent) between the Commissioners and a Deputation from the Synod of Ulster, in presence of the Lord Lieutenant, in February, 1840.

Extract from the Minutes of the Proceedings of the Commissioners of National Education, on Thursday, 13th February, 1840.

Present:

Duke of Leinster.	Right Hon. A. R. Blake.	Alex. Macdonnell, esq.
Archbishop of Dublin.	Robert Holmes, esq.	J. R. Corballis, esq.
Most Rev. Dr. Murray.	Rt. Hon. Sir P. Bellew, bart.	Rt. Hon. the Lord Chancellor.
The Provost.	Rev. P. S. Henry.

Read,

Copy of a Memorandum sent by the Secretaries to the Most Rev. Dr. Murray, explanatory of what took place at the Conference (from which he was unavoidably absent through illness) between the Commissioners and the Deputation from the Synod of Ulster, in presence of the Lord Lieutenant.

At the conference between the Commissioners and the gentlemen of the Synod of Ulster, in presence of the Lord Lieutenant, it was neither proposed nor hinted at that there should be any change in the Rules of the Board. Had any such proposal been made the Commissioners would not have entertained it in Dr. Murray's absence.

Wishing to avoid all abstract discussions the Commissioners suggested that an application for aid to any given school should be made to them with a distinct statement of the rules by which the school was managed, in order to enable them to see whether the management was consistent with their principles; this was done, and the statement being satisfactory, and it appearing in particular that the school was managed by a committee appointed by the parents of the children, and therefore, that the parents were assenting to the practice as to religious instruction, the Commissioners authorized a grant of salary.

It may be observed that the practice as to religious instruction in the school is in substance mutatis mutandis, similar to that in many schools under the direction of Roman Catholics. It is to be observed, too, that the grant is only of salary and books. In making such grants the Board acts upon the statement of the parties applying, provided it be satisfactory, without binding them literally to the Rules of the Board, because should anything occur hereafter which might appear contrary to the spirit of the Rules, the Board has it in its power to have the evil corrected or to withdraw the salary; but in making a grant towards building, as the Commissioners make it irrevocably, they require the parties receiving it to bind themselves irrevocably in return to a strict observance of the Rules as in force at the time the grant is made, and to have the school vested in trustees for that purpose.

No. 2.—Memorandum showing how each of the Suggestions from Government, arising out of the Parliamentary Inquiry of 1854, was disposed of; also Copy of Letter, for the Lord Lieutenant's information, of 3rd May, 1855, which accompanied it.

Education Office, 3rd May, 1855.

Sir,—We are directed by the Commissioners of National Education to request you will state for the information of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant that, at the conclusion of the inquiry last year before a select Committee of the House of Lords into the practical working of the system of National Education in Ireland, a series of suggestions was forwarded by Earl Granville through the Lord Lieutenant for the consideration of the Commissioners.* The first of those suggestions was to the effect—

"That the Rules of the Board shall be revised, with the view of rendering them perfectly clear, full, and explicit, with regard to the fundamental principles of the system; and that the Commissioners should submit to the Lord Lieutenant, for his consideration and sanction, the alterations, omissions, or additions which may appear to be necessary."

In order that the wishes of the Government might be carried out, the Commissioners deemed it expedient to appoint a Committee, consisting of six members of the Board, to examine the Rules, with instructions to report if any and what emendations should be made therein; and also to consider and report upon the other suggestions transmitted by the Government.

The Commissioners having received the Report of the Committee, have embodied in a new edition of their Rules, such additions and alterations as seemed to them desirable.

We have the honour to forward, by the direction of the Commissioners, copies of the existing Rules, and of the Rules as revised by the Commissioners and approved by a majority of the Board; and, in accordance with their instructions, we are to call the attention of His Excellency to such of the Rules as have been altered or modified, or are entirely new.

We also transmit, for His Excellency's perusal, documents numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5, stating the grounds upon which certain members of the Board disapprove of particular Rules.

* Those "Suggestions" and their history will be found in Vol. I., General Report, Part I., Historical Sketch, page 146 et seqq.

In addition, we enclose a copy of the "suggestions" to which we have referred, with a memorandum explaining the manner in which each has been dealt with by the Commissioners.

The following are the observations we are directed to make with respect to the revised Rules:—

Part I.

Object and Fundamental Principle of the System of National Education.

Sec. I.—Par. 1, sets forth for the first time in the Rules the object and fundamental principle of the System of National Education.

Sec. I.—Par. 4.—This was always understood and acted upon, but is now embodied in the Rules for the first time.

Sec. II.—The whole of this section is explanatory of what has been the practice of the Commissioners, but is now for the first time set forth in the Rules.

Sec. III.—This section affords a more accurate and detailed description of the schools to which the Commissioners grant aid than is in the old Rules.

Sec. IV.—Par. 11 explains more fully the Rule as to the Reading of the Scriptures than is expressed in the old Rules.

Pars. 12 and 13 explain more fully than in the old Rules the circumstances under which religious instruction may take place at an intermediate time, and prescribes the limitations.

Par. 14 embodies in a distinct rule, for the first time, what has been the practice in the National schools.

Pars. 16, 17, and 18 are altogether new Rules.

Sec. V.—Par. 1.—A revival of the old Rule of the Board with regard to non-vested school-houses, but which was departed from, from the time the Commissioners required all school-houses to be used exclusively for educational purposes.

Pars. 2, 3, and 4.—Regulations of the Board on the points referred to more clearly stated than in the old Rules.

Par. 5.—The distinction between vested and non-vested school-houses as to the use of the rooms on Sundays, &c., for the first time explained.

Sec. VI.—Par. 6.—The practice as to the use of the tablet containing the Ten Commandments for the first time embodied in the Rules.

Par. 7 contains an explanation of the views of the Board for the first time embodied in the Rules.

Sec. VII.—Par. 2.—Embodied in the Rules for the first time.

Sec. VIII.—Par. 3 & 4 always the Rule, but now for the first time declared in the Rules.

Secs. 9 & 10 contain the Rules more explicitly stated.

Par. II.—The whole of Part II., with the exception of Section IX., is a description of the different classes of schools, and of the conditions upon which they are established or received into connexion.

Sec. IX.—Convent Schools.—Explains for the first time the regulations and conditions upon which this class of schools is aided.

Part III. of the Rules is in preparation, and contains merely the classification and salaries of teachers, monitors, &c., conditions upon which aid is granted, and other matters of detail; but the Commissioners have resolved to annex, to this part of the Rules, a complete list of all the books published, or sanctioned, by them for the use of the National schools, to which the following important declaration is to be appended.

The Commissioners will not withdraw, or essentially alter, any book that has been or shall be hereafter unanimously adopted and published by them, without a previous communication with the Lord Lieutenant.

When the Lord Lieutenant shall have had sufficient time to peruse the documents, now submitted to him, the Right Honorable Alexander Macdonnell will, as requested by the Commissioners, wait upon His Excellency at such time as he may be pleased to appoint, for the purpose of affording such further explanation regarding the Rules as His Excellency may deem necessary.

We are to add, that, should His Excellency desire to confer with any other members of the Board on the subject, they will be prepared to comply with his wishes.

We have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servants,

(Signed), Maurice Cross, James Kelly, } Secretaries.

8. First Part.—See the observations on this point in the accompanying letter to the Lord Lieutenant. Second Part.—See rules, § I., par. 4.
9. A new form of lease adapted to the revised rules is in preparation.
10. Embodied in revised Rules, § VI., p. 6.
11. The Commissioners, after full consideration, do not think it expedient to adopt this suggestion.
12. The Commissioners are not prepared to adopt this suggestion at present.
13. To be acted upon to a limited extent. Schools referred to not to be necessarily confined to the poorest localities.
14. See Rules as to convent schools, Part II., § IX.
15. Commissioners do not consider it expedient to lay down any fixed Rule on this subject, but that they should be guided in their judgment by the circumstances of each case.
16. The principle of this suggestion approved—details for carrying out will be considered.
17. The question of local contributions will require long and mature consideration; the Commissioners are desirous of requiring (if practicable) a larger amount to be contributed, and will be prepared to report on the subject in the course of the year.
18. The number of Inspectors has been increased from 44 to 50. The salaries have been augmented, and they have been divided into classes, according to their services and merits. The latter part of the suggestion, in reference to the removal of incompetent Inspectors, has not yet been acted upon.
19. The Commissioners consider that a scheme for the superannuation of teachers would not receive the sanction of Government unless based on the principle of local contribution. In the present condition of the National teachers of Ireland, the Commissioners deem this impracticable—it is their intention to act upon the suggestion of giving gratuities, and have included a sum for the purpose in the Estimate for the year 1855–6.

21. Adopted.
22. Arrangements in progress for the re-organization of the official department, and when completed, an application will be made to the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury in accordance with the suggestion.
23. Adopted; a sum of £20,000 included in the Estimate in order to carry out the suggestion.
24. Approved; details of the plan not yet fully prepared.
25. Approved, but cannot be carried into effect until the buildings for the intended literary training establishment at Glasnevin be erected.
26. One additional Agricultural Sub-Inspector has been appointed.

No. 3.—Application to the Commissioners of National Education for Aid towards Payment of Teacher's Salary, and for Supply of Requisites for Kells Infants' School, County of Meath, in the Barony of Upper Kells, Parish and Townland of Kells, dated 4th September, 1847.

Kells Infant School.

This school is in the post-town of Kells. The school-house stands in an enclosed yard on the Carrick-green. It consists of one room, forty feet long by eighteen. It is in good repair, except a gutter in the roof from which the lead has been repeatedly stolen, as often as it has been repaired. It is now about to be repaired with cast metal. The school-room is furnished with a gallery, forms, &c.

The teacher's name is Annabella Fitzgerald, aged about twenty-four, trained in 1846 at the training school of the Home and Colonial Infant School Society, Gray's Inn-road, London, to which she was sent for the purpose by the applicant.

The average daily attendance at present is thirty-six. Males and females are not distinguished in an infant school.

School-hours from ten to three.

There is not any special religious instruction. The teacher occasionally endeavours in familiar conversation to direct their minds to God—to give them some idea of His power and goodness—and to engage their affections by telling them of the love shown by our Saviour Christ to little children. They are taught to repeat His words, "Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not;" and such other words of His for like purposes. Beyond this, the religious instruction of infants cannot extend. It never can become controversial; may it never become a subject of controversy.

The books used are those of the Home and Colonial Infant School Society.

Visitors are willingly admitted at all times. The school is under the sole direction of the Archdeacon of Meath, who would be the correspondent.

The teacher having been sent to London, and trained there at the sole expense of the Archdeacon, is under engagement to teach his school for three years, at a salary of £25 per annum, and her lodgings for which the Archdeacon also pays. He would be glad to increase her salary if in his power, as she is a very deserving person.

It is proposed to have in this school as paid monitor a girl selected from the parochial school for aptness in teaching, with a view to her being brought up as an Infant school teacher.

(Signed) Edward A. Stopford,
Sept. 4th, 1847. Archdeacon of Meath.

No. 4.—Minute of Board, dated 26th February, 1867, explanatory of the new Rule as to attendance of Pupils of National Schools at Religious Instruction—(Part I., Section IV., Rule 15.)*

The object of the Rule is more fully to carry out the general principle of the Board, that no child is to receive any religious instruction contrary to the wishes of its parent.

Accordingly the Rule first provides for the case where the teacher is a Protestant, and the child a Roman Catholic, or vice versâ. In this case the dissent of the parent is implied, and no religious instruction can be given to a child by a teacher of the different creed, unless the parent expressly requests it.

But where the teacher and the child are both Protestants, whether of the same or of a different denomination, the dissent of the parent will not be implied. In this case religious instruction may be given to the child unless the parent expressly forbids it.

In each case, however, the assent or dissent, whether implied or expressed, may be modified by an entry duly signed by the parent in the certificate book of religious instruction.

Cases may occur in which the conduct of the teacher, although not coming within the strict letter of the new Rule, is obviously contrary to the general spirit of the National system. As for instance, if instruction should be given in the Catechism or Creed of a different persuasion from that of the child.

No. 5.—Minute of Board of 9th March, 1869, directing addition of explanatory note to the new Rule as to attendance of Pupils of National Schools at Religious Instruction—(Part I., Section IV., Rule 15.)*

That a note be added to the words contained in the parenthesis (page 4) after the word "guardian," in the next edition of the Rules of the Board.

The note to be introduced by the words—

"As some doubts have arisen as to the interpretation of the rule, attention is requested to the following minute of the Board dated 26th February, 1867."

The object of the rule is more fully to carry out the general principle of the Board, that no child is to receive any religious instruction contrary to the wishes of its parent. Accordingly, the rule first provides for the case where the teacher is a Protestant and the child a Roman Catholic, or vice versa. In this case the dissent of the parent is implied. and no religious instruction can be given to a child by a teacher of the different creed unless the parent expressly requests it.

But where the teacher and the child are both Protestants, whether of the same or of a different denomination, the dissent of the parent will not be implied. In this case the religious instruction may be given to the child unless the parent expressly forbids it. In each case, however, the assent or dissent, whether implied or expressed, may be modified by an entry duly signed by the parent in the certificate book of religious instruction.

Cases may occur in which the conduct of the teacher, although not coming within the strict letter of the new rule, is obviously contrary to the general spirit of the National system; as, for instance, if instruction should be given in the catechism or creed of a different persuasion from that of the child.

* See National Board Returns, section I., paragraphs 10, 11; pages 17, 18, and 30. For the Rule itself see Vol. I., Appendix.

SECTION III.

No. 6.—Letter from Secretaries of National Board in answer to a request for "Copies of the Tabulated Results of the Examinations of Teachers held by the Professors of the Training Department during the years 1867, 1868, 1869, officially furnished to the Commissioners, and according to which the Teachers are classified."

10th December, 1869.

In answer to your letter of the 2nd instant, we are to state that no tabulated results of the examination of teachers by the Professors are submitted to the Board.

The Professors, when classifying teachers, sit together and compare their notes of the answering of the teachers, discussing also the natural aptitude of each for his office, and his past career as a servant of the Board.

It is clear that elements enter into the consideration of each case that could not be tabulated.

The Professors can, if required, furnish from their notes tabulations of the literary results for the years referred to, but this work would occupy them for at least one fortnight, and could not be entered upon before Christmas.

No. 7.—Return of Tenure, &c., of Male and Female Boarding Houses in connexion with the Central Training Establishment.

I.—Male Training Establishment, North Great George's-street.

Tenure—The lives of the Queen and His Royal Highness Prince Albert, or thirty-one years from 1st August, 1844, with a clause of surrender every third year. Rent, £80 a year; gale days, 1st August and 1st February.

II.—Female Training Establishment, Talbot-street.

Tenure—Eight hundred years from 25th March, 1846. Ground rent £50 1*s.* a year; gale days, 25th March and 29th September.

The building was erected by the Commissioners of National Education.

No. 8.—Memorandum on the Training Department, by Professor Butler.

1. Object of the Training Institution.—The Central Normal Establishment has been provided for—

(a.) Training teachers; and
(b.) Educating persons who are intended to have charge of schools.

The distinction between these two classes should be more clearly defined in the training course than has been done hitherto, both as to business and time in training.

For this purpose the students in training should be divided into—

(I.) A teachers' class,
(II.) A candidates' class;

the former to consist of actual teachers of schools, principals or assistants; the latter of pupil-teachers and paid monitors who have completed their course in a satisfactory manner, and of other young persons of suitable age and qualifications who purpose becoming teachers of schools.

2. Two courses of five months for teachers.—For the Teachers' class, a five months' course, as at present, should be provided. Considering the difficulties teachers experience in obtaining proper substitutes, the family discomforts and pecuniary losses many of them have to submit to during the short period they now remain in the training establishment, and the detriment their schools suffer during their absence, to prolong for this class the course of training would be to exclude many from ever becoming practically acquainted with the improved methods of teaching, with the best plans of school organization and management, and thereby retard for many years the progress of a very large number of schools.

One course of ten months for candidates.—For the candidates' class, on the other hand, the course may properly and most beneficially be extended over a period of ten months. The objections which can be urged against a long course of training in the case of actual teachers of schools, will not apply to the young persons included in this class, who will be free from the responsibilities of a school or cares of a family, and to whom a year's residence under instruction will be unattended with any drawback.

3. Numbers in training.—With the accommodation at present available in the training establishment, the numbers of males and females in each class might be as follows:—

	Males.	Females.
Teachers' class (five months,)	70	50
Candidates' class (ten months)—
Pupil teachers and paid monitors, 25	40	15 — 25
Others, 15		10

There would thus be 240 teachers (140 males and 100 females) trained each year, besides 65 candidates (40 males and 25 females).

4. Selection of persons for training.—The teachers, pupil-teachers, and paid monitors should be recommended as heretofore by the Head and District Inspectors. The other places in the candidates' class (15 males and 10 females) should be filled by competitive examination among young persons recommended by the Inspectors or local Patrons.

5. Instruction given in the Training Institution.—In a letter addressed to the Professors on the 23rd January, 1847, the Commissioners direct that the Professors "take into mature consideration what alterations it may be necessary to adopt, in order to abridge and simplify the course of instruction for teachers in training, in order that their attention may be principally devoted to those branches which are most essential to an efficient performance of the duties devolving upon them, as teachers of the poorer classes."

The main guiding principle by which the amount and kind of instruction to be imparted in the Training Department should be determined, is here most distinctly defined; and the subjects most essential to teachers of primary schools are easily singled out.

6. Mode of Instruction.—The mode in which this instruction is to be communicated must depend upon the attainments of the persons under training, and their capability of receiving and retaining the instruction which is given to them.

Of those who come to the Central Normal Institution it can be said that they have not acquired those habits of thought, or that amount of mental discipline, which are necessary for the retention and digestion of the instruction delivered to them by lectures. For most of them the food should be broken up, and given out bit by bit; every step and detail should be gone over several times by each; the teaching, in word, must be of an individual, personal, tutorial character, and not professorial. Grinders, and not professors are required for the due performance of this work.

Another point which must be kept in view, is that the attainments of the persons in training are so widely different in degree, that it is all but impossible to adapt the lectures to the capacities of the hearers. If it is of so elementary a character as to be within the grasp of the less advanced, much valuable time is lost by the more forward pupils; if, on the other hand, it aims at instructing the latter, the former are discouraged, lose all hope of success, and every interest in the business.

These considerations point to a sub-division of the classes in training into small sections, as the great desideratum at present required. If it were introduced, persons of nearly equal attainments would be grouped together, and worked on step by step from the precise stage they have reached; the progress of each group would be steady and continuous; no one would be unnecessarily delayed by the shortcomings of his neighbour; and all would acquire a better grounded and more thorough mastery of the subject.

Not that lectures should be wholly superseded; they will always be found of great use in breaking new ground, or in summing up and grouping the results at the end of the journey; but the interval should be filled up, and the actual inculcation and practical acquisition of the matter to be learned should be affected by individual teaching, by grinding as it is called.

As an additional reason for this individual teaching in preference to the professorial, it may be urged that most of the branches of primary importance to teachers of schools for the poorer classes cannot be thoroughly taught by lecture—for instance, spelling; English grammar, and composition; geography, arithmetic, and mensuration, &c. Most of those admitted to the training establishment have no doubt acquired a fair knowledge of these branches, but it is rather a school-boy's knowledge than the accurate, well-grounded, practical knowledge which will render their teaching effective. In one point, however, the deficiency is very great, namely in English composition, and in this respect no permanent improvement can be expected, except by frequent written exercises, carefully corrected and re-written.

7. Staff required.—To carry out in the Central Normal Institution the views put forth in this paper, there would be required—Two Heads, or Superintendents, or Professors (one Protestant and one Catholic), and seven first-class teachers (four males and three females).

The Superintendents or Heads would have the general superintendence of the Training establishments and Central Model Schools, and the direction and control of the instruction given to the persons in training. They would give the requisite lectures, appoint the work to be done in the several sections by the Training Teachers under them, watch over and take part in the instruction of the different classes.

The Head Teachers of the Central model schools would continue as heretofore, to give lessons on school organization and management, and to have the care and supervision of the students in training while engaged in the schools in the practice of teaching. Two hours on each Monday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday are now spent by each teacher in training in this way, and the arrangements introduced in this course are such that every teacher is present in the model schools, and takes part in the business carried on there, eight days in each month, instead of eight hours a month as in previous courses.

The instruction in agriculture, drawing, music, household economy, and needlework would continue as at present.

Should the Board at any future time deem it desirable to have externs, or to increase the accommodation for interns, all that would be required in the literary department would be an additional first-class teacher for every 25 persons added to the number specified in the 3rd paragraph.

No reference is made in this paper to the special class. I would propose that it cease to exist on its present footing, and be merged with the candidates' class, from which a larger supply of equally well qualified teachers would be forthcoming.

SECTION IV.

District and Minor Model Schools.

No. 9.—CIRCULAR to HEAD INSPECTORS asking their opinion upon the Suggestion to erect Ordinary National Schools without LOCAL AID in Poor Localities.

PRIVATE AND CONFIDENTIAL.—MEM.

Circular to Head Inspectors.

Education Office,
4th October, 1854.

SIR.—The following suggestion has been referred to the Commissioners for consideration:—

"That the Commissioners be empowered to build a limited number of Ordinary National Schools in the poorest localities in Ireland in which local subscriptions cannot be raised, at the entire expense of the State, not to exceed Four hundred pounds each; these schools to exhibit the best specimens of what good Ordinary National schools should be. They are to be under the exclusive control of the Commissioners, who shall have power to appoint the teachers, &c., and in cases wherever it is practicable, to appoint Committees composed of Protestants and Roman Catholics to visit and superintend them, under the direction of the Board."

You are requested to report, with as little delay as possible, your opinion upon the three points embodied in the suggestion, and whether you think it desirable that in rural districts, Agricultural or other Industrial Instruction should be engrafted upon the ordinary course of instruction.

You will head your reply "Schools to be built at the sole expense of the State," and divide it into distinct paragraphs or portions corresponding with the number of subjects upon which your opinion is requested.

We are, sir,
Your obedient servants,

(Signed), M. CROSS, J. KELLY, } Secretaries.

Answer of Head-Inspector Kavanagh (1854).

Schools to be built at the sole Expense of the State.

Reply to Circular thereon, 4/10/54.

I approve of the suggestion, and recommend its adoption. I fear, however, great difficulties lie against the practical working of the scheme.

The poorest, most neglected, and most ignorant tract in Ireland is that from ten to twenty miles in breadth lying along the sea-board from Donegal to Kinsale, and with the exception of the few to be found in towns, and those that are grouped round three or four Protestant Missionary Stations, there is no Protestant or mixed population in all that tract. School committees consisting of Protestants and Roman Catholics are therefore impracticable in that district of country.

I fear that the charge preferred by Archdeacon Stopford and many other Protestant clergymen, and also in connexion with the district and other Model schools by many of the Roman Catholic clergy, that the design of the Board is gradually to supersede the non-vested schools, and the local management generally, and establish instead schools of this character under their own exclusive direction. I fear this charge will be revived on the publication of the proposed scheme. I apprehend also that in that province which most requires these schools, the Roman Catholic Bishops would never permit the attendance of the youth of their Church at them unless they were secured some voice in the appointment or approval of teachers, or some veto in the removal of those which they might see cause to disapprove.

The addition of needlework and other industrial branches for females, and of a small farm (not over six acres) to each boys' school, would be very decided advantages.

No. 10.—Copies of the Order of December, 1863, for the Reduction of the Staff in the Model Schools, and of all Correspondence of Inspectors and others in reference thereto.

Circular.—To Inspectors.

Education Office, 20th Nov., 1863.

Sir,—Before proceeding to recommend the appointment of a pupil-teacher or paid monitor to any vacancy that may occur in any model school under your charge, you are to communicate with this office, in order to ascertain if the Commissioners will be prepared to consider your recommendation.

In the course of a few days you will receive information as to the reduced staff, for which alone the Commissioners contemplate making provision in their estimate for the year 1864-5, in the model schools under your charge.

We are, sir, your very obedient servants,

(Signed), James Kelly, William M'Creedy, } Secretaries.

B.O., 27/11/'63.

Derry District Model School.

Education Office, 8th Dec., 1863.

Sir,—We are directed to inform you that the Commissioners have estimated for a staff as given below, for this model school, for the year 1864-5.

Male Department.—1 principal—4 assistants—9 pupil-teachers—1 monitor.

Female Department.—1 principal—2 assistants—1 pupil-teacher—4 monitors.

Infant Department.—1 principal—2 assistants—2 monitors.

You will observe that this will involve a reduction in the male department of one assistant and three pupil-teachers; in the female department of one assistant, and two monitors, and in the infant department of one monitor.

It is not intended that the reduction should be effected until 1st April next, but that it should be made gradually. You will therefore be careful not to recommend any new appointments until the staff shall have fallen below that estimated for by the Commissioners.

The teacher of music is to continue his services as usual.

We are, sir, your obedient servants,

(Signed), James Kelly, William M'Creedy, } Secretaries.

BAILIEBOROUGH MODEL SCHOOL.

Bailieborough, 2nd April, 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—In accordance with the instructions contained in your circular of yesterday's date, I beg to furnish names, &c., of the assistants, monitors, and pupil-teachers in the Bailieborough Model School.

* * * * * *

Two of the monitresses attend each month in rotation in the infant department. There is no workmistress employed in the establishment.

It will be seen from the above table that in the male department the staff has been already reduced to the number set forth in your letter of 9th December last. In the female and infants' departments combined there remain two monitresses more than the number there allowed. There has been already, however, a reduction of two in the staff of monitresses; and I would respectfully urge that any further reduction at present would in all probability prove very injurious to the interests of the school. The reduction proposed in the male department is most reasonable and judicious, and I would not suggest the slightest department from it; and in the female department the loss of the two monitresses already off the list can be borne without serious inconvenience; but any further diminution of the numbers would very much weaken the teaching staff, while at the same time it would lessen the prestige of the school, and have the effect of removing a number of the best girls in the advanced classes, who are preparing for the office of teacher, and have some hopes of a preliminary training as monitresses. In this respect the model school has been extremely successful, and the teachers trained in it have uniformly done credit to the institution, and in consequence it has attained a high reputation in the locality. And I am the more induced to urge this matter on the consideration of the Commissioners as the model school is in all respects working most successfully, enjoying the confidence of the parents and clergy of all denominations, and steadily rising in the estimation of all who know it; so that it would be much to be regretted that from any cause which could be avoided its usefulness should be impaired. Were it not that I am convinced that such a result would follow from any further reduction, I would not take it upon me to state my views at such length. I am disposed, however, to hope that, from the considerations stated, the Commissioners will allow matters to remain in their present position.

Should this, however, be not granted, I would suggest that the two monitresses highest in the list should be removed, as they have already derived the greatest amount of benefit from the institution, and as their removal would leave the balance as to religious denomination in its regular state, viz., half of the entire number Roman Catholics, and the other half equally composed of Presbyterians and members of the Established Church. And in case the removal of these two monitresses should be decided on, I would respectfully suggest that they be allowed to remain until the next course of training in the normal establishment, and be permitted, if disposed, then to join the general class.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed), WILLIAM BOLE, District Inspector.

The Secretaries, Education Office, Dublin.

DISTRICT MODEL SCHOOLS.

Enniscorthy, 2nd April, 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your circular, dated the 1st instant, I beg to enclose the required return relative to the teaching staff in above schools.

Although deeply interested in the welfare of the schools, yet having lately expressed my opinions at some length, in a joint letter with Head Inspector Hunter, on the subject of applying to these the Board's Order, dated 27/11/63. I do not now feel it my duty to make any further remark. In compliance with the instructions for reducing the staff I append the following names of persons for removal:—

Robert Jones, P. Diss., Pupil-teacher.
James Horan, R.C., ditto.
Sarah Madigan, R.C., Paid Monitor.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed), C. W. DUGAN, District Inspector, 50.

The Secretaries, Office of National Education.

OMAGH MINOR MODEL SCHOOL.

Omagh, 2nd April, 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—As directed by your letter of yesterday's date, I forward the following return of assistant teachers, pupil-teachers, and monitors in the Omagh Model School on 31st ultimo :—

There is no workmistress in the school, nor is there anyone, except the mistress, attached to the infant school solely. The monitresses assist in that school in turn—two at a time.

Two pupil-teachers (one male and one female) and one monitor have now to retire in order to reduce the staff to the numbers sanctioned by B.O., 27/11/1863.

I recommend that those to retire be Henry Armstrong, Eliza J. Hamilton, and Bernard Kenning.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

SAMUEL ADAIR, District Inspector.

The Secretaries, Education Office, Dublin.

PARSONSTOWN MODEL SCHOOL.—REDUCTION OF STAFF.

Parsonstown, 2nd April, 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your circular of yesterday's date, I forward herewith a return of the assistants, pupil-teachers, and paid monitors in Parsonstown Model School.

To carry out the reduction of the staff, as laid down in your letter of 9th December, 1863, the only changes necessary will be the removal of the assistant in the infant school, and of the paid monitors in the boys' school.

By the removal of the assistant in the infant school, the only Presbyterian teacher in the establishment will be taken away ; and there is no Presbyterian pupil whom I could recommend for appointment either as pupil-teacher or paid monitor.

Instead of attaching a paid monitress permanently to the infant school, I propose that the monitresses in the girls' schools shall attend it by turns.

I beg most strongly to recommend that the paid monitor in the boys' school may not be removed. He is a very promising lad, whom I selected from a country school as likely to become, under superior training, a highly efficient teacher. His father, a struggling small farmer, undertook to provide for his support while attending the model school, the salary of a monitor being quite insufficient for that purpose, and has done so for the last ten months ; and I feel it would be a great hardship now to send him away, especially as he is going on well. I trust, therefore, that he can be retained, and he will soon be absorbed into the regular staff.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

(Signed), M. FITZGERALD, District Inspector.

District 53.

CLONMEL MODEL SCHOOL.

Clonmel, 4th April, 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—Accompanying this letter you will find a list of the staff of teachers, in the above-named school, in compliance with your instructions of 1st April instant.

With a view to a reduction of the staff of teachers, as directed in your letter of 9/12/'63, I beg to recommend that Timothy Beary (pupil-teacher), and Kate Dilleava, and Anastatia Smyth, P.M., be removed from the service from 1st April, 1864.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed), JOHN C. LANE, District Inspector, 53.

The Secretaries, Education Office.

MONAGHAN MODEL SCHOOL.

Monaghan, 17th Dec., 1863.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of yesterday's date, declining to accede to a recommendation made by the Head and Acting Inspectors some time since, for the continuance of John W. Kernaghan, as pupil-teacher, and the appointment of Annie Murphy as monitress in this establishment. In reference thereto, I take the liberty of reminding you that John Kernaghan has now been acting for nearly six months as pupil-teacher, without receiving any remuneration for his services, and that he has been led to believe all through this time that he would be paid, as no fear was entertained that the usual recommendation for continuance for a second year would be refused. As it would not be fair to avail ourselves of his services for so long a period without payment, I hope you will be good enough to reconsider the matter, and have him continued for at least six or nine months from the first of July last, when his first year of office terminated. The only pupil-teacher at present recognised in the male school, will leave on the 1st January next, having been summoned to the training class that assembles on the 15th of that month, and one of the monitors now in office, will resign on the same date, for the purpose of emigrating to another country. It will, therefore, follow that on the 1st ultimo, even allowing that Kernaghan be continued, the staff in that department will not exceed the number which you intend to allow from the 1st of April next. It seems to me that, considering those circumstances, you will not find any objection to the continuance of Kernaghan.

With regard to the appointment of Annie Murphy, as monitress, it is exceedingly important that it should be sanctioned, for her services are very much required, not only for assisting in the literary, but also and still more in the religious instruction. On the present staff of six monitresses, in the female and infant schools, there is but one Roman Catholic, and as the principal teachers of both departments are Protestants, one monitress is not sufficient at religious instruction time. In the reduced staff, from the 1st April, you allow one female pupil-teacher at £20 a year, and four monitresses. At present there is no pupil-teacher recognised, but a recommendation has (I believe) been made for the promotion to that office of one of the present monitresses, B. Collins. I beg leave now to recommend that this appointment be not made, but, that instead of having a pupil-teacher and four monitresses for these two departments, we be permitted to have seven monitresses, a staff that will comprise all those now in office, and Annie Murphy, in addition, whose appointment has been recommended. As the salaries of three monitresses (£18) are in amount less than that of one pupil-teacher, and as a monitress is fully as useful as a pupil-teacher, I trust you will see no objection to this course being followed, and that you will, accordingly, have Annie Murphy's appointment confirmed.

Should you consider a staff of seven, allowing for the substitution of monitresses for a pupil-teacher, as still too great, it can be reduced to six in April next, when the period of service of one of the present monitresses will expire.

I remain, gentlemen, your very obedient servant,

(Signed), JOHN DOWLING, District Inspector.

ENNISCORTHY DISTRICT MODEL SCHOOL.

26th December, 1863.

GENTLEMEN,—Bearing in mind the difficulties, both of a local and general nature which the above schools have had to bear up against and still continue to struggle with, we feel bound to recommend that, at least until a further trial be given, it be exempt from the operation of the Board's order, dated 27/11/'63.

These schools, subject as they are to a most energetic and, we must say, unscrupulous opposition, to which they owe their present comparative want of success, are now perhaps at a sort of crisis or turning point, a reaction in their favour being probable; and we feel that any sign of weakness from within, any diminution in the present staff of teachers, whose faithfulness and ability are beginning to be felt and recognised, must be not only prejudicial, but may absolutely destroy their future successful existence.

But upon other grounds we respectfully urge that the teaching body in these schools ought not to be reduced. We apprehend that the reduction contemplated in the Board's order of 27/11/'63 is based upon the comparatively small attendance; but the condition as to attendance, although applicable to ordinary National schools, may not be so decisive as regards model schools, which are essentially normal schools, primarily constituted for training young persons to fill the positions of faithful and efficient teachers under the Board.

This end can be pretty well attained, even where the attendance of pupils is comparatively small, and we venture to suggest that for the outlay upon the entire institution under present circumstances the public can receive no better return than in the annual preparation and sending forth of a number of young persons, trusty and well-trained, to take charge of the schools of the country.

At all events, if it is intended to keep these schools open, and if it is considered that they have been unsuccessful in the sense of ordinary National schools, the only way to supplement this want of success will be to make them as much as possible normal schools, and consequently for this end to attach to them as many monitors and pupil-teachers as can be trained efficiently.

Even under the present adverse circumstances we believe that the Enniscorthy Model Schools are competent to carry out this view in regard to the number of young persons now within its walls for training, and so impressed were we with these convictions that until the issue of the Board's order referred to, it was our intention to recommend the appointment of even an additional number.

We have the honour to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servants,

(Signed), W. A. HUNTER, Head Inspector.
C. W. DUGAN, District Inspector.

KILKENNY DISTRICT MODEL SCHOOL.

Kilkenny, 28th Dec., 1863.

GENTLEMEN,—We beg to recommend the following appointments in Kilkenny Model School, viz., Helena Lalor, in the place of Ellen Brien, paid monitress, who resigned at the beginning of the present month; and Annie Earp, to succeed Martha Stephens, also paid monitress, who joins the Central Training Establishment on 14th January next. These appointments to date from 1st January, 1864. We have also to state that we do not intend recommending the continuance of salary to Bridget Cahill, whose period of service as paid monitress, expires on 31st January next. At 1st February next the number of paid monitresses, including those now recommended, would be one less than the present staff; and we are of opinion that a further reduction in the teaching power could not be made without detriment to these schools, especially at a time when their unquestioned efficiency alone could have enabled them to withstand an opposition so sustained and so influential.

We are, gentlemen, your obedient servants,

(Signed), W. A. HUNTER, Head Inspector.
LEWIS HARKIN, District Inspector.

The Secretaries, Education Office.

GALWAY MODEL SCHOOL.

Galway, 30th Jan., 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—In reference to your letter of the 9th December last, communicating the decision of the Commissioners to limit the number of pupil-teachers and paid monitresses of the Galway Model School to seven, and six respectively, I beg respectfully to submit for their consideration the following statement:—

The number of pupil-teachers had been, by resignation, reduced to the limited number previous to the notification of the order; but there were at that time, and there are still, one monitor and nine monitresses, some of them appointed so lately as September last, and to dispense with their services, will entail much disappointment and inconvenience. All of these young persons were under the impression that their course was to extend over four years from the date of appointment, provided their conduct was satisfactory, and they consider they have an equitable right to be retained for that period, and I think they have fair grounds for that conclusion.

I would, therefore, propose that all the present staff be retained, but that vacancies be not filled until the reduced limit be reached. I think a similar course was pursued in Britain on the introduction of the Revised Code, the Committee of Council stating that the pupil-teachers, &c., then in training, should be bound by the old regulations, and that the new arrangements should be applicable to future appointments only.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed), D. MARTIN WILSON, District Inspector.

The Secretaries, National Education Office.

District 9.

LURGAN MINOR MODEL SCHOOL.

Lurgan, 17th Feb., 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—I beg most respectfully to submit that the teaching staff of the above institution is inadequate. I speak especially of the male department. It is not as well off with regard to teachers as the ordinary National schools of the two districts, 8 and 9, with which I am at present connected.

I find that in the schools examined by me during the current term, there are one teacher and above the third of a monitor for every twenty-five pupils of the average yearly attendance. In the ordinary National schools of Lurgan alone there are one teacher and almost a monitor for every twenty-seven pupils.

Now, what is the case in the model school? Every day this week there were in attendance at the boys' school 140, for whose instruction is a staff of four teachers and one monitor, that is, a teacher, and the fourth of a monitor for thirty-five pupils.

If to what I have just stated will be added the extra labours imposed on the model school teachers in the way of judgment cards, records of pupils' answering, keeping of additional accounts, and various other items of clerking to which ordinary teachers are not subject, you will easily perceive, gentlemen, that the Lurgan Model School is not even in a fair way of competing with the ordinary National schools of the locality. The fact is, the male teachers are overwrought, and I fear that some of them will break down.

It is gratifying to have to state that from the intrinsic merits of the institution, it has grown into popularity. It owes nothing to the patronage of any parties of the local clergy, one only may be said to be friendly while some are unmistakably hostile. Yet I am not over sanguine when I say that I have no doubt the attendance of boys will be over 200 in the summer, and that the total attendance in the three departments will be fully 400. But I submit that the institution ought to be fairly prepared with a staff of pupil-teachers and monitors to do justice to itself. At present it is beholding to one male and two female monitors. Some months ago three other monitors were recommended for appointment, and though two of these recommended have been been partially engaged since January, it is not as yet known whether the appointments will be made.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your very obedient servant,

(Signed), JOHN SWEENY, Acting Inspector.

The Secretaries, N. Education Office, Dublin.

NEWTOWNARDS DISTRICT MODEL SCHOOLS.

5th April, 1864.

GENTLEMEN,—In my communication of 2nd instant, replying to your circular of 1st instant, I wrote under the pressure of your instructions, and guided by the consideration that education in the female department must fall on the Presbyterian assistants on the staff, and of these on the one last appointed, the other having the claim of seniority. Miss Moore, however, is a very meritorious, useful, and efficient teacher, and we should feel severely the loss of her services. I, therefore, beg leave respectfully to remonstrate against the proposed reduction of assistants in the female department. We shall be sufficiently crippled by the loss of two female pupil-teachers proposed to be removed, and the two monitresses. The girls' school, before the vacation at Easter, had been gradually improving in attendance, and the number now on the rolls at the re-assembling of the pupils and recommencement of business is 144 girls. This will produce an average daily attendance of something over 130 girls, and with the loss of the pupil-teachers and monitresses proposed, the principal teacher will require the full aid of the present staff of assistants to minister efficiently to the care and instruction of the pupils in attendance, who will doubtless become more numerous as the summer months approach.

I have therefore respectfully to request that you will be good enough to reconsider the contemplated reduction in this school, and allow the present staff of female assistants to remain as it is. I enclose a return of the religious denomination of the pupils on the rolls, which should appropriately have accompanied my communication of the 2nd instant.

I am, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed), A. T. OSBORNE, District Inspector.

The Secretaries, Education Office, Dublin.

Newtownards, 5th April, 1864.

Return of religious denominations of the pupils on the rolls of the Newtownards District Model School at this date, in the different departments:—

BELFAST MODEL SCHOOL.

Eden, Belfast, Aug. 17th, 1864.

SIRS,—I am desired by the Lord Bishop of Down, &c., to request that you will call the attention of the Commissioners to the fact that the staff of pupil-teachers in the above school of the Episcopalian or Established Church denomination has latterly decreased from six to two, and consequently there is the greatest inconvenience and difficulty in classifying the children for religious instruction. This matter I felt it my duty as Catechist, to bring under the notice of our very efficient Inspector more than once, and I beg to enclose his last reply.

I remain, sirs, your obedient servants,

(Signed), G. P. PAYNE,
E. C. Catechist to Belfast Model School.

The Secretaries, Education Office.

Education Office, Dublin, Sep. 12th, 1864.

SIR,—In reference to your letter of the 2nd instant, we have to inform you that for the present the Commissioners will not appoint a successor to Mr. M'Grenahan, who has resigned his situation as assistant teacher in the Galway Model School.

We remain, sir, your obedient servants,

JAMES KELLY,
WM. M'CREEDY, } Secretaries.

Alexander Simpson, esq., Inspector,
Galway.

Education Office, Dublin, Sep. 12th, 1864.

SIR,—In answer to your letter of the 2nd instant, we have to inform you that for the present the Commissioners will not appoint a successor to Mr. Grenahan, who has resigned his situation as assistant teacher in the Galway Model School.

We remain, sir, your obedient servants,

(Signed), JAMES KELLY,
WM. M'CREEDY.

William A. Hunter, esq., H. I., Dublin.

LURGAN MODEL SCHOOL.

EXTRACT FROM INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

In my last report upon this school, I urged the propriety of having another assistant appointed in it, I again take the liberty of doing so. So hard and so anxiously did Mr. Greer work for some time, he was obliged to give up and was laid in bed during a great part of my examination. The present staff is inadequate for the amount of duty to be done.

JOHN DOHERTY, Pro.

MINUTE of the BOARD, bearing date the 27th November, 1863.

OFFICE OF NATIONAL EDUCATION.

No. 12.—Examination Papers set by the Civil Service Commissioners, on the occasion of a Competitive Examination for the Office of Inspector of National Schools (Ireland), December, 1869.

For Dictation.

Queen Catherine, as we have already seen, had been called upon, at the coronation of Anne, to renounce her title, and she had refused. Mary had been similarly deprived of her rank as princess; but either her disgrace was held to be involved in that of her mother, or some other cause, perhaps the absence of immediate necessity, had postponed the demand for her own personal submission. As, however, on the publication of the second marriage, it had been urged on Catherine that there could not be two queens in England, so on the birth of the Princess Elizabeth, an analogous argument required the disinheritance of Mary. It was a hard thing; but her mother's conduct obliged the king to be peremptory. She might have been legitimatised by act of parliament, if Catherine would have submitted. The consequences of Catherine's refusal might be cruel, but they were unavoidable. Mary was not with her mother. It had been held desirable to remove her from an influence which would encourage her in a useless opposition; and she was residing in Essex, under the care of Lord Hussey and the Countess of Salisbury. Lord Hussey was a dangerous guardian; he was subsequently executed for his complicity in the Pilgrimage of Grace, the avowed object of which was the restoration of Mary to her place as heir apparent. We may believe, therefore, that while under his surveillance she experienced no severe restraint, nor received that advice with respect to her conduct which prudence would have dictated. Lord Hussey, however, for the present enjoyed the confidence of the king, and was directed to inform his charge, that for the future she was to consider herself not as princess, but as the king's natural daughter, the Lady Mary Tudor. The message was a painful one; painful, we will hope, more on her mother's account than on her own; but her answer implied that, as yet, Henry VIII. was no object of especial terror to his children.

Orthography.—Time allowed, ¾ hour.

Copy the following passage clearly and legibly, correcting mistakes in spelling, but not otherwise altering either the words or their order :—

The last kind of assurances which may propperly be classed among those by matter of reccord, are the orders of the Coart of Chancerey, and of comissioners acting under the powers given by divars moddarn acts of parlament; by vertue of which, propperty may be taken from one indeveduell and vested in another wethout any of the ordennary methads of convayence. Such are the vesting ordars made by the Coart of Chancerey under the reecint Trustee Acts. Under the urliar stattutes, having for their objeck the remoovel of the defacultees ariseing from the incappassety of infent or lunetic trustees to deal with the estates vested in them, it was usuel for the coart to derect some person to convay in their stedd; but it is now impouered simply to make ordars, the efect of which is, that the estate becomes emeedeatly vested in the substetuted trustees, as efectualy as if a convayence or asinement had been dewly made by the person preeveusly entitled to the leegal estate. The same principle has been aplied in the moddern legeslation with respect to bankrupcy and insolvancy; for where formarly a convayence of the reel estate of the bancrupt or insolvant from the comisseonars to the assinees was nesicerry, the estate (with the exeption of coppihold lands) now at once vests in the assinees by vertu of their apointmant only. The awards of the Inclosure Comisseonars, comutations of tythes by the Tythe Comisseonars, and the vaiyous procedings by which the rites and clames of parties in respect of lands are transfered, confermed, or evvedensed under the orthorraty and seal of these severall comisseons (which have now been consolledated into one) may be classed among assurances by matter of reccord. The arangemants thus made do not deppend soully on the act and consent of the parties themselves, but must be sankshund and rattefied by the comisseonars; doccumants seeled with whose common seel are reseevible in evvedance without farthur proof, and are also conclusif as to evry formallety, required for their valliddatty, having been dewly observed.

33. Multiply together $\frac{2}{3}$, $\frac{5}{7}$, $\frac{3}{4}$, $\frac{8}{11}$, $1\frac{3}{4}$, and $1\frac{4}{5}$.
34. Divide 7 by $1\frac{3}{7}$.

35. Add together 2·6 of 17*s.* 6*d.* and 3·4 of £2 5*s.* 5*d.* and give the answer in pence.
36. Subtract 5·12 of a pennyweight from 2·6 of an ounce, and express the answer as the decimal of a pound troy.
37. Multiply 700·9347 by ·09796.
38. Divide 16·3704 by 72·6 to 5 places of decimals.
39. Give the value of 7·0125 of a mile in feet.

HIGHER ARITHMETIC.—Time allowed, $2\frac{3}{4}$ hours.

1. Show that the $\sqrt{2}$ lies between $\frac{17}{12}$ and $\frac{41}{29}$.
2. Extract the cube root of 669·921875 cubic feet, and reduce the result to inches.
3. What is the present worth of £1,842 15*s.*, payable a quarter of a year hence, at 5 per cent.?
4. What length of paper $22\frac{1}{2}$ inches wide would be required to paper the walls of a room 18 ft. 9 in. long, 13 ft. 3 in. broad, and 14 ft. 6 in. high?
5. Express 4 acres 2 roods 16 perches as the decimal of a square mile.
6. Multiply by duodecimals 7 ft. 3 in. 5 pts. by 5 ft. 7 in. 4 pts. and the product by 4 ft. 2 in. What does the product become when expressed in cubic feet and inches?
7. A man purchases £700 stock in the 3 per cent. consols at $94\frac{1}{2}$, and also invests £585 in the purchase of Russian 5 per cent. stock at $97\frac{1}{2}$. How much stock has he standing in his name? If he sells out of the 3 per cents. at 95 and out of the 5 per cents. at $96\frac{1}{4}$, does he gain or lose by the transaction, and how much?
8. Divide 91·863 by 87·56.
9. A tradesman's stock in trade is valued on January 1st, 1868, at £8,000, he has also £350 in cash and owes £1,870; during the year his personal expenses, £300, are paid out of the proceeds of his business, and on January 1st, 1869, his stock is valued at £7,950, he has £570 in cash and owes £1,510. What is the whole profit on the year's transactions after deducting 5 per cent. interest on the capital with which he began the year?
10. A grocer buys coffee at the rate of £8 10*s.* per cwt. and chicory at £2 10*s.* per cwt., and mixes them in the proportion of 5 parts chicory to 7 coffee; at what rate must he sell the mixture so as to gain £16⅔ per cent. on his outlay?

11. Two clocks point to 2 o'clock at the same instant on the afternoon of Christmas-day; one loses 8 seconds, and the other gains 9 seconds in 24 hours; when will one be half an hour before the other, and what time will each clock then show?

12. Three sacks contain equal quantities of wheat, barley, and oats, and a mixture is formed by taking 60 per cent. from the 1st sack, 40 per cent. from the 2nd, and 70 per cent. from the 3rd. Find what per centage of the whole quantity of corn is taken away. A candidate being required to answer this question reasons as follows: "50 is the mean between 60 and 40, and 60 is the mean between 50 and 70, therefore 60 is the mean per centage required." Is this reasoning erroneous? If so show clearly where the error lies.

13. If the light received by an object at different distances from a candle be inversely as the squares of the distances, and a mirror reflect $\frac{4}{9}$ of the light which falls on it, at what distance from the candle must an object be placed in order to receive the same amount of light directly which it would receive by reflection from the mirror so placed that the whole distance traversed by the light is 5 feet.

(8) Let us turn his French tinsel into English gold.

3. State the arguments by which Burke respectively justifies allegiance to "Party," and deprecates the use of "Force."

4. When was the play of Othello first printed? Malone says, "We know it was first acted in 1604." Had he any, and if so, what, grounds for this assertion? Collect, yourself, all the internal evidence (1) of the date when the play was written, (2) of the time when the story is supposed by Shakespeare to have happened.

5. Show the peculiar use and significance of the introduction of the character of Roderigo in the play of Othello. Discuss Dr. Johnson's dictum that the play ought to have opened with the arrival of Othello in Cyprus.

6. What sort of character did Shakespeare intend his Brutus to be in the play of Julius Cæsar? Point out the grounds on which Coleridge was perplexed in attempting to answer this question. What defects have been found with the plot?

7. Discuss the use which Shakespeare has made of the "Supernatural" in the play of Macbeth, and illustrate it from the notions current about witchcraft in his time. With what ancient play or plays has Macbeth been compared, and on what grounds?

8. Discuss fully the following passages: state the context: suggest, whenever you think it necessary, a different reading. Explain any allusions which may be thought obscure.

(1) For if thou path, thy native semblance on,
Not Erebus itself were dim enough
To hide thee from prevention.
(2) I fetch my life and being
From men of royal siege, and my demerits
May speak unbonnetted to as proud a fortune
As this that I have reached.
(3) If this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash
For his quick hunting, stand the putting on,
I'll have our Michael Cassio on the hip.
(4) The hearts of old gave hands,
But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts.
(5) Defeat thy favour with an usurped beard.

English Literature. (2.)—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. How many editions of the Essays did Bacon himself publish? What are their respective dates? And what were the principal changes which each successive edition presented? What Essays have erroneously been assigned to Bacon?

2. Discuss the place which Bacon's Essays hold in English Literature, and contrast their merits with those of other productions of a like kind.

3. Mr. Hallam has observed with reference to the Essays: "The sentences have sometimes too apophthegmatic a form and want of coherence." Quote passages in illustration of this criticism.

4. Give as nearly as you can in Bacon's own words the substance of his Essay on Ambition.

5. Explain the meaning of the following passages :—

(1) For utility in their bond and not respects.
(2) For their merchants, they are vena porta.
(3) Some there are that know the resorts and falls of business, that cannot sink into the main of it.
(4) As musicians use to do with those that dance too long galliards.
(5) Opinion of the touch of a man's reputation doth multiply and sharpen anger.
(6) They call it the Prime.
(7) As for the philology of them, that is but a circle of tales.

6. The subject of Paradise Lost is the finest that has ever been chosen for "heroic poetry." Criticise this statement. Give, briefly, the argument of Books i., ii., iv., and quote the opening lines of the most famous passages in each book. Point out any metrical peculiarities which are to be found in them.

7. Coleridge has observed that Milton "is not a picturesque but a musical poet." Illustrate this from the various poems before you.

8. Annotate the following passages, and state where they occur :—

(1) Now had night measured with her shadowy cone
Half way up hill this vast sublunar vault.
(2) Or that starr'd Ethiop Queen that strove, &c., &c.
(3) Civil suited morn.
(4) Dewy-feathered sleep.
(5) The cynosure of neighb'ring eyes.
(6) Let Euclid rest and Archimedes pause.
(7) A book was writ of late called Tetrachordon.

9. Point out the position occupied by Pope, in the poems before us, with reference to the direction of thought prevalent in his time in religion and philosophy. Illustrate your meaning as far as you can by extracts from the Essay on Man and the Moral Essays. State briefly the arguments of the Moral Essays.

10. When was the Essay on Criticism given to the world. Name the authors mentioned in it. Quote what Pope says of Horace and of Aristotle respectively. Quote also the lines in which Pope confounds wit with judgment.

11. Point out some blunders in literary history into which Pope has fallen in the Imitation of Horace's Epistle to Augustus. What are, generally, the merits of those Imitations. Quote the passages on Chaucer and Milton respectively.

Logic.—Time allowed, 2½ hours.

1. Explain and distinguish the following terms: Abstract, concrete, universal, particular, contrary, contradictory, necessary, contingent, demonstration, probability.

2. Analyse into subject, predicate, and copula the following statements:

(a.) Virtue itself turns vice being misapplied.
(b.) No plant so vile that on the earth doth live,
But to the earth some special good doth give.
(c.) But where unbruised youth with unstuffed brain
Doth couch his limbs there golden sleep doth reign.

3. Define hypothetical and disjunctive syllogisms, and give their rules.

4. Show that the third figure must have an affirmative minor premiss and a particular conclusion; and that the fourth figure may have any premiss but O, and any conclusion but A.

5. Reduce Darii to the third and fourth figures, Fesapo to the second and third figures, Bokardo to the first and second figures.

6. Point out the fallacies, if any, in the following arguments:

(a.) Some poisons are vegetable:
no poisons are useful drugs:
therefore some useful drugs are not vegetable.
(b.) No trifling business will enrich those engaged in it:
a mining speculation is no trifling business:
therefore a mining speculation will enrich those engaged in it.
(c.) He who is content with what he has is truly rich:
a covetous man is not content with what he has:
no covetous man, therefore, is truly rich.

7. Give the connotation and denotation of the following terms: triangle, criminal, science, similarity.

POLITICAL ECONOMY.—Time allowed, 2½ hours.

1. How far does the division of labour depend upon the extent of the market?

2. What is meant by the natural and the market price of commodities? Under what circumstances do they coincide?

3. Account for the different rates of profit in the different employments of capital.

4. To what extent can the rent of land be said to be a remuneration for services performed?

5. Explain the different effects of the progress of improvement on the different sorts of rude produce.

6. Into what portions can the general stock of a country be divided?

7. Explain the circumstances which determine the rate of interest.

RHETORIC AND CRITICISM.—Time allowed, 2½ hours.

1. What are the two great classes under one or other of which, according to Whately, all arguments can be brought, and by what test can they be distinguished?

2. What is the meaning of analogy? Give illustrations of the errors which have prevailed on this point.

3. State fully Whately's rules for the arrangement of arguments. Why is it advisable to ascertain first whether the presumption is against or in favour of the proposition at issue?

4. What are the principal qualities of a good style?

5. Give instances of the use and abuse of antithesis?

6. What principles does Whately lay down for a good delivery.

7. What are the characteristics of sublimity in writing? Support your answer by illustrations.

8. Enumerate the properties which, according to Blair, are most essential to a perfect sentence.

9. What does Blair believe to be the chief characteristics of the writings of Addison, Swift, and Pope, respectively?

10. Define poetry, and give a brief sketch of the origin and progress of poetical composition.

EUCLID.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. The angles at the base of an isosceles triangle are equal to one another; and if the equal sides be produced, the angles upon the other side of the base shall be equal.

2. To a given straight ine apply a parallelogram, which shall be equal to a given triangle, and have one of its angles equal to a given rectilineal angle.

3. If a straight line be divided into equal parts, and also into two unequal parts; the rectangle contained by the unequal parts, together with the square of the line between the points of section, is equal to the square of half the line.

4. In a circle, the angle in a semicircle is a right angle; but the angle in a segment greater than a semicircle is less than a right angle; and the angle in a segment less than a semicircle is greater than a right angle.

5. About a given circle describe a triangle equiangular to a given triangle.

6. Parallelograms which have one angle of the one equal to one angle of the other, and the sides about the equal angles riciprocally proportional, are equal to one another.

7. Two circles intersect in A B, the centre of one being in the circumference of the other; if any chord ACD is drawn cutting them both, show that CB is equal to CD.

8. ABC is a triangle inscribed in a circle, DEF a diameter cutting BC at right angles in E, show that the difference of the angles at B and C is double of the angle AFD.

9. If two circles touch externally, the part of their common tangent between the points of contact is a mean proportional between the diameters.

10. If from any point in the circumference of a circle perpendiculars be drawn to the sides, or sides produced, of an inscribed triangle; show that the three points of intersection will be in the same straight line.

ALGEBRA.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. Find the sum of $(a-b)(b-c)$, $(b-c)(c-d)$, $(c-d)(d-a)$, $(d-a)(a-b)$, and $(a-b+c-d)^2$.

2. Divide—

$$3x^3y^{-3}+4xy^{-1}+2x^{-1}y-5 \text{ by } xy^{-2}+2x^{-1}+y^{-1}.$$

3. Reduce to its lowest terms—

$$\frac{36x^4-67x^2-25x+6}{24x^4-4x^3-42x^2-11x+3}.$$

4. Find the sum of—

$$\frac{a(b+c)}{(a-b)(c-a)}+\frac{b(a+c)}{(a-b)(b-c)}+\frac{c(a+b)}{(c-a)(b-c)}.$$

5. Prove that the greatest common measure of any two numbers is a common measure of their sum, and their difference. Prove also that if two numbers have no common measure, their sum and difference have no common measure greater than 2.

6. Solve the equations—

$$(\alpha)\ \frac{3}{x-3a}+\frac{2}{x+2a}=\frac{5x}{x^2+a^2}.$$

$$(\beta)\ \frac{3}{x-3a}\cdot\frac{2}{x-2a}=\frac{x}{5x^2+7a^2}.$$

$$(\gamma)\ \sqrt{x-1}+\sqrt{y-1}=y-x=3.$$

7. Extract the square root of $\frac{x^4}{4a^2}-\frac{x^3}{2a}+\frac{9x^2}{4}-2ax+4a^2$, and of $82\mp12\sqrt{42}$.

8. A walks from P to Q and back, and when he has gone 3 miles he is overtaken by B, who rides the same journey. When A has gone 3 miles further he meets B returning, and by the time A has got back to the place where he met B, B has reached P again. What is the distance from P to Q?

9. If $a:b::c:d$ prove that—

$$\sqrt{a^2+b^2}:\sqrt{c^2+d^2}::(\sqrt{a}-\sqrt{b})^2:(\sqrt{c}-\sqrt{d})^2.$$

10. Find the sum of a geometric progression when the first term, the common ratio, and the number of terms are given. The nth term of a geometric progression is m, and the mth term is n, show that the pth term is $\left(\frac{m^p n^n}{n^p m^m}\right)^{\frac{1}{n-m}}$.

11. Prove that $2x^2 - 2x + 1$ is positive for all values of x; and that $x^2 - x - 2$ is negative for all values of x between $+2$ and -1, and positive for all other values; also that $\frac{x^2 - x - 2}{2x^2 - 2x + 1}$ cannot be greater than $\frac{1}{2}$ whatever value be assigned to x, and that its greatest negative value is $-\frac{9}{2}$.

12. Given $\log_{10} 3 = \cdot 4771213$, find $\log_9 10$ and $\log_9(\cdot 01)$.

TRIGONOMETRY AND THE USE OF LOGARITHMS.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. Define the sine of an angle, and state the convention by which its algebraic sign is determined. Find all the values of θ less than two right angles which make $\sin 3\theta + \cos 3\theta = 0$.

2. In the ordinary tables the sines and cosines of angles are recorded up to 45° only: explain how those of angles up to 180° may thence be found. Show why an angle which is nearly a right angle cannot be found so accurately when its sine is given as when its cosine is given.

3. Prove the following formulæ—

(α) $\tan(A + B) = \frac{\tan A + \tan B}{1 - \tan A \cdot \tan B}$.

(β) $\sin 2A = \frac{1 - [\tan(45° - A)]^2}{1 + [\tan(45° - A)]^2}$.

(γ) $\sin 3\theta = 4 \sin\theta \cos(30° + \theta) \cos(30° - \theta)$.

4. Define the circular measure of an angle. Apply it to find the distance at which a building 50 feet wide will subtend an angle of 3′.

5. Prove that $\theta = \pm 30°$ satisfies the equation:

$$\tan(45° - \theta) + \cot(45° - \theta) = 4.$$

6. In a triangle, of which a, A, and c are given, show that $a \cos C = \pm \sqrt{a^2 - c^2 (\sin A)^2}$; and that if $$\tan\phi = \frac{a}{c \cos A}$$

$$\cos C = \frac{\pm \sqrt{\sin(\phi - A) \sin(\phi + A)}}{\sin\phi \cos A};$$ also that ϕ will always be nearer to a right angle than A.

7. A man observes the elevation of a mountain top to be 15°, and after walking 3 miles directly towards it on level ground the elevation is 18°: find his distance from the mountain.

8. Investigate the area of a triangle of which the sides are given. Find the area of a triangle of which the sides are 5, 7, and 8 chains respectively.

9. Show that the three angles of a spherical triangle are together less than six right angles, but greater than two right angles.

If A, B, C be the angles and r the radius of the sphere, show that the area of the triangle is

10. In a spherical triangle prove that the sines of the sides are proportional to the sines of the opposite angles.

11. In a right-angled spherical triangle of which C is the right angle prove $\tan\frac{c+a}{2} \cdot \tan\frac{c-a}{2} = \left(\tan\frac{b}{2}\right)^2$.

Independently of this equation, show whether $\tan\frac{c+a}{2} \tan\frac{c-a}{2}$ will be always positive; also how the right sign may be chosen for $\tan\frac{b}{2}$ as given by this equation.

PHYSICAL SCIENCE.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. Define the resultant of two forces, mass, work, velocity, and vis viva. What relation subsists between work and vis viva?

2. If a man has one pulley at his disposal for raising a weight, show how he must use it to obtain the most advantage. With four pulleys find the greatest weight that can be raised by a given power.

3. Assuming the parallelogram of forces, find the relation between two parallel forces at equilibrium on a straight lever. An oblong door lies on level ground, show whether it is easier to raise it by one end or by one side, the other end or side remaining on the ground.

4. Define gravity, specify gravity, and centre of gravity. A cylindrical bar of iron 3 feet long and $\frac{1}{4}$ an inch in diameter, and a cylinder of platinum 6 inches long and 3 inches in diameter, are fixed end to end with their axes in a straight line; find the centre of gravity of the whole; the specific gravity of platinum being 3 times that of iron.

5. Gates which have to cross a very wide span usually have the style (or upright) to which the hinges are fixed much taller than the top rail and the diagonal brace fixed to the top of it: explain on mechanical principles the use of this construction.

6. The rate of falling in vacuo is the same whatever be the weight of the falling body: explain how this statement is verified. State the law of resistance to bodies falling in air, and thence show that by reducing the diameter of a drop of water its maximum rate of falling in air may be reduced to almost any extent.

If the maximum velocity of a drop $\frac{1}{8}$ of an inch in diameter be 8 feet per second, find the size of a drop of which the maximum velocity is one foot per second.

7. A railway on an incline is arranged so that each train of loaded trucks in descending draws up an equal number of empty trucks by means of a rope passing round a drum. Each truck weighs 1 ton, and carries a load of 3 tons, the friction of the rope is 2 cwt., and that of the trains amounts to 7 lbs. per ton. If the number of trucks at each end of the rope be ten, show that the train will not move of itself unless the gradient be steeper than 1 in 118. If the rise be 1 in 25, find the velocity of the train when it has gone 100 yards from the starting point, omitting the weight of the rope.

8. Describe the mainspring, fusee, and balance of a watch, and explain clearly the action of each. How is it contrived that a watch shall not stop when being wound up? Show whether the rate will be affected by a change of latitude. Explain why it is affected by changes of temperature, and how this is compensated in some balances.

9. Explain the ascent of a rocket. If it be fired in a sloping direction would you expect it to follow a parabolic course in whole or in part? Explain fully your reasons.

10. Explain what is meant when it is said that the pressure of aqueous vapour at 90° F. in inches of mercury is 1·41. In what properties does saturated differ from unsaturated vapour? Find the volume of a cubic foot of dry air when it has been saturated with moisture, the temperature being all the time 90° F. and the pressure 30 inches.

11. Describe the construction and explain the action of the condenser of a steam-engine. Show that for a given weight of fuel burnt more work may in general be done with a condensing than with a high pressure engine.

12. An iron bar of oblong section is hung up by a string and struck on one angle: in general 3 distinct notes will be sounded; explain how they arise, and upon what circumstances the pitch of them depends.

13. Determine the relative positions of an object, a single lens and the eye, in order to obtain (1) the greatest magnification, (2) the greatest field of view, consistently with distinctness, when the focal length of the lens is given. Explain why achromatism is of less consequence when a single lens than when a compound microscope is used.

14. Describe the camera lucida, and explain its action and use.

BOOK-KEEPING BY DOUBLE ENTRY.—Time allowed, 2 hours.

1. Rule a form for a cash-book, and enter in it as many of the following transactions as should be placed there.

2. Journalize the above transactions on the form provided.

3. Post from the journal into the ledger placed before you.

4. Balance and close the ledger. Assume that the goods on hand on Jan 31 are worth £265.

5. Has there been a gain or a loss on goods? What is the amount?

6. What has been the net gain or loss in the month?

7. Was this business solvent or insolvent on Jan. 31? What is the amount?

8. Cash received is put on one side of cash account, and cash paid on the other. Why should not bills payable and bills receivable in like manner be included in the same account?

9. How is labour charged in farm accounts?

No. 13.—EXAMINATION PAPERS set by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSIONERS, on the occasion of a COMPETITIVE EXAMINATION for the Office of INSPECTOR of NATIONAL SCHOOLS (Ireland), February, 1870.

FOR DICTATION.

The impunity with which Elizabeth's government was able to insult and provoke the Catholic Powers of Europe is the most anomalous phenomenon in modern history. The population of England was less than half the population either of France or Spain. The nation was divided against itself, and three-quarters of the peers and half the gentlemen were disaffected. Yet the intricacies of the political situation protected the Queen not only against active resentment from abroad, but from the conspiracies of her own subjects. Everywhere, indeed, there was paradox; everywhere contradiction and inconsistency. In the struggle for existence men snatch at the first weapon that comes to hand, and cannot look too nicely at the armoury where it has been forged. Catholics and Protestants where they were a suffering minority clamoured alike for liberty of conscience; alike where they were in power they proscribed every creed but their own. The obligations of loyalty varied with the creed of the Sovereign. The English bishops who composed the homily on Wilful Rebellion, fed the armies of the Huguenots and the Prince of Orange with contributions collected in the English churches. The Catholics who on the Continent preached the Divine right of Kings, believed in England that they might lawfully be deposed by their subjects. Princes were not more consistent than their peoples. Elizabeth was half a Catholic in theory, in practice she was the most vigorous of Protestants. The Court of France was one month the ally of the Papacy, and the irreconcilable enemy of heresy; in the next it was seeking alliance with England, stretching out its hands to the princes of the religion, and thinking only how best to take advantage of the distractions of the Low Countries, and annex Flanders to the French crown. The anomalies in the position of the English queen were so singular as to be without precedent or parallel.

ORTHOGRAPHY.—Time allowed, ¾ hour.

Copy the following passage clearly and legibly, correcting mistakes of spelling, but not otherwise altering either the words or their order:—

But when afterwards King Edward, on his return from his French dominnions in the seventeanth yeer of his rein, found it nessassery (or conveeneant, in order to replennish his exchekka) to prossecute his judges for their coruption and malpractisses; the perversion of judgment and other mannefold erors ocasioned by their eerazing and altering reccords were among the causes asined for the hevvy punnishments inflicted upon almost all of them. The severrety of which proseedings seems to have so allarmed the suxeeding judges, that through a feer of being said to do wrong they hezzetated at doing what was right, and as it was so hazzadus to alter a reccord dewly made up, even from cumpassionet motivs, they resolved not to tuch a reccord any more, but held that even palpuble erers were too sacred to be rectafyde or called in cwestion. To this reel sullenness but afected timmiddaty of the judges such a narrerness of thinking was added, that every slipp, even of a silluble or letter, was now held to be fatul to the pleeder and ovaturned his clyents cause. If they derst not, or would not, set right meer formell mistakes, upon equetable terms and conditions, they at leest should have held that tryfling objections were at all times innadmissable, and that more sollid exceptions in point of form came too late when the merrits had been tryed. They might decently have reefuzed to amend in crimminel and especially in cappitel cases. Howevver they refuzed to alow any amendments at all; and the precidents then set were afterwards most religeously folowed, to the great obstruxion of justice and ruin of the sewtors; who have suffered as much by this screwpewlus obstenissy and littoral stricktness of the courts as they could have done from their inniquaty. After vurdicts and judgments upon the merrits had been given, they were freequintly reversed for slipps of the penn or mispelling, and justice was perpettualy entangled in a net of tecnicle jargan.

ADDITION.—1870. 1. (C.)

17. Find the amount of £8,150 in 3 years at $2\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum compound interest, neglecting fractions of a penny.

---

18. Add together $\frac{5}{7}$, $3\frac{1}{6}$, $1\frac{3}{14}$, and $\frac{1}{10}$.
19. Subtract $7\frac{1}{17}$ from $8\frac{1}{18}$.
20. Multiply together $3\frac{1}{3}$, $\frac{6}{11}$, $\frac{7}{30}$, $2\frac{5}{8}$, and $3\frac{1}{4}$.
21. Divide $10\frac{1}{10}$ by $6\frac{3}{7}$.

22. Add together 4327·85, ·00363, 582·0378, 5·60739, and ·38798642.
23. Subtract 373·79 from 870.
24. Multiply 38·5073 by ·00725.
25. Divide 2·24358296 by ·5893.
26. Reduce 34*s.* to the decimal of £17.

27. Reduce 12 lbs. 7 ozs. 1 dwt. 11 grs. to grains.

28. Three silver candlesticks, weighing in all 42 ounces, cost £21, the silver being valued at £14, and the workmanship at £7; what will 5 candlesticks cost if each of them weighs 24 ounces, and the workmanship is charged for at three times the rate per ounce?
29. Find (by Practice) how much I can save out of an income of £700 a year, my daily expenses being £1 11*s.* 9*d.*
30. In what time will £680 amount to £810 18*s.* 0*d.* at $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum?

31. Add together 5, $3\frac{1}{8}$, $\frac{7}{16}$, $\frac{5}{13}$, and $\frac{1}{5}$.
32. Subtract $7\frac{7}{17}$ from $10\frac{1}{3}$.
33. Multiply together $5\frac{1}{2}$, $\frac{8}{17}$, $\frac{3}{11}$, $1\frac{8}{16}$, and $\frac{3}{4}$.
34. Divide $7\frac{1}{8}$ by 8.

35. Add together 1·37 of a furlong and 7·329 of a yard, and give the answer in feet and the decimal fraction of a foot.
36. Subtract 2·32 of an hour from ·73 of a week.
37. Multiply 380·732 by ·00725.
38. Divide 7·037 by ·0732 to 4 places of decimals.
39. Express 3 cwt. 2 qrs. 14 lbs. as the decimal of a ton and a half.

ARITHMETIC.—Time allowed, $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours.

1. Add together $\frac{5}{3\,2}$ of a square mile, $\frac{7}{1\,0}$ of an acre, and $1\frac{3}{8}$ of a rood, giving the result in acres, roods, and perches.
2. Find the cost of carpeting a room that is 20 feet long by 17 feet wide, the price of a yard of carpet, 25 inches wide, being 5*s.* $1\frac{1}{2}$d.
3. What do you mean by Discount? Find the true Discount on £5,287 10*s.* due 4 years hence at $5\frac{3}{8}$ per cent.
4. A person invests £19,602 in the 3 per cents. at $90\frac{3}{4}$, and on their rising to 91 transfers his stock to the $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cents. at $94\frac{1}{2}$; how is his annual income affected?
5. If division by a composite number be performed by successive division by its prime factors; state the rule for finding the complete remainder. Example: divide 170892 by 165.
6. Find the value of $2{\cdot}74\dot{9}$ of $\cdot06\dot{3}$ of $\cdot095238\dot{}$ of nine guineas.
7. Find by duodecimals the height of a parallelopiped which contains 5277 feet 1344 inches, and whose base is 26 feet 6 inches.
8. What is the relation between the lb. troy and the lb. avoirdupois? Convert 56 lbs. 10 ozs. avoirdupois into troy weight.
9. A merchant fortifies 6853 gallons of wine by the addition of 485 liquid gallons of spirit, which spirit is of the strength of 17·3 per cent. over proof. Find the amount per cent. of proof spirit added to the wine.
10. A watch which is 10 minutes too slow at 12 o'clock on Monday gains 3 minutes and 10 seconds per day, what will be the time by the watch at a quarter past 9 on the morning of the following Sunday?
11. A wine merchant having bought 9 dozens of wine at 68*s.* per dozen, empties the same into a vat containing 140·6 gallons of wine worth 38*s.* per dozen, and sells the mixture at 46*s.* What per-centage does he obtain? (a dozen bottles contain 2·7 gallons).
12. An express train 130 yards long moving at the rate of 35 miles an hour meets a slow train 120 yards long moving at the rate of 14 miles an hour; how long does a man in the express train take to pass the slow train, and how long is the express train in entirely passing the slow train?

SUBJECT FOR ENGLISH COMPOSITION.—Time allowed, $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours.

In this Exercise attention should be paid to handwriting, spelling, punctuation, grammar, and style.

Under what circumstances and to what extent should a Government aid the emigration of the poor?

The Composition should fill not less than two folio pages.

GEOGRAPHY.—Time allowed, $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours.

1. On the accompanying map of Europe name the chief headlands, straits, and islands; trace the course of the Loire, Seine, Vistula, Oder, Volga, and their tributaries; and mark by asterisks, with the names written near them, the situations of Coburg, Biarritz, Ragusa, Galatz, Cleves, Treves, Dort, Haarlem, Bilbao, Saloniki.
2. Draw a map of Lincolnshire, Perthshire, or Cork, inserting the principal rivers and towns.

(3) I would if I could.
(4) Do not do what he asks you.
(5) I heard that you were up all night.

9. Define Subject, Predicate, and Copula. When is the Subject said to be extended? What is meant by the completion of the Predicate?

English Literature. (1.)—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. To what extent is Macbeth historical? Does it contain any allusions to the reign in which it was first acted? What internal evidence is there for the opinion that the play is not wholly the work of Shakespeare?

2. Discuss the character of Lady Macbeth.

3. Macbeth has been called "the most purely tragic" of Shakespeare's plays. Test the truth of this criticism by a comparison with Hamlet and Othello.

4. In what shape has the text of Julius Cæsar come down to us? When was it acted? What other plays were written on the same subject about the same time? Can you quote any passage in this play which seems to warrant the inference that Shakespeare had not read Plutarch in the original Greek?

5. Give the story of Othello as related in the work from whence Shakespeare borrowed it? What time does the play occupy? Quote and discuss one line in particular which has been thought to give intimations on this point.

6. Quote any phrases from Othello which have become proverbial, and assign the context in which they occur.

7. Discuss the following passages, either in respect of the reading to be adopted, or in respect of the meaning to be assigned, as each may seem to you to require.

(1) Present him eminence both with eye and tongue:
Unsafe the while, that we Must lave our honour in these flattering streams.
(2) Come, seeling night,
Scarf up the tender eye of pitiful day.
(3) The title is affeered.
(4) A fellow almost damned in a fair wife.
(5) Do not believe
That from the sense of all civility
I thus would play and trifle with your reverence.
(6) Let him command,
And to obey shall be in me remorse
What bloody work soever.
(7) Put out the light and then put out the light.
(8) Disrobe the images
If you do find them decked with ceremonies.
(9) Thy honourable metal may be wrought
From that it is disposed.
(10) If he love Cæsar, all that he can do
Is to himself, take thought, and die for Cæsar;
And that were much he should.
(11) My misgiving still
Falls shrewdly to the purpose.
(12) And the complexion of the element
In favour's like the work we have in hand.

8. Do Bacon's essays throw any light on his character or on the incidents of his career?

9. Draw a plan in illustration of the essay on gardens.

10. Explain what Bacon means in the following passages:—

1. Those that are first raised to Nobility are commonly more vertuous, but lesse innocent, than their descendants.
2. As for the Philology of them, that is but a circle of Tales and therefore not fit for this Writing.
3. Publique Revenges are, for the most part, fortunate.
4. Charity will hardly water the ground, where it must fill a Poole.
5. The blessing of Judah and Issachar will never meet.
6. Strength of nature in youth passeth over many excesses which are owing a man till his age.

11. Write a glossary on the following words:—Newell. Quadlius. Seelings. Avoidances. Elenches. Ginniting. Looses. Primum Mobile. Staddles. Vena porta.

English Literature. (2.)—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. What do you believe to be the value of Pope's Essay on Criticism as a guide in the formation of a sound literary taste? State some of the most important canons laid down by the author. When was it written? What criticism did it invite?

2. Explain the meaning of and the allusions in the following lines.

(1) For there's a happiness as well as care.
(2) Amidst their kindred cobwebs in Duck Lane.
(3) As if the stagyrite o'erlooked each line.
(4) So pleased at first the towering Alps we try.
(5) Unlucky as Fungoso in the play.
(6) But Appius reddens at each word you speak.
(7) The glory of the priesthood and the shame.

3. What merit does Pope claim for his Essay on Man, and for what reasons does he execute his design in verse rather than in prose? To what authors was this poem on its first appearance variously assigned? What share do you believe Bolingbroke to have had in its production? What is the general drift of the Essay? Quote the first lines of some of the more famous passages.

4. Annotate the following lines, explaining the allusions and otherwise illustrating the sense.

(1) Much injured Blunt! Why bears he Britain's hate.
(2) Old Cotta shamed his fortune and his birth.
(3) Jones and Le Nôtre have it not to give.
(4) Where sprawl the saints of Verrio or Laguerre.
(5) A perjured prince a leaden saint revere,
A godless regent tremble at a star.

5. How was Pope led to write the "Imitations of Horace"? Quote a line from them which has been called the best Pope ever wrote. To whom were these "Imitations" respectively addressed?

6. Explain the allusions in the following lines—

(1) A Scot will fight for Christ's kirk o' the Green.
(2) I think Sir Godfrey would decide the suit.
(3) The rights a court attacked a poet saved.
(4) In quibbles angel and archangel join.
And God the Father turns a school-divine.

7. On what subject did Milton originally contemplate writing an Epic Poem, and how and when was he led to substitute the subject of Paradise Lost? Can the charge of plagiarism be substantiated? Give the substance of the fourth book, and quote from the first and second together twelve lines which have become proverbial.

8. Explain fully the varieties which Milton introduced into the structure of his epic verse. Whence is he supposed to have derived them?

9. What do you believe to have been Milton's cosmological views? Quote passages from Paradise Lost, i. ii. iv. in support of your statement.

10. Explain the allusions in the following lines:—

(1) Dante shall give fame leave to set thee higher Than his Casella.

(2) While Darwent streams with blood of Scots imbrued, &c.

(3) Avenge, O Lord, thy slaughtered Saints, whose bones
Lie scattered on the Alpine mountains cold, &c.

(4) If Jonson's learned sock be on.

(5) The story of Cambuscan bold.

11. Annotate the following words and phrases. Cynosure, Dight, Buxom, Debonair, Grunsel, Jocund rebecks, Dappled dawn, In weeds of peace, Tells his tale.

12. What are the chief "Causes" specified by Burke in his "Thoughts on the present Discontents"? On what grounds does he deprecate "Triennial Parliaments" and a "Place-Bill"? By what result was his speech on American taxation followed? What distinction does he draw between the Constitution of Great Britain and that of the British Empire?

13. What are the "six capital sources" from which Burke derives the "fierce spirit of liberty" in the English colonies? and what are the "four capital examples" by which Burke wished to guide the policy of England in regard to America?

14. Explain the allusions in the following passages—

(1) To prevent that principality from being extinguished in the Crown, he severed it by Act of Parliament.

(2) Purveyance ..... was wholly taken away by the twelfth of Charles the Second.

(3) The next article of charge on my publick conduct ..... is Lord Beauchamp's Bill.

(4) The mover of the Bill was Sir George Savile.

(5) The first minister of finance in that country is a Protestant.

Logic.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. Discuss the quantity and quality of the following propositions, and convert them:

(a.) Her fallow leas
The darnel, hemlock, and rank fumitory,
Doth root upon.

(b.) And nothing teems
But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs.

(c.) We are but warriors for the working day.

(d.) There's not a piece of feather in our host.

2. Apply the rules of definition in criticising the following definitions:

(a.) The Sirocco is a hot wind which blows from the south.

(b.) Rent is the portion of the produce of land which goes to the landlord.

(c.) A glacier is a river of ice.

3. Reduce Baroko to the third figure and Bokardo to the second.

4. Examine the following arguments:

(a.) All that glitters is not gold;
Tinsel glitters,
Therefore it is not gold.

(b.) Warm countries alone produce wines;
Spain is a warm country,
Therefore Spain alone produces wines.

(c.) The law of Moses prohibited murder:
The law of Moses is abolished,
Therefore the prohibition of murder is abolished.

5. Reduce the following arguments to syllogistic form, and name the mood and figure of each syllogism.

(a.) Hotspur.—We'll fight with him to night.
Vernon.— It may not be.
Hotspur.—Why say you so? Looks he not for supply?
Vernon.—So do we.
Hotspur.—His is certain, ours is doubtful.

(b.) Who but felt of late
With what compulsion and laborious flight
We sunk thus low; Th' ascent is easy then.

(c.) Because A is the centre of the circle BC, the radii AB, AC, are equal:
and because B is the centre of the circle AC,
the radii AB, BC are equal:
therefore AC and BC are equal.
(Euclid. I. 1.)

6. How many instances are required for an induction? Are induction and deduction fundamentally different methods of reasoning?

Political Economy.—Time allowed, 2½ hours.

1. Distinguish between Political Economy and Political Science.

2. Distinguish between demand for labour and demand for commodities.

3. What causes tend to produce a rise in the price of the necessaries of life? by what causes is this tendency counteracted?

4. Give the causes of the comparative value of gold and silver and of variations in their comparative value.

5. Does the price of labour depend on its cost of production like the price of many other commodities?

6. How far does the rate of profit depend on wages?

7. Explain the causes of fluctuations in the rate of interest.

Rhetoric and Criticism.—Time allowed, 2½ hours.

1. What are the various definitions of Rhetoric mentioned by Whately. Give a sketch of its history. What is the cause of its neglect by the moderns as compared with the ancients?

2. State fully Whately's Classification of Arguments, and give examples of each class. What advice does Blair give respecting the arrangement of Arguments?

3. Give, in outline, the substance of what Whately says on Elocution.

4. What rules do Whately and Blair respectively give for the construction of a Sentence?

5. State the principles laid down by Whately for the use of Tropes of various kinds.

6. What advice does Blair give about managing the Pathetic part of a Discourse, and by what example does he illustrate his meaning?

7. What are the principal qualities to be aimed at in Historical and Epistolary Composition, respectively, according to Blair?

8. How is Elegance of Style to be acquired? When Energy and Elegance are at variance which is to be preferred?

9. Define Analogy. Show that "things most unlike and discordant in their nature may be strictly analogous."

Euclid.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. If two triangles have two sides of the one equal to two sides of the other, each to each, but the angle contained by the two sides of one of them greater than the angle contained by the two sides equal to them, of the other; the base of that which has the greater angle shall be greater than the base of the other.

2. The three interior angles of any triangle are together equal to two right angles.

3. Describe a square that shall be equal to a given rectilineal figure.

4. If in a circle two straight lines cut one another, which do not both pass through the centre, they do not bisect each other.

5. If from any point without a circle two straight lines be drawn, one of which cuts the circle, and the other touches it; the rectangle contained by the whole line which cuts the circle, and the part of it without the circle, shall be equal to the square of the line which touches it.

6. Similar polygons may be divided into the same number of similar triangles, having the same ratio to one another that the polygons have.

7. Similar triangles are to one another in the duplicate ratio of their homologous sides.

8. If from any point without a circle lines be drawn touching it, the angle contained by the tangents is double the angle contained by the line joining the points of contact and the diameter drawn through either of them.

9. The two right lines which join the opposite extremities of two parallel chords of a circle intersect in a point in that diameter which is perpendicular to the chords.

10. ABC is a semicircle, ADC a quadrant, upon the same line AC and on the same side of it; from any point B in the semicircle draw BA, BDC, and show that BA and BD are equal.

11. With a given radius describe a circle touching two given circles.

ALGEBRA.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. Find the product of $a + b - c$, $a + c - b$, $b + c - a$, and $a + b - c$.

2. Divide $2x^5y^{-3} - 5x^4y^{-2} + 7x\,y^{-1} - 5x^2 + 2xy$ by $x^3y^{-3} - x^2y^{-2} + xy^{-1}$.

3. Simplify—

(1) $$\frac{3}{1-2x} - \frac{7}{1+2x} - \frac{4-20x}{4x^2-1}$$

(2) $$\frac{x}{x-a} \cdot \frac{x}{x+a} - \frac{\dfrac{x+a}{x-a} - \dfrac{x-a}{x+a}}{\dfrac{x+a}{x-a} + \dfrac{x-a}{x+a}}$$

4. Reduce to its lowest terms—

$$\frac{2x^5 - 11x^2 - 9}{4x^5 + 11x^4 + 81}.$$

5. Define a^m where m is a positive integer, and hence show that $a^m \times a^n = a^{m+n}$.

Assuming this equation to hold for all values of m and n, find the meanings of $a^{\frac{p}{q}}$ and a^{-n}.

6. Solve the following equations:—

(α) $$\frac{2}{2x-5} + \frac{1}{x-3} = \frac{6}{3x-1}.$$

(β) $$\frac{x}{7} + \frac{21}{x+5} = 3\tfrac{2}{7}$$

(γ) $$6\left(\frac{x}{y} - \frac{y}{x}\right) = 5 = 6\left(\frac{1}{x} + \frac{1}{y}\right).$$

7. Extract the square root of—

(1) $16 + 5\sqrt{7}$: (2) $5 + \sqrt{10} - \sqrt{6} - \sqrt{15}$.

8. A railway train running from London to Edinburgh meets on the way with an accident which causes it to diminish its speed to $\frac{1}{3}$rd of what it was before, and in consequence it is 7 hours late. If the accident had happened 60 miles nearer Edinburgh, the train would have been only 3 hours late. Find the rate of the train before the accident occurred.

9. If four quantities are proportionals, and the second is a mean proportional between the third and fourth, the third will be a mean proportional between the first and second.

10. Show how to find the sum of a given number of quantities in Geometrical Progression.

If the series is continued to infinity show that each term bears a constant ratio to the sum of all that follow it.

11. Given that the volume of a sphere varies as the cube of its radius, prove that the volume of a sphere whose radius is 6 inches is equal to the sum of the volumes of three spheres whose radii are 3, 4, 5 inches.

12. Define a logarithm, and the characteristic of a logarithm. Show that the latter can always be determined by inspection in the common system of logarithms. Given log 3 = ·477121, log 7 = ·845098, find log 147, and the logarithm of $\left(\frac{9}{343}\right)^{\frac{1}{5}}$.

TRIGONOMETRY.—Time allowed, 3 hours.

1. Define the tangent of an angle; and prove that $\tan A = \tan (n\ 180° + A)$, where n is an integer.

Find all the values of A less than two right angles for which $\tan 3A = 1$.

2. Given

L sin 20° 10′ 30″ = 9·5376789 diff. for 10″ 573
and L cos 20° 10′ 30″ = 9·9725007 „ „ 77
find L sec 20° 10′ 25″ and L tan 20° 10′ 33″.

3. Prove the following formulæ—

(α) $\cos (A - B) = \cos A \cos B + \sin A \sin B$.

(β) $$\tan \frac{A+B}{2} = \frac{\tan A \sec B + \tan B \sec A}{\sec A + \sec B}.$$

(γ) $$\sin a = 4 \sin \frac{a}{3} \sin \frac{\pi - a}{3} \sin \frac{\pi + a}{3}.$$

(δ) In any triangle—

4. Find the sine of 18°. Explain how it is that the method of investigating this leads to two values, of which only one belongs to the given angle.

5. If an arc of 1° of a great circle on the earth's surface measure 69½ miles, find the radius, and the arc of 1° of a small circle in latitude 30° 31′

6. Investigate an expression for the sine of half an angle of a triangle in terms of the sides. Ex. Find the greatest angle of the triangle which has 17·9375, 25·3016, and 28·5109 for its sides.

7. Given the sides containing the right angle of a right angled triangle; show how to use logarithmic tables to compute the hypothenuse. Ex. The sides being 105·734 and 179·375, compute the hypothenuse.

8. Prove that the area of a plane triangle is $\frac{a^2}{2}\frac{\sin B \sin C}{\sin A}$ and the radius of the circle inscribed in it $a \dfrac{\sin \frac{B}{2} \sin \frac{C}{2}}{\cos \frac{A}{2}}$.

9. In a spherical triangle prove that—

$$\cot b \sin a = \cot B \sin C + \cos a \cos C.$$

Adapt this formula to logarithmic computation.

10. State Napier's rules for the solution of right angled spherical triangles when two parts are given; and prove them for the case in which the given parts are the two sides.

Show whether there can ever be ambiguity in the solution of a right angled spherical triangle when two parts are given. If one side be given = 90° and the hypothenuse be also given, show whether the triangle can be solved.

11. If r be the angular radius of the small circle inscribed in a spherical triangle, prove that

$$\tan r \quad \tan \frac{A}{2} \sin (s - a).$$

Physical Science.—Time allowed, 3½ hours.

1. Define a component of a force, vertical, gravity, equilibrium, density, and momentum. If a body be in equilibrium under the action of three forces only, show that they are either parallel or their directions pass through one point, and that in the latter case each is proportional to the sine of the angle between the directions of the other two.

2. Three equal weights are fixed to the circumference of a wheel moveable about a horizontal axis; show that if the weights are at equal distances the wheel will rest in any position; but if they are not at equal distances that there are two positions only in which the wheel will rest, and in one of these the equilibrium is unstable. Determine these positions when the places of the weights are given.

3. To get a cart out of a rut the waggoner applies his strength not to the cart but to the wheel, explain clearly the advantage of so doing.

4. Show that the theorem that "in any machine what is gained in power is lost in time" holds good in the case of (1) the rack and pinion, (2) a single moveable pulley in which the strings are not parallel.

5. Describe Atwood's machine, and explain how it is used (1) to verify the law that the velocity given to a body by a constant pressure is inversely as the mass of the body, (2) to determine the acceleration due to gravity in a second of time.

6. If a body be projected with velocity u in the direction of gravity, and v be its velocity after it has described a space s, prove that $v^2 = u^2 + 2gs$ where g is the acceleration due to gravity at the place.

A body is projected vertically upwards with a velocity of 158 feet per second, and after 5½ seconds it is descending with a velocity of 12½ feet, find the acceleration due to gravity at the place, and the height of the body above its starting point at the end of 5½ seconds.

7. Two trains, one of 80 and the other of 20 tons weight, follow one another at a distance of one mile at the same rate, viz., twenty miles an hour, and at the same spot each in succession shuts off its steam. This spot is on an incline rising 1 in 50, show whether the hinder train will overtake the other before they come to rest, the friction being equal to 8 lbs. per ton. Investigate the same problem when the hinder train is going at 21 miles an hour when the steam is shut off.

8. Prove that the path of a projectile is a parabola. A stone dropped from a railway bridge strikes, after it has fallen 16 feet, the vertical front of a carriage in a train going at 20 miles an hour, at a point 9 feet above the ground: the velocity of the train being unaffected, and the coefficient of elasticity between the stone and carriage being ½, find at what distance the stone will reach the ground, taking $g = 32$ feet per second.

9. Explain the cause of what is called centrifugal force. A weight is placed on a horizontal table which revolves about a vertical axis; if the distance of the weight from the axis be a, and the coefficient of friction u, the greatest number of revolutions per second compatible with the weight's retaining its place will be $\frac{\sqrt{\mu g}}{2\pi\sqrt{a}}$.

10. Define elasticity and pressure in a fluid. State Boyle's (or Mariotte's) law, and explain fully how it is verified. If the temperature vary, how will the statement of this law have to be modified?

11. Explain the action of a smoke-jack.

12. A balloon consists of a spherical bag 50 feet in diameter filled with gas, which has ⅛th the density of atmospheric air, find the greatest weight of the bag consistent with its rising, taking the weight of a cubic foot of air at 33 grains.

13. Define pitch, discord, and intensity as applied to sounds. What relation exists between the pitch of an open and a closed organ pipe of the same length? Explain the cause of it. If you made a hole in the open pipe at a distance from the top of two-thirds of its length, what effect would you expect this to produce on the pitch?

14. What sort of lenses are used by short-sighted persons? Explain the reason: and show by a diagram that such lenses always diminish the apparent size of objects seen through them.

15. Define the real, and the apparent, brightness of a luminous object. Show whether the apparent brightness of the Moon, or of Venus, which is nearer the Sun, but farther from the Earth, is the greater, supposing their surfaces to be equally reflective. Show also whether a double concave lens increases or diminishes the apparent brightness of an object viewed through it.

Book-keeping by Double Entry.—Time allowed, 2 hours.

1. Rule a form for a Cash-Book, and enter in it as many of the following, as can be placed there:—

2. Journalize the above, in the form provided.

3. Post from the Journal you have made, the first three entries into the Ledger put before you.

4. In balancing, how should the following accounts be closed?

Merchandise.
Capital.
Profit and Loss.
Bills Payable.

5. What is a "trial balance"? What is the difference between the "trial balance" and the "balance sheet"?

6. In what accounts of his Ledger should a trader look for the following information, after he has closed his books for the year?

(a.) The amount of his liability or outstanding acceptances?
(b.) The amount of his profit or loss on goods?
(c.) His net profit or loss?
(d.) His actual net worth?
(e.) The value of his stock in trade?

In each case state the side of the account to which you would turn.

7. Assume that a trader after he has balanced and closed his books discovers that he has in a previous year omitted to post to the Cr. of Smith from the entry Cash Dr. to Smith? What must he now do?

8. Describe some system of keeping farm accounts. What difference would be made, if the farmer had his holding, undivided, in one kind of cultivation only.

SECTION VII.

School Property: Houses, Schools, and Premises.

No. 14.—Explanation of the Discrepancy between the number of Vested Schools (1,665) given in Section VII., paragraph 2 (page 213), and the number (1,864) given in same Section VII., paragraph 1 (page 212), and also given in the Report of the Commissioners for 1867 (page 10).

* * * * * *

In the returns furnished to the Royal Commissioners, under Section VII., paragraph 1, and previously published in the National Education Report for 1867, the number of vested school-houses, and school-rooms, includes the number of school-houses (with their separate school-rooms) in course of building, or intended to be built, by local applicants. It also includes the school houses and schools on the suspended list.

Under paragraph 2 of Section VII., the number of vested school-houses and school-rooms returned is the number actually on the operation schools list, the schools on the building and suspended lists being excluded.

No. 16.—Information respecting Saint Kevin's National Schools, Glendalough (County Wicklow).

1. The schools have distinct roll numbers—male school, 983 ; female school, 9,631.

2. The Reverend E. Rowan, Seven Churches, is the manager of the schools.

3. Saint Kevin's Male National School is vested in trustees. Saint Kevin's Female National School is non-vested.

4. Prior to the erection of the new buildings, the girls were taught in the male school.

5. The building of the female school was not assisted by the Board.

6. The female school has been in operation since the 1st of March, 1866.

The Saint Kevin's male and female National schools, county Wicklow, are under the management of the Reverend E. Rowan, Seven Churches, Rathdrum. The male school, Roll No. 983, was vested in trustees. The lease expired on 15th August, 1852; so that this and female school, Roll, No. 9,631 are non-vested.

The houses in which these schools are held are within a few yards of one another.

No. 17.—Resolution adopted at Meeting of the National Board on the 3rd November, 1868, relative to granting sites for National Schools.

The Commissioners are of opinion that a general Act should be passed to enable any tenant in fee, or tenant for life, or any greater estate under a settlement, to have power to grant a lease in fee, or for any term of years, of a site, not exceeding one acre, for the purposes of having a school and premises connected therewith erected thereon; provided that full value shall be reserved of rent with usual clauses, and a power to re-enter after notice, if the premises shall not be used exclusively for the purposes of the school.

Such lease to have priority over all limitations under the settlement, and over all incumbrances affecting the estate.

The Commissioners recommend that the foregoing regulation should be embodied in an Act of Parliament.

Teachers, their Classification and Salaries.

No. 19.—Copy of Letter of J. W. Kavanagh, Esq., 1st December, 1854, on subject of Premiums to Teachers for Good Attendance of Pupils.

Cavan, November 15, 1854.

Gentlemen.—In reply to your circular of the 16th ultimo, in reference to the proposal to pay the salaries of the National teachers directly to themselves, and not, as heretofore, through the managers; I beg leave to submit that, whilst on some grounds it might be desirable, I regard the objections against it of such a character that I cannot recommend its adoption.

1st. The managers would justly regard this step as a transfer of the teachers of Ireland from the service of the public in the different localities, as represented by the several religious bodies, to the direct employment of the State.

2nd. It would not benefit the teachers, as the closer they are bound to the State, and the more they are made independent of local control, the less fees will be paid to them.

3rd. Correspondence would be multiplied in constant protests between managers and teachers.

4th. No case has been made out, and in three-fourths of Ireland, or at least in the case of three-fourths of the managers, no case can be made out of any abuses to warrant a change of this kind.

5th. Vouchers are more reliable at present; and teachers about to leave before the expiration of exact quarters are commonly paid by the managers; whereas, under the proposed rule, such would not be done.

I remain, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

(Signed) J. W. Kavanagh.

No. 20.—Memorial of National Teachers in December, 1867, for Increase of Salaries; also copy of reply of the Board of National Education.

(Copy.)

Belfast, 4th December, 1867.

Gentlemen,—We have to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 13th ultimo, in answer to an application from Rev. William Johnston asking the Commissioners to grant an audience to a deputation from the Belfast National Teachers' Association to present a memorial praying for an increase of salary.

We were not previously aware of the fact that "the Commissioners have invariably refused to receive deputations on any subject," and being fully convinced that their refusal did not proceed from want of sympathy for teachers, we feel assured that the Commissioners will receive the memorial now forwarded to them and give it a careful and generous consideration. As the experience of the past fully proves the hopelessness of expecting any increase from local aid without legislative compulsion, our only trust is the Commissioners, and to them we now appeal with confidence, assured by the recollection of past favours that an appeal will not be in vain.

We are, Gentlemen, your obedient servants,

(Signed) William Erskine, Chairman.
Hugh M. Kelly, Secretary, pro tem.

The Secretaries, &c., &c.

Please address, H. M. Kelly, 8, Fleetwood-street.

To the Right Honorable and Honorable the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland.

The Memorial of the undersigned National Teachers.

Humbly Sheweth:—

That the emoluments of memorialists are greatly disproportioned to the value of their services and totally inadequate to support them in that comfort and respectability to which their profession entitles them.

That while the price of labour has greatly increased within the last few years in almost every department of business, National teachers have been unable to obtain any addition to their salaries, and that as almost all the necessaries of life have become more expensive, teachers are, in reality, in a worse position than formerly, while those engaged in other employments have greatly benefited by the increased value of their labour.

That while it is the almost universal testimony of the Head and District Inspectors that those who have adopted the office of teacher as the profession of their lives, are well qualified for their duties and faithful in discharge of them, memorialists feel it to be a humiliating fact that the price paid for such important National services averages considerably less than that paid to an ordinary artisan, having been for the year 1866 at the rate of 13*s.* 1¾*d.* per week from all sources to each principal teacher.

That judging from the late debate in the House of Commons on National Education in Ireland, memorialists believe that the Government is strongly disposed to increase the salaries of teachers; and that, as the application for an increase must come from your Honorable Board, memorialists respectfully and earnestly pray your Honorable Board to ask for a grant sufficient to enable you to increase largely the present inadequate income of memorialists.

That teachers trained at the public expense are rapidly leaving the service of the Board for more lucrative situations, and their places are being filled by inexperienced and unqualified men; and that unless immediate measures be adopted to improve the position of teachers, it will, in a short time, be difficult if not impossible to obtain men properly qualified for the office; and the National system of education which has heretofore conferred so much benefit on Ireland, will in future fail to keep pace with the advancing requirements of the age, and to accomplish the great objects for which, in many respects, it is so admirably adapted.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

B. O. 10/12/67.
11,408/67.

Office of National Education,
14th December, 1867.

Sir,—We have to inform you that we submitted your letter of the 4th instant to the Commissioners of National Education, and we are directed to say that they are not prepared to bring under the notice of Her Majesty's Treasury, the memorial purporting to come from the National teachers of Ireland for an increase to their salaries. Even if the Commissioners were disposed to support the views of the memorialists, the present would not be an opportune time, when the whole question of National Education is about to be brought under inquiry by a Royal Commission.

As the Commissioners take exception to some passages in the memorial forwarded to them by you, they have ordered us briefly to set forth a statement of the several scales of salaries secured for the benefit of the National teachers of Ireland since the year 1835.

In this year the rate of salary allowed was £10 to male, and £8 to female teachers. In the year 1845 the teachers male and female were arranged into three classes, and the salaries were as follow:—

Males.	Salary.	Females.	Salary.
First Class, .	£20	First Class, .	£15
Second Class, .	£15	Second Class, .	£12
Third Class, .	£12	Third Class, .	£10

In 1848 these three classes were subdivided, in order to mark more carefully the attainments and worth of each teacher. Since 1848 the scale was increased six times within a period of twelve years, as will be seen by the annexed table:—

—	Males.							Females.
	First Class.			Second Class.		Third Class.		First Class.			Second Class.		Third Class.
	First Division.	Second Division.	Third Division.	First Division.	Second Division.	First Division.	Second Division.	First Division.	Second Division.	Third Division.	First Division.	Second Division.	First Division.	Second Division.
1832 to 1839, no classes, .	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–	–
1839 to 1848, no divisions, .	20			15		12		15			12		10
1848 to 1849, . . .	30	25	22	20	18	16	14	24	20	18	15	14	13	12
1849 to 1851, . . .	30	25	22	21	19	17	15	24	20	18	16	15	14	13
1851 to 1852, . . .	35	28	24	21	19	17	15	24	20	18	16	15	14	13
1852 to 1855, . . .	36	30	25	22	20	18	15	25	22	19	17	16	15	13
1855 to 1859, . . .	46	38	32	26	24	20	17	36	30	24	22	20	17	15
1859 to 1860, . . .	50	42	36	30	26	22	18	40	34	28	24	22	18	16
1860, ...	52	44	38	32	28	24	18	42	36	30	26	24	20	16

These tables show that between 1835 and 1860, the salaries of National teachers have been increased from about 100 to 500 per cent., and we find, comparing the number of teachers in the Board's service in 1854, and the sum voted for their salaries in that year, with the same items for the past year of 1866, that the teachers' incomes in the latter year showed an addition of more than thirty per cent. Yet these numbers do not set forth all that has been done by the State at the recommendation of the Commissioners, for the improvement of the National teachers' condition.

Teachers of more than eight years standing are, if deserving, entitled to good service salaries varying, according to classification and length of service, from £3 to £13 in the case of male, and from £2 to £11 in the case of female teachers. While since 1855 special gratuities under several heads are shared in by almost the whole body of teachers.

The Commissioners need not perhaps remind you that the State does not undertake to provide the whole income of a National teacher, as it does in the case of its civil and military servants, but merely supplements his income. The Commissioners are aware that the amount of local support given to teachers is, for the most part very inadequate. They regret that it is so, but they have no means of remedying this evil.

However, regarding the present cost of living, and that of each of the periods when the teachers' incomes were smaller than they now are, it does appear that the successive increments of salary have more than kept pace with the increased cost of living, and the Commissioners are therefore bound to dissent from the statement in the memorial that "the National teachers are at present in reality in a worse position than formerly."

We are, Sir, your obedient servants,

No. 21.—Note furnished by the Secretaries in explanation of an apparently anomalous entry in the Returns, Section XII., Paragraph 9 (supra, page 380).

The apparently anomalous entries (under the column headed "Death") of retiring gratuities awarded, refer to cases in which the Commissioners of National Education had ordered the withdrawal of salary (from a prospective date), and had sanctioned the award of retiring gratuities, but meanwhile the teachers died, and the retiring gratuities were paid to their representatives or next of kin. Also cases in which the teachers died before their applications for retiring allowance had been finally dealt with by the Board; but gratuities were awarded, nevertheless, to their representatives on grounds of equity, and under the special circumstances considered.

LETTER to the COMMISSIONERS OF NATIONAL EDUCATION (IRELAND), requesting information upon certain chief points of the Inquiry intrusted to the Royal Commissioners.

24th February, 1868.

GENTLEMEN,—We have been directed by the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the state of Primary Education in Ireland to enclose copies of the Commission under which they are appointed, for the information of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland, and to inquire whether the Commissioners of National Education would desire to put before this Commission any paper or memorandum on the constitution or working of the Board, and of the National system.

We have been further directed to enclose a paper suggesting certain points likely to come under the consideration of the Commissioners.

We remain, &c.,

To the Secretaries to the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland.

MEMORANDUM forwarded together with preceding Letter.

SUBJECTS to which the Attention of the NATIONAL BOARD is requested by the COMMISSIONERS.

I. Observations on the constitution of the Board.

II. Statement of opinion as to how far the system of National education has fulfilled the following objects:—

(a.) The promotion of united action on the part of the three great religious bodies, in the support and management of mixed schools.
(b.) The promotion of united action on the part of the clergy of those bodies, for the same purpose.
(c.) The union of teachers of different creeds in the mixed schools.
(d.) The union of children of different creeds in the same school.
(e.) The securing of full opportunities for religious instruction to the children of each creed attending such mixed schools.

III. Statement of opinion as to whether the feeling of the clergy and laity of the three great religious bodies towards the National system has undergone any change since its foundation. And, whether any changes have taken place in the administration or operations of the Board.

IV. How far has the action of the National Board promoted the erection of suitable school-buildings, and the adoption and acquisition of improved school furniture and books? Has this action been diminished from any causes, and if so what are those causes?

V. How far has the action of the National system tended to improve the salary, position, and social status of the schoolmasters?

VI. How far has the training department attained the principal objects for which that establishment was set up, viz.:—

(a.) To enable a uniform standard of educational skill and knowledge to be established, by which to classify the teachers of the National schools.
(b.) To improve the knowledge of the teachers, and also the method of teaching.
(c.) To improve the habits of the teachers.
(d.) To bring together under the same system of secular training the schoolmasters of various creeds, while providing for their moral training and separate religious wants.

VII. Observations as to—

(a.) Model schools.
(b.) Books.
(c.) Vested and non-vested schools.

Office of National Education,
4th March, 1868.

B.O., 3/3/68.

GENTLEMEN,—We laid before the Board of National Education, at its meeting yesterday, your letter of the 24th ult., stating that you had been directed by the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of Primary Education, &c., to ask "whether the Commissioners of National Education would desire to put before the Commission any paper or memorandum on the constitution or working of the Board and of the National system."

We are directed to state in reply that the Commissioners of National Education do not desire to draw up any memorandum on these points; but that they will be happy to supply to the Royal Commissioners the fullest information that can be furnished through their official documents and through the oral evidence of the members of the Board and of the several officers of it.

We have the honour to be, Gentlemen,

Your very obedient servants,

(Signed), JAMES KELLY, WM. H. NEWELL, } Secretaries.

The Secretaries,
Office of Primary Education Commission.

FURTHER CORRESPONDENCE with individual COMMISSIONERS of NATIONAL EDUCATION upon the same subject.

CIRCULAR LETTER addressed to each COMMISSIONER of NATIONAL EDUCATION requesting information upon certain chief points of the Inquiry intrusted to the ROYAL COMMISSION.

8th March, 1868.

SIR,—We have been directed by the Commissioners appointed by Her Majesty to inquire into the state of Primary Education in Ireland, to enclose for your information a copy of the Commission under which they are appointed.

We are further directed to forward to you the enclosed memorandum; and as the Board of National Education has declined, as a Board, to supply any observations on those subjects, we are to request that you will favour the Commissioners with such observations as you may deem proper upon this memorandum or upon any other matters connected with the operations of the National Board not referred to therein.

We remain, &c.,

GEORGE A. C. MAY, D. B. DUNNE, } Secretaries.

REPLY* of Right Hon. THOMAS O'HAGAN, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, one of the Commissioners of National Education.

17th February, 1869.

GENTLEMEN,—I desire to say a few words on one of the Queries which you have sent to me.

I am very decidedly of opinion, that the substitution of one or more paid Commissioners for the present Representative and Consultative Board of National Education, would be detrimental and dangerous, in a high degree.

I think that the interference of the State in the direction of the education of the People is only warrantable, so far as it is necessary; and I do not desire that that direction should be committed altogether to the paid officials of the Government. Such a change would not, in my judgment, commend the National system to the acceptance and confidence of the country, or tend to keep it in harmony with public opinion.

The conflict of religious sentiment in Ireland, its intensity on the one side and the other, and the sensitiveness which belongs to it, on both, surround with many difficulties the task of maintaining and working satisfactorily a system, which offers itself for the common use of all. It seems to me, that if that system is continued in its present, or anything like its present, state, its supervision by gentlemen of station and intelligence, representing the various religious bodies of the kingdom, having no interest but that of the community at heart, and associated with the single purpose of promoting that general interest, whilst they guard the rights and consult the feelings of the several classes with which they are connected by more intimate relations, must be of signal benefit in preventing misconceptions, reconciling contrarieties, interpreting truly and satisfying fairly the aims of reasonable people, and giving smoothness and efficiency to the action of the Board.

* "The Commissioners who replied to this circular were the present Lord Chancellor (Right Hon. Thomas O'Hagan) "and the Right Hon. M. Longfield. We must add that the Earl of Dunraven, Mr. Justice Morris, Mr. Waldron, and "Mr. Gibson, who are members of this Commission, have seats likewise at the National Board, and that the Right Hon. "Alexander Macdonnell, Resident Commissioner of the National Board, appeared before us on six days, and gave us the "benefit of his large store of information with the greatest readiness."—(Introduction to Report, Vol. I., page 12.)
The other Commissioners of National Education took no notice either of the letter or the memorandum.

I should have expected such results before experience, and having now been one of the Commissioners for many years, and associated largely with all their deliberations and decisions, I can honestly aver that, since I have been so, they have worked together with mutual kindness and respect; that they have found it quite possible to reconcile fidelity to the special rights of their respective co-religionists with the united application of the general principles of the Board; that their discussions have been uniformly distinguished by good temper, and their resolutions, in my judgment, by moderation and good sense. I do not believe that the admirable qualities of the Resident Commissioner,—his great ability, his rare accomplishments, his high honour, his genial bearing, his knowledge of the country and cordial sympathy with its people,—would have enabled even him to hold on through the stormy struggles of the past, and sustain an institution, which, but for him, would probably have perished, had he not been counselled and supported by his colleagues. I am very sure, that not one official man out of ten thousand could have kept his ground and preserved that institution without such counsel and support. We should not lightly throw them away.

Further, the National system is, to a large extent, a system of compromise. It requires some sacrifices of individual sentiment, that it may be more generally accepted and of wider usefulness. It has grown into its present shape by successive adaptations to the wants and emergencies of our peculiar society. It is still, more or less, in a state of fusion and transition, and capable of further advantageous change. And, in this view, the value of a Board, so constituted that it holds relations with all the Churches of the country, and has full facilities for feeling the pulse of opinion and appreciating its real requirements, is very great indeed.

It may be conceived that a paid Commission would have more concentration of will and precision of effort; and, in a mere official sense, there may be some plausibility on that view. But I see no difficulty in combining such concentration and precision,—for fiscal purposes and the transaction of daily business,—through one or two resident and paid Commissioners and an efficient staff, with the benefits to which I have adverted, as belonging to a Consultative Board, respecting and adapting itself to the sentiment of the community, answering to its feelings with ready sympathy, and commanding, by faithful and unbought service, its confidence and trust. There is no antagonism between a resident Commissioner or Commissioners and such a Board. They are complements of each other; and the union of them gives assurance of advantage which either, separately, never could confer.

The suggestion which has, I understand, been made by Judge Longfield, that there should be two resident Commissioners representing the Catholics and Protestants of Ireland, is in full accordance with the principle of religious equality which has pervaded the administrative arrangements of the Board, especially since it was modified during the Chief Secretaryship of Mr. Cardwell. I quite approve of that suggestion, and I hope to see it carried into practical effect.

I have the honour, &c.,

THOMAS O'HAGAN, C.

REPLY of Right Hon. MOUNTIFORT LONGFIELD, P.C., one of the Commissioners of National Education.

GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your letter asking for a statement of my views upon the constitution of the National Board, and the working of the National system of education in Ireland, I beg to forward the following observations for the information of the Royal Commissioners.

The fundamental principle of the system of National Education, and the constitution of the Board which administers that system, are intimately connected. A different system might be as well administered by a Board constituted in a totally different manner.

The peculiar fundamental principle of the National system is, that every child may attend any school without any danger of interference with the religious faith in which his parents or guardians wish him to be brought up. Nothing must be done to impair his religious convictions, or to make him a proselyte to an opposite creed.

The result of a different system in Ireland would be, that many parents would find it impossible to procure a proper education for their children. The father would frequently be obliged to choose between leaving his child altogether without education or sending him to a school which might be injurious to his faith. He might also, in a few instances, have the alternative of sending his child to a school where his religious faith would be respected, but where the education given would be of an inferior quality. But the National system enables him to select with safety any school that receives assistance from the National funds.

It is obvious that this system can only be carried out by imposing certain restrictions upon the managers and teachers of National schools.

Thus there are both positive and negative rules. The positive rules are those which are made for the purpose of securing to the children a good education. They may be the same in every system. An inspection is necessary to secure their observance, and to see that payment is made only when the work is properly performed.

But, although such rules may be neglected, they will not be intentionally violated. Their neglect arises from the teachers' indolence or want of skill, and it is the interest of the patron to enforce such rules which assist his object by promoting the efficiency of the school. Those rules provoke no opposition; they are of universal application, and the entire community feel an interest in their observance.

It is otherwise with the negative rules, which are framed to prevent any interference with the religious faith of those pupils who differ in religious persuasion from the teacher or patron of the school. They prevent him from doing what he would often desire to do, and would sometimes think it meritorious to do. They prevent him from making any attempt to convert the children from what he believes to be an error, and even from what he believes to be an error fatal to salvation. The patron, as well as the teacher, is apt to dislike the restrictions imposed upon him by those rules.

The peculiar negative rules of the system require not only that no religious instruction shall be given to a child contrary to the faith and to the presumed wishes of the parent, but also, that no such instruction shall be given to other children in his presence. This must be admitted to be some inconvenience to the patron if he is an ecclesiastic. Independently of any improper wish to make proselytes by a dishonest use of his position as patron of a public school, he feels the restriction in his dealing with the children of his own flock. It is true that he may make arrangements for giving the children of his own faith in the school religious instruction once every day, besides an entire day in the week, exclusive of Sundays. But this must be done at the regular appointed times; and most clergymen would prefer not to make any appointments, but to come into the school and teach at such times as may occasionally happen to be most convenient for themselves.

Thus it happens that many of the patrons of the National schools dislike the restrictions, and are inclined to act, sometimes wilfully and sometimes ignorantly, in opposition to the spirit of the system. The clergy of all denominations would naturally be disposed to give their schools more of a peculiar ecclesiastical character than ought to be permitted in public institutions intended for the use of children of every creed, and supported by taxes levied from every creed alike.

It is a delicate and difficult task to frame and administer the rules necessary to prevent such abuses. It is frequently necessary to check the well-meaning efforts of worthy men. As much liberty must be granted as is compatible with the spirit of the system, while in many cases a mere compliance with the words of the rules will not be accepted as sufficient.

The administrators must act with gentleness and with firmness. For this purpose there ought to be within the Board a sympathy with the faithful members of every creed, and a strength sufficient to enable them to adhere to their just resolutions.

The Commissioners of National Education are a corporation consisting of twenty members, who, by the charter of incorporation, must be not more than ten Protestants and not more than ten Roman Catholics. One of the Commissioners resides on the premises in which the chief business of the institution is transacted; he receives a salary, and is called the Resident Commissioner. But this is a mere arrangement of the Treasury; it is not directed by the charter, and the Resident Commissioner has no authority beyond any other Commissioner; he has only his own one vote, and such influence as may arise from his personal character, and his superior knowledge of the affairs of the Corporation. The details are carried on by the Secretaries, Chiefs of Inspection, Inspectors, and other officers; but all those officers are appointed, and have the arrangement of their duties settled by the Board. Every important matter, and every case not already settled by precedent, is brought before the Board. No officer can be appointed or dismissed, promoted or degraded, rewarded or punished, except by a vote of the Board, and all the officers are required to consult the Board before their final action in any matter of novelty and importance.

This constitution of the Board is intended to combine, as far as possible, the advantages of a representative and of a purely official body, with a freedom from the peculiar disadvantages to which either class by itself is subject.

As I believe nobody proposes that the government of the institution should be intrusted to a body directly elected by popular suffrage, I shall compare the present government with the one which has been most frequently proposed in its place. The rival system which I shall consider, is, that the number of Commissioners should be considerably reduced; that the new Commissioners should all be paid, and should devote all their time to the business of their office. It is better, it is said, to have a small body of responsible men, perfectly acquainted with the business, and constantly attending to the details, than to have a large body, many of whom attend very irregularly, and are imperfectly acquainted with the system, and from their position are practically irresponsible. A large body is not very different from a debating society, Now, under the present system, all the business is in fact transacted by responsible men, well acquainted with the most minute details, fairly paid, and giving all their time to the administration of the system. These men are the Secretaries, the Chiefs of Inspection, the Head Inspectors, and the chiefs of the several departments. Those men practically do the chief work, and superintend all the minor departments, and it is of little consequence whether they are called "officers" or "commissioners." But under the present system there is over these officers a body of men called the Commissioners, who, to a considerable extent, represent the interests and feelings of the general community. They are, to some extent, a representative body, as there is no class which approves of the system of National Education that cannot find, according to its numbers, one or more members of the Board who agree with its opinions and sympathize with its feelings. The Board is not the direct creation of popular election, but it is appointed by the Government, which itself is subject to the popular voice. And as it is not usual to change the Board at each change of Government, the result is that it represents every opinion, instead of the one opinion of the fluctuating majority of the present hour. The majority, as it ought to do, prevails; but the minority gets a patient and a friendly hearing. When any important step is to be taken, its effect on the interests and feelings of every class is felt and represented at the Board. Hence, the decision is carefully made, with full knowledge of all that can be said or felt against it; and, therefore, the Board has power to adhere to what, after full deliberation, it has decided to be just and prudent. The Board itself is responsible to public opinion; but each individual member is independent. As his office is merely honorary, he is under no temptation to give up anything that he feels to be just and right. His interests and feelings and duties as a citizen are not merged in his narrower position as a Commissioner of National Education.

Under this system it is not likely that there will be any abuse of the patronage which must be intrusted to the governing body. The members of the Board have no feeling in common, except a desire to promote the education of the people, and no member would venture to express his own private wishes in favour of any job.

In a large Board composed of unconnected members, there is no danger of a system of mutual concession, by which each member carries his own job, and in return supports his neighbours.

It is difficult to prevent a tacit understanding of this kind from growing up among a very small body of men, where the common employment which brings them together engrosses a considerable portion of their time.

The acts of the Board have been always subjected to a very jealous and hostile scrutiny, but it is not charged with any abuse of its patronage, although the salaries of the officers amount to more than £30,000 a year.

It may be added that the Government is under no temptation to make an improper appointment to an honorary Board. Several members have seats on the judicial bench, and it is some advantage that the decision of difficult cases should be submitted to persons who are accustomed to lay aside all private and party feelings when considering such questions.

The Resident Commissioner forms a connecting link between the officers of the institution and the Board of Commissioners.

He sits on every Committee, and attends every meeting of the Board, and is acquainted with all the details of the business of every office.

It is the duty of the officers to consult him on all points of difficulty and importance, and he advises them how they ought to act, or whether the case ought to be laid before the Board. Thus, through him, all the chief officers learn the feelings and opinions of the Board, and the Commissioners obtain a knowledge of the conduct and character of the officers. Thus, also, at every meeting there is at least one Commissioner present who is perfectly acquainted with the business, and the Board can never fall into any mistake from ignorance of its rules, or of the facts to which they are to be applied.

The appointment of a second paid Commissioner, so that one should be a Roman Catholic and one a Protestant, would combine all the advantages expected from a small paid Board, with those which are secured, by its present constitution.

The constitution proposed as a substitute for the present Board would be subject to many disadvantages. It is proposed that there should be a small Board, consisting of three or four well-paid members, representing different religious creeds.

From the beginning, the appointments to the Board would present a serious difficulty. When all the members of a creed are to be represented by one, or at most two persons, it will be found no easy matter to satisfy that party. If a man does not belong to the most violent and noisy section, he will be repudiated as an improper representative of the creed.

Supposing the Board duly constituted, the members must, of course, hold their offices during pleasure. There is danger that such a Board will be too timid or too feeble to act with vigour and impartially. They will be unable to withstand the pressure that may be brought to bear upon them, either directly or through the medium of the Government.

It may be asked, are not the officers of the present Board who substantially administer the system, subject to the same disadvantages, since they are liable to be deprived of their places? I answer, they are not. They are responsible to the Board, which understands the business, and can calmly decide upon their conduct; but that responsibility, while it is useful in keeping them alive to their duties, is an ample protection against the clamours of ignorance and prejudice. Such clamours will always be directed against the Board itself, which is strong enough to disregard them. A Board composed entirely of officials will be either too weak or too strong—too weak if removable, too strong if irremovable.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

M. Longfield.

III.

Letter from Right Hon. W. H. Monsell, M.P., Under Secretary of State for the Colonies, upon the Constitution of the Board of Commissioners of National Education.

19th February, 1869.

My Dear Sir,—I am much obliged to the Commissioners for the wish they have expressed through you, that I should state to them my opinions on the Irish National system.

As I have already told you, my opinions on most of the questions connected with it are to be found in Hansard.

On one point only, I should wish to add a few words. I am told that an attempt may be made to substitute for the present National Board two or three paid Commissioners.

No doubt a large Board is a bad instrument of administration, it prevents individual responsibility. Many of the present Commissioners are generally too much occupied with other duties to be able to pay much attention to the details of the system over which they preside; a few of them live far from Dublin and can rarely attend Board meetings. I do not undervalue these considerations, but I am convinced that the substitution of a paid Board for the present one, however it might improve the administration of the National system, would certainly be the means of its overthrow.

The effect of such a change would be to place the supreme direction of Irish Education in the hands of the State, that is to say, of the Government of the day. Party considerations would have their influence with Governments, and, before long, the paid Board would be brought into conflict with the conscientious convictions of the Irish people.

The National Board has great power. It has the appointment of the inspectors, upon whose reports depend the pecuniary interest and the advancement or degradation of the teachers. In a necessarily elastic system, which could not work if it did not accommodate itself to the various circumstances of different parts of the country, the administrative body must be almost omnipotent. It might make the teachers efficient instruments to form the minds of their scholars upon its own type. It might spread indifferentism and discourage national sympathies. The present Board does nothing of the sort. It is composed of a number of independent minds, representing the various habits of thought in Ireland. Every one who has a grievance knows that his case will be fairly stated by a person whose sympathies are not enlisted against his opinions or principles. Practical considerations have far more weight than theories, however specious, in guiding the decisions of the Board. It aims at what is possible, rather than what is best in the abstract.

I am afraid that with a paid Board all this would be very much changed. It would be more influenced by the ideas of the Government than by the wants or convictions of the people; and if it came, as it would come, into collision with those wants and convictions, it would infallibly succumb. It certainly would, from the outset, fail to command public confidence, and in its failure would share the fate of those numerous institutions that, founded with the best intentions, have been good for little else except to swallow up public money, because they were not adapted to the people for whose benefit they were established. I am firmly convinced that an independent Board, composed of men who would never submit to dictation from any Government, is a conditio sine quâ non of a successful system of education in Ireland.

I remain, &c.,

D. B. Dunne, esq., Secretary, &c. W. H. Monsell.

IV.

Correspondence with R. R. W. Lingen, Esq., C.B., at the time Secretary to the Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council on Education; including Queries addressed to him by the Royal Commission, and his Replies to the same.

In February, 1869, Mr. Lingen was invited by the Royal Commission to give Evidence on the System of Primary Education in England. In reply, he professed his willingness to give all the information, but he said the Lord President authorized him to state that his "absence for several days from London at that time of the year would be inconvenient to the service of the Department." He continued:—

"I may, perhaps, be permitted to draw the attention of your Commission to the circumstance that I have recently given the most detailed evidence upon education in Great Britain (of Ireland I possess no personal knowledge beyond a visit for a few weeks, not to schools, 26 years ago), before the following Committees or Commissions, and that I hardly know what I could add to it:—

"Report (1861) of Royal Commission to inquire into Education (Primary) in England, vol. vi., questions 1–641.

"Report of Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Education of Destitute Children. Session 1861, No. 460; Questions 3729–4076.

"Report of Select Committee of the House of Commons on Education. Session 1865, No. 403; Questions 1–582. Session 1866, No. 392; Questions 3435–3644.

"First Report of Royal Commission to inquire into Schools in Scotland, 1865, pp. 322, 339.

"Report, 1868, of Royal Commission to inquire into Middle Class Schools, vol. v.; Questions 13048–13164.

"Report of Select Committee of the House of Commons, on Technical Education. Session 1868, No. 432; Questions 693–827.

"If there remains anything which I know, and not stated in the course of these examinations, I am ready to add it, in obedience to your Commission, either by attending before the Commissioners, or by replying to such written questions as they may see fit to propose to me."

The Royal Commissioners dispensed with the personal attendance of Mr. Lingen; but forwarded to him a "Schedule of Queries, embodying certain points upon which they desired further information, which they requested him to answer in such a way as he would consider best calculated to assist the Commissioners in their inquiry."

The following are the Queries and Mr. Lingen's Replies:—

Queries addressed to R. R. W. Lingen, Esq., by the Royal Commission.

A.

1. Must a National system of education, to be efficient, look for local management for its schools?

2. Is it necessary that schools, locally managed, should be under such regulations that the clergy of different denominations may be managers, if they desire it?

3. Is there any other means of carrying on the system?

4. If it be essential to conciliate the good will of the ministers of religion, ought every school also to be subject to a stringent conscience clause, in order that the State funds may not be used for proselytizing purposes?

5. With such a conscience clause, may the local managers be left to carry out the religious instruction in such way, and at such times as they think proper; or does your experience lead you to the conclusion, that the State should lay down rules as to confining religious instruction to certain hours of the day?

6. Would it be necessary, in your opinion, that the State should exercise any control over the books to be used in National schools, in order to prevent a conscience clause from becoming practically inoperative?

7. Would such a plan secure—(1) freedom to the teacher; (2) freedom for the taught; the two essential points to be kept in view in a just and well-balanced system?

8. Could such a system be described as "Secular quoad the State" with perfect freedom for religious teaching, and no infringement on rights of conscience?

9. Do you consider that local support should be required in the way of money contribution in all cases—(1) a certain amount per head of children in school; (2) or a certain per-centage of total expenditure?

B.

1. In any system of National Education supported by State contribution, should there, in your opinion, be any provision made by the State, by which the children of parents of different religious denominations—the subjects of the same State—should be instructed together in the elementary branches of secular instruction—that is to say, reading, writing, and arithmetic—without being exposed to any danger of having directly taught to them, or indirectly inculcated upon them, any religious opinions, or dogma of religious belief contrary to the creed of their respective parents?

2. If your answer to the preceding query be in the affirmative, state the particular provision which in your opinion is calculated most effectively to secure such children against any teaching contrary to the creed of their parents respectively?

3. Does the conscience clause, inserted in conveyances of premises held by trustees of schools receiving building grants from the Committee of Privy Council on Education in England in your opinion afford adequate protection to any children frequenting such schools against any teaching contrary to the religious opinions of their respective parents, such parents holding religious opinions not in accordance with those of the manager or trustees of any such school?

4. Can such conscience clause afford such protection, if in the same schools there are employed in the giving of such secular instruction to all the children attending the same, books in which the peculiar religious tenets and dogmatic opinions of any particular denomination are expressly taught, or indirectly inculcated, to which the parents of some of the children attending such school, and receiving such peculiar instruction, do not belong?

5. Should the manager of any National school receiving State support, in your opinion, have the right to refuse secular instruction, that is to say, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, to any child of parents holding religious opinions opposed to those of such manager, unless such parents consent that their child shall be taught the religious opinions held by such manager?

6. Has the minister of any religious denomination, being also the manager of a National school receiving State support, any right, as such manager, to require that the child of any parents, not belonging to the religious denomination of such minister, shall as a condition of such child being instructed in the elementary branches of secular instruction as aforesaid, also receive religious instruction according to the creed of the denomination to which such manager, being also a minister, may belong?

Replies of Mr. Lingen to preceding Queries.

A.

1. Must a National system of education, to be efficient, look for local management for its schools?

1. Yes; provision is made for local management of some kind or other, even in the educational systems of countries where the Executive Government is far stronger, and the number of officers at its disposal is far greater, than in the United Kingdom.

2. Is it necessary that schools locally managed, should be under such regulations that the clergy of different denominations may be managers, if they desire it?

2. If the word "managers" means "sole managers," I do not consider such a provision to be necessary.

One consequence of such a provision must be, if the State is to act impartially among the different orders of clergy, in a country of divided religious opinion, to tear the denominational system to its last rags.

The "necessary" part of this question for the State to consider is, that the clergy represent, locally and otherwise, one of the de facto powers which must not be overlooked in providing for a settlement.

I should consider it to be both impolitic and unjust to exclude any person from the management of a school, for no other reason than that he was a clergyman. Of course, this is a very different thing from giving him a share in the management because he is a clergyman.

The ex-officio representation of the clergy, in the managing bodies of schools, I believe to be necessary, if the school course is to include specific religious, as well as secular, instruction—and not only so, but, as I stated in my evidence before the Select Committee of the House of Commons,* I believe it to be "impossible for a clergyman to act under a scheme by which the religious instruction of a school is left at the disposal of an open committee, and that, if you are to have him at all, you must make a more distinctive position for him." In fact, he must be chaplain of the school; and, being that, it is prudent to make him one of the general managers also. The ordinary trust deeds of schools connected with the Established Church in England are so framed. The principal officiating minister has the superintendence of the moral and religious instruction, but in all other respects the management of the school is vested in a committee, of which he is a member ex-officio. The official precedent (B) is appended for reference. (See Appendix No. 1.)

* Select Committee of the House of Commons on Education (1866). Questions 3641–2.

3. Is there any other means of carrying on the system?

3. If the school course is not to include specific religious instruction, there is no need to represent the clergy ex-officio in the management, except for the sake of conciliation.

4. If it be essential to conciliate the good will of the ministers of religion, ought every school also to be subject to a stringent conscience clause, in order that the State funds may not be used for proselytizing purposes?

4. There can be no question that to make specific, or any religious instruction part of the school course, and not to add thereto a stringent conscience clause, may involve the unequal treatment of persons (not necessarily of churches) professing different religious creeds; and therefore, in schools supported wholly, or in part, by the State, may involve political injustice also, so long as the equal treatment of such persons is professed by the constitution. If I am a Roman Catholic parent, within reach of none but a Protestant school (or vice versa), without an effective conscience clause, it is very small comfort to tell me that Roman Catholic and Protestant promoters can obtain grants on equal terms. The parent's right calls for direct and ubiquitous protection. I refer to my answer to question B, 5.

5. With such a conscience clause, may the local managers be left to carry out the religious instruction in such way, and at such times as they think proper; or does your experience lead you to the conclusion, that the State should lay down rules as to confining religious instruction to certain hours of the day?

5. My experience would lead me to say that a stringent conscience clause is sufficient, without further interference with the discretion of managers. But then, I speak from experience of England, whose denominations are many, fairly equal in resources, and in the main, agreed about what Protestants consider essential. It might be very different in a country occupied by two hostile religious camps; with most of its property (lay, not clerical only) in the one, and most of its people in the other.

6. Would it be necessary, in your opinion, that the State should exercise any control over the books to be used in National schools, in order to prevent a conscience clause from becoming practically inoperative?

6. I refer to my last answer. I should regard such control only as a pis aller, and not justifiable but by necessity. At most, it should not extend beyond a veto. In this, and in all the cognate questions of the conscience clause, I regard it as vital that appeals should lie to the Judicial, not to the Executive power of the State.

7. Would such a plan secure—(1) freedom to the teacher; (2) freedom for the taught; the two essential points to be kept in view in a just and well-balanced system?

7. Yes, I think so, within the limits of reason, on both sides. Courts of law have means of discouraging frivolous and vexatious appeals, as well as of redressing injustice.

It might be well, however, to empower, for the sake of the poor, the Executive Government to take up an appellant's case, at their discretion, and to conduct it in the proper court at the public expense; the right of the appellant to proceed on his own account being independent of the refusal of the Government to take up his case.

8. Could such a system be described as "Secular quoad the State" with perfect freedom for religious teaching, and no infringement on rights of conscience?

8. I do not see why it should not be so described.

9. Do you consider that local support should be required in the way of money contribution in all cases—(1) a certain amount per head of children in school; (2) or a certain per-centage of total expenditure?

9. Local support should in all cases be insisted on; compulsory, if it cannot otherwise be obtained. It is the only guarantee for common sense and economy on the part of the indispensable local administrators. (See answer to question No. 1.) The conditions proposed in the question should not be applied to the local support, but to the State support. State support should depend on the results obtained by examination in a school, and under a teacher of prescribed quality. The amount of the State support thus accruing should never exceed (it might or might not equal) either of the two limits which the conditions proposed in the question would impose. The balance, whatever it may be, should be locally raised. I include fees paid by the scholars under the head of local support.

Shortly before the end of each year the treasurer of a school ought to make his Dr. and Cr. estimate for the next year, e.g., estimated cost of school, as under heads detailed, so much. Towards this cost, from fees of the scholars, so much. From the Government grant, so much. From other sources, so much. Balance to be subscribed, so much.

This balance ought to be raised, and in hand, before the year begins. It should be, in some way or other, proportionably assessed upon the contributories. Nothing can be less satisfactory than the blind way in which subscriptions are usually collected. No one knows for certain how much is wanted; nor to meet what precise charges; nor how much other people are going to give; nor consequently, whether the utmost he can afford, or an almost nominal sum, or nothing at all (a possible case), is what he ought himself to put down. Whether or not school rates are established, local subscriptions should be raised on some adaptation of the rating principle to the parish, to the congregation, or to whatever be the educational unit; else there never can be a trustworthy source of income, but acting-managers will always be apt to be left personally responsible for heavy adverse balances. The Inspector's reports, and the manager's accounts of past, and estimates of future expenditure, should be required to be printed, circulated to contributors, and made accessible to the public.

B.

1. In any system of National Education supported by State contribution, should there, in your opinion, be any provision made by the State, by which the children of parents of different religious denominations—the subjects of the same State—should be instructed together in the elementary branches of secular instruction—that is to say reading, writing, and arithmetic—without being exposed to any danger of having directly taught to them, or indirectly inculcated upon them, any religious opinions, or dogma of religious belief contrary to the creed of their respective parents?

1. If "provision" means that the State should insist upon all its members receiving the minimum of secular instruction, without which they cannot be profitable or safe citizens, I hold that it is the duty of the State to insist upon thus much. But if "provision" means that the central government, as distinct from the local areas concerned, should find all the means, that is not my opinion. (See answer to question 9. A.)

As to "together," I regard that only as a question of means. (See answers A 4, and B 5.) If the end can be achieved more easily in separate schools, and if the population and its resources are sufficient to admit of them, I do not think it worth while to contend for united as the only schools. But I would never dispense with the demand for the minimum of education, nor accept a lower standard of it, nor give any extra public assistance, for the sake of enabling the supporters of separate schools to establish or maintain them.

2. If your answer to the preceding query be in the affirmative, state the particular provision which in your opinion is calculated most effectively to secure such children against any teaching contrary to the creed of their parents respectively?

2. Schools purely secular, or a stringent conscience clause applied to those which are not so; such clause to be supplemented by whatever further regulations exceptional circumstances may make necessary to accomplish its object. (See answers to questions 3–7, A.)

3. Does the conscience clause, inserted in conveyances of premises held by trustees of schools receiving building grants from the Committee of Privy Council on Education in England in your opinion afford adequate protection to any children frequenting such schools against any teaching contrary to the religious opinions of their respective parents, such parents holding religious opinions not in accordance with those of the manager or trustees of any such school?

3. The precedents for the trust deeds of schools built with the aid of grants from the Committee of Council include various forms of conscience clause, according to the denomination of the school. (See Appendix No. 2.) The greater part of the clauses now in use were not framed by the Committee of Council, but were tendered to their lordships by the representatives of the various classes of schools, proprio motu.

The clause proposed by the Committee of Council to the National Society, Lord Granville's amendment to the conscience clause in the Government Bill of 1868, and the clause in Mr. Bruce's Bill of the same year, are all, I think, effective for their object. But I should prefer to see this subject dealt with, once for all, by Parliament's enacting such a clause for the whole of the United Kingdom, overriding every special clause of the kind, and to be construed as ipso facto, part of the trusts or regulations of every school thenceforth to receive public aid in any form whatever. It is a source of never-failing irritation to have different forms for comparison between different denominations. The object is everywhere the same; that wherever the State offers, or helps to offer, education, the terms of sharing in it shall be such as do not interfere with the parent's right to determine whether his child shall also receive, or take part in, the religious instruction (if any), or the religious observances (if any), which form part of such education or are joined with it. (See answers to questions 6, 7, A.)

4. Can such conscience clause afford such protection, if in the same schools there are employed in the giving of such secular instruction to all the children attending the same, books in which the peculiar religious tenets and dogmatic opinions of any particular denomination are expressly taught, or indirectly inculcated, to which the parents of some of the children attending such school, and receiving such peculiar instruction, do not belong?

4. Books of secular instruction do not honestly fall within that description which expressly teach, or indirectly inculcate peculiar religious tenets. Books written by authors who are masters of the secular subject in question, and whose object is to teach it, are rarely open to such objection. Books which go beyond secular limits, become, in fact, religious books, and create the same occasion for a conscience clause as if they were so in name. No court, which had to enforce such a clause as is assumed throughout these answers, could suffer its intention to be defeated by fraud of this kind. History is the only secular subject that offers matter for doubt. But nothing could well be imagined more condemnatory of denominational education than that its scholars must not receive in common even so much of the history of their own country as children can understand. As to other secular subjects of elementary instruction, such as geography, grammar, drawing, music, the suggestion often made that a religiously-minded teacher cannot instruct children in them consistently with a conscience clause, in reality comes to this—either the intention to proselytize, or the desire to hide under preaching the want of more appropriate matter. In writing and arithmetic, the pretence becomes absurd. Akin to this question is the consideration that every effective conscience clause must provide, in positive terms, that the children of Dissenters shall be admitted to the school, and must not be confined to a negative provision that they may be withdrawn from such lessons as their parents object to on religious grounds. All lessons may be made objectionable on such grounds where there is the desire to do so.

It is of great practical importance to bear constantly in mind that a well-drawn conscience clause should prohibit nothing which the parties themselves do not differ over. It is inoperative until they differ.

5. Should the manager of any National school receiving State support, in your opinion, have the right to refuse secular instruction, that is to say, in reading, writing, and arithmetic, to any child of parents holding religious opinions opposed to those of such manager, unless such parents consent that their child shall be taught the religious opinions held by such manager?

5. Certainly not, as a question of right. But as a question of expediency and compromise, it might be worth while to allow it to be an answer (the onus probandi lying on the respondent) to an appeal under a conscience clause, that another school receiving State support was equally accessible to the appellant, and would meet his religious difficulty. If experience proved that this allowance interfered with the practical security intended by the clause, it should be withdrawn.

6. Has the minister of any religious denomination, being also the manager of a National school receiving State support, any right, as such manager, to require that the child of any parents not belonging to the religious denomination of such minister, shall as a condition of such child being instructed in the elementary branches of secular instruction as aforesaid, also receive religious instruction according to the creed of the denomination to which such manager, being also a minister, may belong?

6. I understand the question to mean "ought he to have the right?" Of course, in a school settled upon such trusts as those set forth in the precedent (B) annexed, the minister has the legal right to require that every scholar receive religious instruction from him; and he has the political right also, as long as the State sees fit to support a school so constituted.

If, however, some inherent ex-officio right be intended, such a pretension, if well founded, is conclusive against all conscience clauses, and, therefore, no advocate of such clauses can admit it for a moment. The minister's right over a child is neither greater nor less than his right over its parent. Except in loco parentis, he has no such right.

Memorandum on Forms of Conscience Clause.

In the Minutes of the Committee of Council 1839–40, the earliest of the published volumes, various forms of trust deed are proposed, pp. 93–111.

[The deeds numbered 3, 4, and 7, contain conscience clauses.]

These forms of deed were gradually developed* into the precedents now in force. The last stage of that development involved the management clause controversy. For a succinct account, see letter No. 3, Minutes 1847–8, vol. I., p. lxxii.

But in 1839, the date at which the above list of precedents was put forth, they were not imposed as obligatory. The Committee of Council, however, always retained and exercised the right of approving the draft of whatever trust deed was to be executed before a building grant was paid. The list of forms in 1839 is prefaced thus:—

The following forms of conveyance have been prepared by the direction of the Committee of Council, to facilitate the conveyance of sites of school-houses, intended to be erected, with aid from the Parliamentary Grant for promoting public education in Great Britain.

The conscience clauses in Nos. 3, 4, 7, are as follow:—

No. 3 (page 99).—Conveyance of a Site or Buildings to Trustees for a Parish School, not being in connexion with the National Society or the British and Foreign School Society.

And it is hereby further declared, that it shall be a fundamental regulation and practice of the said school that the Bible be daily read therein by the children, and that instruction in the Church Catechism, and in the doctrines and principles of the Church of England, shall at suitable times, at least in every week, be regularly given to all the children in the said school whose parents or guardians shall not on religious grounds object thereto, such religious instruction to be under the superintendence and direction of the minister for the time being of the parish: Provided always, that no child shall be required to receive or be present at such religious instruction whose parent or guardian shall object thereto on religious grounds, and that no child shall in any case be required to learn any catechism or other religious formulary, or to attend any Sunday school or place of worship to which respectively his or her parent or guardian shall, on religious grounds, object; but the selection of such Sunday school and place of worship shall, in all cases, be left to the free choice of such parent or guardian, without the child's thereby incurring any loss of the benefits or privileges of the school, the trusts whereof are hereby declared.

No. 4 (page 101).—Conveyance of a Site or Buildings to Trustees for a Church of England School, not being a parish school, nor in connexion with the National or British and Foreign School Society.

Same conscience clause as in No. 3 (supra).

No. 7 (page 108).—Conveyance of a Site or Buildings to Trustees for a School, not being a parish school, nor in connexion with the National or British and Foreign School Society.

And it is hereby further declared, that it shall be a fundamental regulation and practice of the said school that the Bible be daily read therein by the children, and that no child shall be required to learn any catechism or other religious formulary, or to attend any Sunday school or place of worship to which respectively his or her parent or guardian shall on religious grounds object, but the selection of such Sunday school and place of worship shall in all cases be left to the free choice of such parent or guardian, without the child's thereby incurring any loss of the benefits and privileges of the school, the trusts whereof are hereby declared.

The conscience clauses are reprinted in the volume of Minutes I, 1844, verbatim.

The more precisely worded deeds now in use were settled by the Minute of 28th June, 1847 (and subsequent correspondence) for National and British schools, and the various precedents in use for schools of other denominations were settled between that date and 1853.

Of these the precedents for Church of England (including National) schools, for Scotch Episcopal schools, and for Roman Catholic schools, do not contain conscience clauses; the rest do, viz.:—

1. British School Precedent.

This precedent contains a conscience clause by implication in the words of the trust—"shall be conducted upon the principles of the British and Foreign School Society, established in London."

The society has never been incorporated, and its principles have never been (so far as I know) put forth in any one authorized formula. But in official correspondence† with the Lord President (Lord Wharncliffe) in 1841, the committee of the society describes itself in these terms:—

"The committee of the British and Foreign School Society, in soliciting a continuance of the aid hitherto afforded them by Her Majesty's Government in the promotion of education, are desirous of respectfully laying before your lordships a brief statement of their principles and operations.

"The society was established in the year 1808. Its aim is to impart a sound and useful elementary education to the children of the labouring poor. The daily reading and teaching of the Sacred Scriptures forms an essential part of the instruction given.

"Its principles are in every respect unsectarian; the introduction of the Scriptures, and the exclusion of the formularies of any particular Church, appearing to them sound in principle, and most likely to unite the greatest possible number; that practice has been from the first adopted in all the schools of the society. . . . Maintaining, in the exercise of candour and charity, towards those who differ from them, the right of every British subject to sound elementary education, on principles alike consistent with reverence for truth and respect for conscience, they have always held that this might be accomplished on a national basis by the universal introduction of the Sacred Scriptures without note or comment."

* They do not purport to be complete, but are formed for the most part upon the supposition that further provisions defining the election and powers of managers, &c., will be added to them.

Wesleyan School Precedent.

That every such school shall regularly be opened and closed with devotional singing and prayer, in which the Wesleyan Methodist hymn-books shall be used; that the Holy Bible, comprising the Sacred Scriptures of both the Old and New Testaments in the Authorized version only, shall be read and used in such school or schools, accompanied with instruction therein by the teachers or visitors, or both; that for the purposes of catechetical instruction, the Wesleyan Methodist catechisms, authorized by the said yearly conference, shall be used in such school or schools; that Christian psalmody shall form a part of the daily exercises of the children and young persons in such school or schools. And subject and without prejudice to the trusts hereinbefore declared, the trustees and trustee for the time being, acting in the trusts of these presents, shall stand possessed of the hereditaments and premises hereby appointed, granted, and released.

Upon trust, to permit and suffer the same, with the appurtenances, to be used, occupied, and enjoyed, at such seasonable hours and times on the Lord's day as the said superintendent minister, for the time being, shall deem fit and proper as and for a Wesleyan Methodist Sunday school or schools, to be conducted and carried on under the general management of such committee and committees, teachers and officers, as now are or from time to time hereafter shall or may be appointed or constituted for the management of such Sunday school or schools, in conformity with the regulations either already or hereafter to be framed by the said yearly conference respecting Sunday schools in the said connexion, and which now are, or hereafter shall be, published in the printed annual minutes of the said conference.

And it is hereby declared that, unless prevented by illness or other unavoidable hindrance, the children of such week-day and Sunday school or schools shall attend public worship in some chapel or place of religious worship of the said Wesleyan Methodist connexion every Sabbath, subject nevertheless to the proviso next hereinafter contained (that is to say),

Provided always, and it is hereby declared, that no child shall in any case be required to learn any catechism or other religious formulary, or to attend any Sunday school or place of worship to which respectively his or her parent or guardian shall, on religious grounds, object; but the selection of such Sunday school, or place of worship, shall, in all cases, be left to the free choice of such parent or guardian, without the child thereby incurring any loss of the benefits or privileges of any school or schools, the trusts whereof are hereby declared.

Jewish School Precedent.

Upon trust to permit the said premises, and all buildings thereon erected or to be erected, to be for ever hereafter appropriated and used as and for a school for the education, as well religious as secular, of children and adults, or children only, belonging to the labouring, manufacturing, and other poorer classes in or within miles of the town of in the county of the religious instruction in the said school to be given according to the principles of the Jewish religion, but not to be made compulsory upon any scholar whose parents do not profess that religion.

Free Church (of Scotland) School Precedent.

Provided always, that the said school shall be open to the children of all classes who may wish to avail themselves of it, and that religious instruction shall be given therein according to such regulations as may be laid down from time to time by the General Assembly of the said Free Church. And provided also, that no child shall be required to be present at the instruction given from the Bible, whose parent or guardian shall object thereto, or be required to learn any catechism, or other religious formulary, or to attend any Sunday school or place of worship to which his or her parents or guardians respectively shall object.

Undenominational School Precedent.

And it is hereby further declared that it shall be a fundamental regulation and practice of the said school that the Bible be daily read therein, and that no child shall be required to learn any catechism, or other religious formulary, or to attend any Sunday school or place of worship to which respectively his or her parent or guardian shall, on religious grounds, object, but the selection of such Sunday school and place of worship shall, in all cases, be left to the free choice of such parent or guardian, without the child's thereby incurring any loss of the benefits and privileges of the school, the trusts whereof are hereby declared.

Established Church (of Scotland) School Precedent.

Same conscience clause as last above.

In considering all these clauses, the context of each trust deed must be regarded.

The form of conscience clause recommended in the recent correspondence with the National School Society, is taken mainly from the Endowed Schools Act of 1860, which was passed with the consent of the bishops. It had thus the prestige of recent legislation to recommend it, and it avoids the difficulty which most clergymen would feel in resting under the obligation of teaching any child out of the Bible who was not also to be taught the full doctrine of the Church. The first clause of the Endowed Schools Act contains the following words:—

I. It shall be lawful for the trustees or governors of every endowed school from time to time to make, and they shall be bound to make such orders as, whilst they shall not interfere with the religious teaching of the other scholars as now fixed by statute or other legal requirement, and shall not authorize any religious teaching other than that previously afforded in the school, shall nevertheless provide for admitting to the benefits of the school the children of parents not in communion with the Church, sect, or denomination, according to the doctrines or formularies of which religious instruction is to be afforded under the endowment of the said school.

The Conscience Clause proposed to the National Society is the second of the two following; for, in the absence of any settlement with the representatives of the Church, promoters who prefer the undenominational form are allowed to have it. The second form does not exclude such an arrangement as the first form prescribes. The second form allows whatever the managers and parents can agree upon, or do not disagree upon Alternative Conscience Clauses.

(Old Form.)

And it is hereby declared that the instruction of the said school shall comprise at least the following branches of school learning, namely, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, Scripture history, and (in the case of girls) needlework; and it is hereby further declared that it shall be a fundamental regulation and practice of the said school that the Bible be daily read therein, and that no child shall be required to learn any catechism or other religious formulary, or to attend any Sunday school or place of worship to which respectively his or her parent or other person having the custody of such child shall, on religious grounds, object; but the selection of such Sunday school and place of worship shall in all cases be left to the free choice of such parent or person without the child's thereby incurring any loss of the benefits and privileges of the school, the trusts whereof are hereby declared.

Or (as proposed in Correspondence between the Committee of Council on Education and the National Society).

"The said committee shall be bound to make such orders as shall provide for admitting to the benefits of the school the children of parents not in communion with the* Church of England as by law established; but such orders shall be confined to the exemption of such children, if their parents desire it, from attendance at the public worship, and from instruction in the doctrine or formularies of the said Church,* and shall not otherwise interfere with the religious teaching of the scholars, as fixed by these presents, and shall not authorize any other religious instruction to be given in the school."

Conscience Clause in the Government Bill, 1868.

(Section 12). All questions connected with the nature, amount, and character of the religious instruction to be given in any school towards the erection of which a building grant has been made shall be decided exclusively by the person or persons who may be invested with authority in that behalf by the clauses in the trust deed relating to the management thereof, and nothing in this Act contained shall authorize the Secretary of State or any other person to interfere therewith: Provided always, that if the Secretary of State shall be of opinion that when the proposed school is established it will be the only public elementary school available for the education of poor children residing within a distance convenient for purposes of attendance, or that there is within such a distance of the school any considerable number of children for whom no suitable means of education are likely to be provided, and whose parents are likely to object upon religious grounds to the religious instruction intended to be given, or to the religious worship intended to be used in the proposed school, the trust deed must, in addition to the clause relating to management hereinbefore referred to, contain a clause providing that no child resident within limits to be fixed in each case by the Secretary of State shall be excluded from the school, or deprived of any of the benefits or privileges connected with attendance thereat, on account of the religious persuasion of the said child, or of the parent, guardian, or other person having the custody or care of such child, or on account of the withdrawal of such child from any part of the instruction given or worship held therein under the provision hereinafter contained, and that no such child shall be compelled to attend any Sunday school or church or other place of worship as a condition of receiving instruction on week-days, and that any such parent or guardian or other person as aforesaid shall have a right to withdraw such child from any lesson given or from any form of worship or religious service used in any such school, upon giving notice in writing to the principal teacher of the said school, that he the said parent, guardian, or other person as aforesaid objects to such lesson or form of worship or religious service upon religious grounds.

Lord Granville's Amendment to the Conscience Clause in the Government Bill, 1868.

Whenever a school is aided by a building grant its managers shall be thenceforth bound to make such orders or establish such a course of practice as without interfering with the religious teaching of the other scholars according to the constitution of the school in that behalf, and without authorizing any other religious teaching than that sanctioned by such constitution, shall nevertheless provide for admitting to the benefits of the school the children of parents not in communion with the church, sect, or denomination according to the doctrines or formularies of which religious instruction is to be afforded according to the constitution of the school.

As long as any school is aided by an annual grant its managers shall be bound to make such orders or establish such a course of practice as without interfering with the religious teaching of the other scholars according to the constitution of the school in that behalf, and without authorizing any other religious teaching than that sanctioned by such constitution, shall nevertheless provide for admitting to the benefits of the school the children of parents not in communion with the church, sect, or denomination according to the doctrines or formularies of which religious instruction is to be afforded according to the constitution of the school.

Conscience Clause in Bill introduced by Mr. Henry A. Bruce, Mr. William E. Forster, and Mr. Algernon Egerton, Session 1868.

(Section 40.) No scholar attending the school, with whatsoever church or religious denomination such school may be connected, shall be required, when attending the school, to learn any catechism or religious formulary to which objection has been made as provided by this section, or to be present at any lesson, instruction, or observance to which such objection has been made on religious grounds. The said objection may be made by some writing sent to the managers or teachers of the school, or one of them, signed by the parent of such scholar, and if the signature is only a mark, with the mark attested by a witness; and no scholar attending the school shall be required as an attendant of such school to attend or to abstain from attending any Sunday school or any place of religious worship.

No scholar on tendering the proper weekly fee (if any) shall be refused admission into the school for any reason whatever, except that the scholar cannot either from some mental or physical incapacity receive instruction in the ordinary way, or has been convicted of some crime, or has been expelled from some school: Provided that a scholar may be expelled from the school for misconduct.

* Or as the case may be.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH THE BISHOPS

EXTRACT from INTRODUCTION to the REPORT. (Vol. I., page 12.)

"The religious circumstances of Ireland have produced difficulty in making satisfactory arrangements for the education of all classes of Your Majesty's subjects in that country. We therefore thought it desirable to communicate the Commission which we had received to the heads of the several religious denominations, and to request their co-operation in conducting our inquiry. We caused a letter to be addressed to the Bishops of the Established Church, to the Roman Catholic Bishops, and to the Moderators and Presidents of the Presbyterian and other religious bodies, enclosing a copy of the Commission, and expressing our hope that in the conduct of our inquiry we might have the advantage of their assistance, and receive from them such facilities as their position and office enabled them to afford. Several of the personages to whom this letter was sent contented themselves with acknowledging its receipt merely, indicating at most in a general way the direction of their opinions upon primary education. Only one—the Roman Catholic Bishop of Kerry—addressed to the Commissioners a detailed statement, expressing his views as to some portions of the operations of the National Board, and suggesting certain alterations.

"At a later period of the inquiry it was thought advisable to renew this invitation to the Bishops, in the hope that if they could not personally attend to give evidence before the Commission, they would address some written statement of their opinions or depute some person who might represent their views. Nearly all the Bishops acknowledged its receipt in courteous terms. A few sent replies which contained a personal statement of opinion. Some suggested the names of persons who could give useful evidence. Some of the Bishops of the Established Church referred to the Church Education Society as embodying their views of what a sound system of primary education should be; and the Bishops of Ossory and of Down and Connor attended personally, and gave evidence before the Commission. Some of the Roman Catholic Prelates referred the Commissioners, for the expression of their opinions, to correspondence which had, upon different occasions, passed between them and Your Majesty's Ministers, and which has been already published; and especially to a letter addressed upon 18th March, 1860, to the Right Hon. Edward Cardwell, then Chief Secretary for Ireland, and also to another letter, under date 14th January, 1866, to the Right Hon. Sir George Grey, Bart., then Your Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department. At different periods also of the Commission, his Eminence Cardinal Cullen, Bishop Keane, and Bishop Dorrian, attended personally and gave evidence.

"The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, and the authorities of some of the other denominations, when acknowledging our original circular letter, submitted to us lists of witnesses whom they proposed for examination, as representing their respective views upon most of the points of the inquiry. We subsequently selected certain persons out of those lists and examined them."

The Palace, Killarney, June 10th, 1868.

GENTLEMEN,—You conveyed to me, some time since, a request from the members of the Royal Commission on Primary Education that I would give evidence on the important subjects which have been referred to them for inquiry.

It would be particularly inconvenient for me to attend in person, and I therefore pray the kind indulgence of the Commission to allow me to submit in writing the few suggestions I wish to offer.

The fundamental principles on which the National system is founded have been so amply discussed by abler men that the expression of my views would be only waste of time. I will therefore confine myself to some practical observations on the working of the system.

1. It seems to me that there is unnecessary difficulty and delay in procuring grants for the building and repairs of National schools. I apprehend that this is caused by the necessity of reference to the different offices of education and of the Board of Works. I have known cases where the Board of Education consented to give the grant, where there was no difficulty or delay on the part of the proprietor, and yet a long time intervened from the first application to the supplying of the architect's plans. This is a cause of discouragement to the promoters and of disappointment to the people. As temporary means of education are not easily provided, a number of children who are at the age to frequent school lose their only opportunity of doing so in consequence of these delays. When there is question of building, a short time may, no doubt, be required for the necessary inquiries and legal formalities, but there can be no sufficient reason for delaying necessary repairs. School-houses may not unfrequently be seen for many months with window-panes broken, ridge-tiles blown away, or otherwise damaged. The damage increases with the delay, until the cost of reparation becomes serious, and in the meantime there is an absence of comfort and decency. If I am correctly informed the most trifling repairs cannnot be effected without an official correspondence and inspection, involving loss of time, loss of property, and much expense. The inconvenience might be met by allowing the manager or Local Inspector to order repairs within a certain limited amount; or by giving a few pounds a year to the teachers on condition that they keep the school-house in perfect order.

2. I think it would be wise and advantageous for all parties concerned to have the schools, vested in trustees under the recent form of lease, kept in repair at the expense of the Board of Education.

It is not necessary to enter into the reasons for which the clergy object to vesting schools in the Board in its corporate capacity. Suffice it to say that the changes which took place in the rules justify a fear that such further change might take place as would necessitate our withdrawal from the system. We therefore prefer non-vested schools, or schools vested in trustees, which in that event, should still remain in our possession. Building grants are given for schools vested in trustees on condition that if withdrawn from connexion with the Board the money advanced shall be repaid. Now, if the managers or trustees allow the school to go to ruin, I suspect the Board would have little chance, in many cases, of recovering their money; but if the school is kept in repair by the Board it will be a material guarrantee or pledge ensuring repayment.

3. The next subject to which I would invite the attention of Her Majesty's Commissioners is the payment of teachers. Considering the laborious nature of their occupations, the great services they render, the opportunities of advancement held out to them in America and Australia, the very small amount received from pupils or other local resources, we cannot expect that our teachers will remain in this country, content with their present moderate salaries. An Australian bishop told me a few days ago that the teachers in his diocese have about £200 a year, and that they are nearly all ex-National teachers from Ireland.

If it were possible to have suitable residences for the teachers, rent free, and near the schools, their position would be bettered and their efficiency increased. In country districts they have often to walk three or four miles to their schools with much fatigue and loss of time.

4. I have been long anxious to see the teachers paid partly by results. I say partly, for I wish that their salary should be based also on classification, that they may be induced to attend to their literary improvement and to keep up the habit of study. But unless the teacher is paid in part by results, including the number and progress of his pupils, he has little inducement to gather in the children of the district, to induce them by a kind paternal manner to continue at school, and to devote himself earnestly to their improvement.

5. The rate of payment to convent schools would seem to be intended as a positive discouragement to these institutions. Convent schools, wherever established, are the most numerously attended by the children of the poor. The education they give is that which the people value most, and the opportunities of observation which I have had lead me to think that the secular education given at convent schools is the most suitable and complete for our female population. Wherever a convent school is established the number of children educated is largely increased. According to the report of the Commissioners for 1858 the number of female children in the National school in Kenmare was—on the rolls, 113; in average daily attendance, 68. A convent school has been since established in that town, and, according to the report of 1866, the number on its rolls was 592; in average daily attendance, 361. I know that the daily attendance during the past few months has been over 400. Of course the ordinary female National school in Kenmare was suppressed, but it does not seem that the enormous increase I have stated was caused by the withdrawal of children from the surrounding schools. The total number of children in the four schools situated in the parish, but outside the town of Kenmare, viz., Cahir, Shelbourne, Gowlane, and Litter, was, according to the report of 1858—on the rolls, 263; in average daily attendance, 133; while in the same schools the number given in the report of 1866 is—on the rolls, 407; in daily attendance, 172. In Castletown Berehaven the female school numbered in 1858—on the rolls, 148; in daily, attendance 93. A convent has been since established in that small town. Its school numbers, by the report of 1866—on the rolls, 307; in daily attendance, 147. As the female National school still exists, with 78 on the rolls and 30 in daily attendance, the entire number of females receiving education in that town is—on the rolls, 385; in attendance, 177. In 1858 it was—on the rolls, 148; in attendance, 93. I have selected these two places as they are the only localities in this diocese where convent schools have been for the first time established since I became Bishop; and I have selected these dates, 1858 and 1866, as they are the only years previous and subsequent to the establishment of these convents, of which I have the reports at hand. Notwithstanding this efficiency and popularity of convent schools the scale of remuneration is £20 to the 100 children. There are other exceptional restrictions which seem unmeaning, unless they are intended as a positive discouragement to these institutions:—

1. No building grant can be obtained for a school to be conducted by nuns.
2. No salary is allowed for lay assistant teachers—they must be paid by the religious community; although in other schools, where the number of children may be much smaller, they are paid by the Board according to the scale laid down, p. iv., § 6.
3. Members of the religious community cannot receive a salary as industrial teachers in their own schools, although many of them are eminently qualified.
4. A religious community can have only one school connnected with it in the same locality.

It is manifest these rules are intended to prevent the Irish poor from having the education they are most willing to accept, and which is the best they get.

I feel a very special interest in this matter; for, with the exception of Dublin, no other diocese in Ireland has so large a number of children educated in convent schools. Seven thousand three hundred and thirty female children are on our convent school rolls in this diocese, about 200 nuns teach them; and yet the whole amount contributed by the Board in salaries, premiums, and other gratuities, is only £1,382 7*s.* 6*d.*, according to the report of 1866. Should the report be referred to, it must be noted that two convents, Millstreet and Castletown-Berehaven, situated in the county of Cork, are in this diocese.

I do not wish to see religious communities enjoy a monopoly of education. Monopolies like privileges, create jealousy and dislike, and always bring disaster; but such an extension of religious communities can not be expected either by those who fear them or by those who wish their welfare. The religious vocation is an exalted one, and the heroism which answers to it is rare in the world.

"All take not this word but they to whom it is given." Besides, the requirements of a convent render it difficult to establish one except towns.

I think I may add to all I have said on this subject, that in no schools under the Board are its rules more strictly and conscientiously observed than in convent schools.

6. In marked contrast to the discouragement shown to convent schools, the most efficient institutions for primary education in this country, is the special favour shown to model schools, certainly the least efficient relatively to the amount of money spent upon them. The annual reports of the Commissioners which tell the amount of money expended in building and maintaining model schools, and the small number of children attending them even in our most populous towns, and the well-known fact that those who do attend are not the children of the poor, sufficiently testify to their inefficiency. This inefficiency is the more to be lamented when we consider the great teaching power which thus goes to waste. We know that the masters are eminently qualified, that the method of instruction is excellent, that all material helps and appliances are largely and liberally supplied. As the schools are mostly situated in large towns we should expect them to be frequented by the children who are hereafter to supply the skilled labour of the country. The results should then be seen in improved industry and manufacture, and consequently in general prosperity. It seems to me certain that if the model schools became popular we should have a large and rapid advance in primary education. Here then is a double loss. The public money is wasted on institutions which the people reject; and the best teachers are placed where the people refuse to let their children learn. It matters little for the attainment of the end we have in view, whether the people are right or wrong in the judgment they have formed, or whether they are acting under good or bad advice; the fact remains that they shun the model schools, and that they will continue to shun them until they are sanctioned and approved by the Catholic hierarchy and clergy of Ireland. If a physician prescribed the most efficacious remedy, it would avail nothing if the patient refused to take it. In such a case the physician would have recourse to another remedy, or he would administer the impalatable one in another form. I suspect that if the Brahmins objected to a system of education for the people of India, and dissuade them from sending their children to the established schools, the Government would pay every heed to their objections, whether reasonable or foolish. It would be presumption on my part to say what changes in the model schools would remove the objections of the Catholic hierarchy; but I am inclined to think that such a modification of the rules as was proposed by Mr. Fortescue, when he was Chief Secretary for Ireland, would tend to produce this most desirable result. It occurs to me also that if, by a rule of the Board, the teachers in model schools should be of the religion of the majority of the children and should have a certificate of good conduct from a clergyman empowered by his bishop or other ecclesiastical superior to give it, public confidence in these institutions would be restored. We expect the managers of ordinary National schools to follow this fair and simple rule in the appointment of teachers. Why should not the Board follow it when it acts as manager?

As the solution of this question depends on many minds my suggestions must be considered purely conjectural.

One thing appears to me, however, very certain. The model schools are now rejected and disused, notwithstanding the immense educational advantages they offer, because the principle on which they are conducted seems to place education under a State control, which the people distrust, to the exclusion of the control of their clergy, whose guidance the people prefer. If this is the case now that the Board of Education is composed of gentlemen acting independently of the Crown and Government, who give their services to their country without pay or benefit to themselves, whose personal character and high position place them above all suspicion of subserviency, surely all hopes of rendering the model schools useful or available would utterly vanish if the National system were placed under the exclusive management of a few salaried Commissioners. It is true that fairness, ability, and an entire devotion to the cause of education, have marked the whole career of our only salaried Commissioner; but the general distrust of the system, even under his management, and with the protection afforded by the joint management of gentlemen whose devotion to their faith and Church is known to all, shows what we might expect if the whole system were placed in the hands of Government agents. The first article of political faith in this country is, that Government, in all departments, ever keeps one object in view, viz., to maintain the old religious ascendancy of a small section of the community. Hence a universal distrust in everything emanating from the State. Hence all hearty co-operation for the public weal between the governing and the governed, and especially between the civil rulers and the spiritual guides of the people, has been utterly impossible. Hence the whole social framework is disjointed, and every social energy paralyzed.

I have adverted to this possible change in the constitution of the Board, because it is said to be desired by some influential persons. A step more detrimental to the interests of education in this country could not be taken.

7. The present position of the training department deserves the best consideration of the Commission. The condemnation of the Queen's Colleges by the highest authority in the Church necessitated the condemnation by the bishops of the training institution. The cases are perfectly parallel. When there is question of teaching the mere rudiments or instruments of knowledge—reading, writing, and arithmetic—to a number of children who meet only for a few hours of the day at school, and who are for the rest of their time under parental control, the dangers of a mixed system may be comparatively remote; but when the higher branches of knowledge have to be learned, and when these intellectual pursuits are followed by persons domiciled under the same roof, there is danger of that suppression of truth, and of that concealment of religious profession and observance, which necessarily lead to religious indifference. The danger is manifestly greatest for those who believe most. If Anglicans were associated under such circumstances with Unitarians or Socinians, the necessity of avoiding topics of discussion would bring them down to the lower level. The shortest rule of faith would become the common denominator. However such danger might have been obviated in the past by careful religious ministrations, I believe no such help is now available. In this state the training institution must become mischievous, and yet its necessity for the formation of skilled male teachers is obvious. I say male teachers, because our convent schools supply us with most efficient female teachers. The training department must be denominational, or else non-vested model schools must be established for this purpose in many parts of the country.

8. We want a more frequent and efficient inspection. Rule 3, § vii., P. I., requires that after each inspection the District Inspector shall communicate with the local patron or manager. This is not done. It is obvious that three visits in the year do not constitute a sufficient surveillance, and unless the manager's attention is called to the improvements or corrections suggested by the Inspector the visits are likely to be fruitless.

In addition to the visits of the Inspector I would require every manager to visit personally or by deputy once a month the schools under his charge, and to make a monthly report of the attendance, of the progress of the children, of the efficiency of the teacher, and of the state of the building. I can suggest nothing which seems to me more calculated to increase the efficiency of the whole system. The advantages are so obvious that it is needless to dilate on them. A rule such as I propose could be enforced by not keeping any school in connexion with the Board in which it was not observed.

The duty thus imposed on the manager should not be considered too onerous, inasmuch as if hindered from discharging it in person he can employ any suitable deputy. The parish priest, for instance, when manager, could send his curate to make the visits. The reports might also be rendered easy by supplying printed forms to be filled, or printed queries to be answered. The National Council of Thurles directed a weekly visit to be made by either the parish priest or curate to all the schools within the parish. De par 20. The rule I propose would bring the manager into more active relation with the working of the schools, and would add considerably to his influence and to his authority over the teachers. It too often happens now that the manager is only the promoter, that his relation to the school practically ceases when the building is completed, and that the real management is then left to the teacher and Inspector.

9. The leading principle of the National system is to give secular education to the children of the humbler classes without interfering with their religious convictions; or, in other words, so to employ the funds allocated by the State for education that they may not be used for the purpose of proselytism. Hence the "conscience clause," which, to the opponents of the system, seems to impose too great a restriction on religious education. I cannot enter into this question; but it seems to me that, even accepting the principle of the system, some of the rules devised for carrying it out are unnecessary restrictions.

1. It is not necessary to prevent the performance of Divine worship on Sundays in a school-house.
2. The second clause of this rule, P. I., § iii., 2, is ambiguously worded. If it is intended to prohibit absolutely the celebration or administration of sacraments in a National school, or if this prohibition is not qualified by the words stated place in the foregoing part of the sentence, the rule is most unfair to Catholics, inasmuch as preaching and prayer meetings of Protestant Dissenters might be held in the school, provided it is not the stated place for them; but no sacramental rite which enters into Catholic worship could be celebrated there.
3. To prohibit the making of the sign of the cross by the children is, I must say, with due respect, simply ridiculous.
4. To prohibit the cross being placed on the exterior of the building belongs to the spirit of bygone days.

10. Having pointed out some of the improvements which seem to me desirable in the practical working of the National system, I think it my duty to bear my humble testimony to the efficiency of the National schools throughout my diocese. Two hundred and seventy schools were in operation in this diocese in 1866. Some have been since added, and some are in course of erection. 43,171 children, exclusive of workhouse children, were then on the rolls of these schools. About 250 schools are under the management of the local Catholic clergy. Though I find no fault whatever with the few lay managers we have, yet I consider that it is of immense importance that the clergy should be managers. Where they are not, they abstain, through a feeling of delicacy, or perhaps through dread lest their interference may not be welcome, from visiting the schools or otherwise co-operating with the teachers. There is also a danger in the teacher being too independent of the spiritual authority which he ought to teach the children to respect.

I cannot sufficiently praise the zeal and energy which the clergy have displayed in procuring sites and grants and subscriptions for the many schools they have caused to be built in their several parishes. Were it not for them the education of the country would have had a very scanty development. And it should be borne in mind that clergymen who depend on the people for their own support cannot tax their parishioners for the building of schools or churches without detriment to their own incomes.

On the secular education given in these schools I shall not offer an opinion. The Royal Commissioners can refer to the reports of the District and Head Inspectors which must contain more authentic and sure information than I could give. But in the whole course of my ministry there is nothing more consoling to me than the zeal and efficiency of the masters and mistresses of these schools in imparting religious instruction. At the parochial visitations they present in the church the children of their respective schools who are prepared for confirmation; and a laudable rivalry animates both pupils and teachers to have their school get the highest place in the searching examination to which all are subjected. The zealous co-operation of the clergy with the teachers in this part of their duty so developes catechetical instruction that it resembles more a course of theology. Parish priests have borne most favourable testimony to me of the moral and religious improvement of youth, chiefly evidenced by the frequentation of the sacraments. Being well instructed in the truths of religion, and gathered together under the immediate control of their clergy, they are easily formed to the habits and observances of a Christian life. If I were to point out any National schools, besides those under the direction of religious, which deserve special commendation, I should name some of the workhouse schools, and especially those of the Killarney Union.

There are in the diocese three schools conducted by Christian Brothers. It is unnecessary to speak of them, as their superiority is admitted by all. In 1854 a Christian Brothers' school was established in Tralee in place of a National school. The attendance at the National school used to be, if I am correctly informed, less than 200. The attendance at the Christian Brothers' school is over 600. The superior of that school informed me that in one year he placed ninety boys in lucrative situations, and I know some of their pupils who are now employed as reporters and editors on the press.

As I have to thank God that there is no model school in the diocese, I am saved the necessity of making any further comment on the management or efficiency of these institutions.

I have the honour to remain, gentlemen,

Yours, &c., &c.,

To the Secretaries of the Royal Commission on Primary Education.

CIRCULAR LETTER ADDRESSED TO EVERY BISHOP IN IRELAND.

19th October, 1868.

My Lord,—The Royal Commissioners are anxious to receive from your lordship any advice or counsel which may aid them in their recommendations to Her Majesty for the settlement of the difficulties of that part of the education question which has been referred to them.

The Commissioners are desirous of giving to all concerned an opportunity, if they desire it, of urging their individual objections to present practice from their own experience.

If your lordship should be inclined to accept this invitation, the Commissioners authorize us to say that every effort shall be made to meet your convenience as to the time of your attendance at their office in Dublin.

Should you wish to attend the next sittings of the Commission, we beg to inform you that the Commissioners will be in Dublin from the 20th to the 30th October, both inclusive. If any later time is more convenient, due notice shall be sent to you of the future meetings of the Commission.

We have the honour to be, my lord, your obedient servants,

George A. C. May.
D. B. Dunne.

P.S.—Should your lordship be unable to attend personally we should be glad to receive the name of some person who may be able to represent your views and wishes on the matter of primary education.

SIX REPLIES TO PRECEDING CIRCULAR.*

---

1. From the Most Rev. Dr. Kieran, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Armagh.

Dundalk, October 23rd, 1868.

Gentlemen,—In reply to your communication of the 19th instant, I beg to say that it will not be convenient for me to appear in person before the Commissioners who have been appointed by Her Majesty to make inquiry into the state of primary education in Ireland. The opinions I entertain on this question were expressed fourteen years ago before a Committee of the House of Lords, and to the opinions which I expressed on that occasion I still adhere. My conviction at that time was, as it is now, that there are defects in the present or National system of education which must prevent it from giving satisfaction to the Catholic clergy and people of Ireland. I may state that one of these defects is the practical exclusion from its schools and books of the religion to which the great majority of the children belong. The Catholic clergy cannot admit that what is called our common Christianity (if such a thing there be), is sufficient to train up a child in the way he should go. In their opinion, education is deprived of what constitutes its chief value, when it does not include sufficient provision for the teaching of religion, and the employment of the agencies which seem to them best calculated to make the salutary power of religion tell practically on the heart. They believe that at a time of life when the mind is most susceptible and most tenacious of impressions, and in the process by which its faculties are cultivated and developed, religion should exert the influences which properly belong to it, and that any system of education in which it is not permitted to do this, cannot fulfil the ends for which education is mainly given.

Holding these opinions in common with the other prelates and clergy of Ireland, I am anxious to see the denominational system substituted in place of the present National system. The denominational system deprived of the religious influences which might be engrafted on it, is the one which prevails in the greater part of Ireland. The rules by which the National schools are governed, and the books used in these schools have been framed and compiled for a system of education which can be hardly said to exist in three of the provinces of Ireland, and which exists in the fourth only to a very limited extent. Whilst efficient means are taken to provide protection for the religion of Protestant children in schools which a Protestant child never enters, the Catholic children who attend these schools are left without the religious help which their pastors consider most desirable, if not absolutely necessary for them.

* The Roman Catholic Bishop of Kerry had previously supplied the Royal Commission with a valuable statement. Vide p. 15, supra.
The then Roman Catholic Bishop of Raphoe wrote suggesting that the Rev. J. M'Menamin, Roman Catholic Parish Priest of Stranorlar, Donegal, should be invited to give oral evidence to the Commission. This suggestion was adopted.
Further, as stated above (page 15), in the Extract from the Report, the Bishops of Ossory and of Down and Connor, and Cardinal Cullen, and the Right Rev. Dr. Keane and Right Rev. Dr. Dorian, attended personally and gave evidence.

Those who desire to see this state of things continued seem to be influenced by the hope that the mixed system—bringing Protestant and Catholic children together at a period of life exempt from prejudice and strong passion—will lay the foundation for kind feeling and friendly intercourse between them in after years. It must be confessed that the only part of Ireland in which the mixed system prevails to any extent does not afford any grounds to justify such a hope. No one will attempt to say that the people of Ulster, disgraced as it is by periodical and sanguinary riots, in which we see Catholics arrayed against Protestants, are better educated or better conducted than the people of the rest of Ireland.

I may venture to add that there is no question in which greater regard should be paid to the feelings and desires of the people than the question of education, involving as it does for them interests of a most sacred and important character. The Catholic clergy and people of Ireland have no objection to the adoption by the State of every means it considers necessary to educate its subjects for the efficient discharge of the duties of civil life, and provide an abundant supply of competent candidates for the various departments of its service. But this point once secured, the control of the State over education should go no further. How far the religion of Catholic children should be introduced into their education is a matter which might be safely left to the discretion of their legitimate pastors, whose loyalty has stood the most severe tests, and who have never failed to denounce the enemies of order and the disturbers of the public peace, though often certain that they would incur great odium and much unpopularity by taking such a course. What they now demand, as far as regards education for the people intrusted to their care, has been already granted to the Catholics of England and the Catholics in many of the colonies. The concession of the same favour to us would strengthen our attachment to the laws and constitution under which we live, and cut up one root of the discontent which casts its shadow over Ireland.

I remain, &c.,

✠ M. Kieran, R.C. Archbishop of Armagh.*

2. From the Bishop of Tuam.

Tuam, October 23rd, 1868.

Gentlemen,—I beg to acknowledge with many thanks your obliging communication, and regret that I am unable to avail myself of your invitation; but the Triennial Visitation of the Lord Primate will detain me at home—afterwards the Visitation of the Galway Queen's College has been fixed (29th), at which I must attend as one of the visitors.

I do not know that I could add much in counsel to your deliberations, which I know have been carried on with such anxiety to arrive at the best conclusions.

I have been myself always connected with, and attached to the Church Education Society, by which I understand the assertion of those identified with it of the duty incumbent on them to allow no restrictions to be imposed upon the instruction of all pupils, and at any hours, in the Holy Scriptures.

Subject to and subservient to this I entertain, with them, the most earnest desire to support the State in the matter of education, and to co-operate in every way. I trust God's blessing may rest upon your labours, so that by them your part may be accomplished, whereby peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

Charles B. Tuam.

3. From the Right Rev. Dr. M'Cabe, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ardagh and Clonmacnoise.

St. Mels, Longford, 24th October, 1868.

Gentlemen,—I beg leave, very respectfully, to acknowledge your esteemed favour of the 19th instant, in which you solicit my views and wishes on the matter of primary education, either personally or by some one who would represent me before the Commission. I cannot avail myself of the privilege of expressing my views and wishes personally before the Commission; but, whilst thus prevented from expressing myself personally before you, gentlemen, I have no hesitation in stating that his Eminence Cardinal Cullen fully represents my views and wishes on primary education. Though I cannot appear personally before you, gentlemen; yet, I will avail myself of the favour you have conferred upon me, of expressing, in writing, my advice and counsel, in the following observations on the National system of education. There are some general principles to be kept in view in forming an accurate estimate of the merits or demerits of any system of National education.

1. That a system of education should be truly National in its character. It should be suited to the peculiar educational wants of the country. It should be in accordance with the character, the genius, and the feelings of the nation. It should meet the approbation, and secure the cordial co-operation of the recognised religious instructors of the nation.

* Since dead.

2. It should be based on religion; be in perfect harmony with the religious teaching, devotions, and feelings of the people for whose benefit it is instituted; hence it should not in any department suppress the unnatural divorce of religion from science and literature.

3. These principles should form an essential ingredient of primary education, because the foundations of learning, morality, and religion are laid in the minds of children, and the most indelible impressions are stamped on their character whilst they frequent these schools.

The whole machinery of primary education should be carefully constructed on these principles. The directors of the machine should have the confidence of those for whom it is destined. There should be no conflict in its administration. It should inspire confidence in its principles, and warrant security in its action. If it fail to embody those principles, it will not be truly national. It will never secure the sympathy of the people, or merit the approbation of the legitimate and recognised teachers of the great mass of the people.

Then, gentlemen, keeping these principles in view, and considering at the same time the various religious denominations in Ireland, it seems to me that the denominational system of primary education is the only system suited to the country—the only system in harmony with the religious feelings of the people, and the only system that will secure the cordial co-operation of the recognised religious teachers of the great majority of the people of Ireland.

I have come to the foregoing conclusion, by considering, first, the essential elements of a system of primary education; second, from the working of the mixed system, as illustrated by the present National Board of Education.

First, if we examine the essential elements of a system of primary education, we may easily see that it requires,

First, a Board of Commissioners,
Second, Training Schools,
Third, a series of school books,
Fourth, Inspectors,
Fifth, Local Managers.

1. The Board of Commissioners will naturally act a most important part in the development of the system, and will not fail to exercise a most influential part in all its departments. If the system be a "mixed system," the Board will be a "mixed Board." Now, the members of any religious denomination rarely ever consider religion as distinct from their own religious tenets and professional devotions. Hence the Unitarian, the Presbyterian, the Protestant, and the Catholic will each practically consider religion in their own point of view. We may easily perceive how a number of gentlemen of different religious denominations may meet for merely secular or social purposes without any disagreement on religious matters. They can transact their offices without ever introducing religion amongst the topics of conversation. But if they are obliged by their position to discuss subjects into which religion must necessarily enter, then according to the ordinary course of things, differences and disagreements will arise, unless we suppose they are men perfectly indifferent to religion, and such a supposition we cannot admit as consistent with the fundamental principles on which the whole system is constructed. For religion in a Christian country must be made an essential ingredient of any system of education. Then it is impossible to constitute a Board of Commissioners each sincerely attached to his own religious tenets, who would act harmoniously and for the interests of the community, in working out a system of primary education in which religion must be an essential element. When the head is sick the whole body is unsound. When you have a Board divided and distracted on religious matters, religion itself must be practically eliminated. For religion is practically ignored or vaguely indifferent. Hence the constitution of a Board in a "mixed system" of primary education is a practical impossibility.

2. The Training Schools. The same reasoning will be equally forcible in reference to training schools. The teachers should know not only the tenets of their own religion, but their training should be conducted in such a way, that all the subjects of their educational training where religion comes in, should be fully developed in the same manner as they are usually treated in other approved schools of their own religious denomination. Now, according to the received notions of Catholics, it is impossible to give a complete course of training in literature, science, and the arts, without making an impression favourable or unfavourable to the interests of the Catholic religion. The training school will influence him during life in his religious belief and devotional exercises. Hence a training which is confined to what is styled "Our Common Christianity," will never receive the approbation of the Catholic community.

And hence I conclude that the teachers could not be prepared for their duties, except in training schools denominational in their character.

3. The school books should also be denominational, for they are the principal vehicles of knowledge in science, literature, and arts, and hence they should embody in themselves all the elements of primary education; but religion enters essentially into the system, therefore these books cannot ignore religion, nor can they treat religion in a vague general manner, for religion in any profession, and particularly in the Catholic profession, is specific in dogma, and particular in practice. Hence it is practically, and I may say theoretically, impossible to produce a series of school books without giving offence to some religious denomination.

4. Since religion forms an essential element in education, it follows that the Inspectors should be of the same religious profession as the children whom they inspect. They take the most prominent part in teaching; they should in their sphere develop the religious part of the education as far as it may fall within the province of inspection. Now, he will never efficiently or satisfactorily discharge that important function, unless he be of the same religion as the children frequenting the schools which he inspects; and independently of his official duty of inspection, it will add considerably to his influence with pupils and teachers, if he be of the same religious profession with themselves.

Hence, gentlemen, I conclude that the very important duty of inspection cannot be efficiently or satisfactorily discharged in a mixed system of primary education.

5th.—The duties of patrons oblige us to adopt the same conclusion. Some patrons will be found faithful to their trusts, who will never allow any undue influence to be exercised over the children for the purpose of Proselytism. But I regret to state that very many will be found unfaithful to their promises. The experience of the last fifty years has confirmed this conviction on the minds of the Catholics of Ireland, consequently, they never look with a favourable eye on schools under the patronage of persons differing from them in religion. What was done before may be done again. There is no constitutional guarantee that by-laws injurious to the interests of their religion, may not receive the sanction of a Board. Acts of Parliament are the only recognised safeguards of Catholics.

Hence I conclude from the consideration of the five essential elements of primary education that in Ireland it should be denominational, in order to promote the interests of learning, religion, and social happiness, and satisfy the equitable demands of the vast majority of the nation. Now let us consider the mixed system, as illustrated by the working of the National system of education, and I feel confident we will come to the same conclusion. We have only to read its history from its first institution, to learn how opposed it is in principle, and how obnoxious in practice to the vast majority of those for whose benefit it was established. On how many occasions have the Catholic bishops of Ireland spoken and written against it? What strenuous and successful efforts have not themselves and their clergy made against the model schools? On their general meetings how frequently have they remonstrated against it? Have they not addressed Mr. Cardwell, the Chief Secretary, in a memorial enumerating the many grievances of the system, and are not most of those grievances as yet unredressed? Have not exceptions been taken against the constitution of the Board on very many occasions? Were not the bishops obliged to adopt the most strenuous measures in reference to the training schools? Has not the National Board lost many of the strongholds of education in the country during the last twenty years? Have not many towns been lost which would have been retained if the Board had been denominational? How frequently have the school books been made grounds of complaint? How often have managers been charged as guilty of unscrupulous efforts at proselytism? And in how many instances have not the charges been brought home against them? Can the Catholic community ever forget the changes made in the system at a time when famine smote the land, and when proselytism held forth the mess of pottage as the price of apostacy? These facts, gentlemen, are history, and such history has made the indelible impression on the Catholic mind of Ireland, that no other than a denominational system of education will ever be efficient in Ireland in diffusing learning, and maintaining the interests of morality, religion, and social happiness amongst the people. A religious system of primary educatiou must, of necessity, in a country constituted as Ireland is, be denominational. Its very constitution requires it. Its Board, its training schools, its patrons, demand it to give them efficiency in their work, and secure the sympathy of the most influential patrons of learning.

As you, gentlemen, kindly asked my advice and counsel on the National Board, I respectfully beg leave to submit the following observations to your consideration on the training of teachers, their classification, and the inspecting of schools.

On the training and classification of teachers, it appears to me that the teaching powers of the masters and mistresses are not sufficiently developed in the course of their training. It appears to me that sufficient importance is not attached to the faculty of imparting knowledge to the pupils. The majority of pupils frequenting schools of primary education, learn only to spell, read, write, the first rules of arithmetic, and the outlines of history and geography. Hence, the teacher should be trained to adopt his instruments to the capacity of his pupils. He should not be giving lectures on mental philosophy or political economy to children who can merely spell or read. I do not intend to depreciate the higher branches of knowledge, nor do I wish to be understood as confining the literary and scientific accomplishments of the teachers to the merely elementary subjects. But I mean to say that the faculty of imparting instruction in teaching spelling, reading, writing, and arithmetic, together with the outlines of history and geography, should be considered a matter of the greatest importance in the training of the teacher, no matter how highly qualified the teacher may be in literature and science, it will be of little avail unless he be able to impart the necessary information to his pupils.

"Scire tuum nihil est nisi te scire hoc sciat alter."

I have observed teachers generally more anxious to advance the grown pupils while the little children, who required special care and attention, were left to the desultory efforts of some schoolfellows, totally unfit and unqualified for teaching. The general impression amongst teachers is that their literary and scientific qualifications alone will be taken into consideration in their classification whilst their teaching powers will be almost entirely overlooked. It is of the greatest consequence at the present time to devote special attention to the very young children frequenting primary schools, for they are removed at so early an age from school that without this special care and attention they will be doomed to ignorance during their lives. Some teachers spend themselves on the advanced pupils whose intelligence will gain the approbation of the Inspector. And if the teacher be himself preparing for an examination, he is teaching perhaps to qualify himself for a higher qualification, and his teaching is confined to those subjects that may be more useful to himself than profitable to his pupils. I know there are many admirable exceptions to this general rule. Then it appears to me from the experience of the last twenty years that the teaching powers of masters and mistresses have not been sufficiently developed in the training schools of the National Board. And I would also wish that in the inspection of schools this essential quality of an efficient teacher should be attended to; his promotion, when once he has got a school, should depend more on his efficiency in teaching than on his literary and scientific qualifications. It appears to me that the Inspector should hear the teacher instruct each class; take note of his manner with his pupils, his zeal for order and regularity, the kind of knowledge he brings to bear on the respective classes, the tact with which he teaches, the judgment and discretion he shows in suiting his questions to the capacity of his pupils; the attention he pays in correcting the faults in learning, moral conduct, and habits of negligence in his pupils. The Inspector will thus form a very accurate idea of the teaching powers of the master; he can then probably, not before the children, point out his faults and defects in teaching and manners.

I have one observation to make in reference to female teachers; but, in making this observation, I do not wish to detract from their many virtues and devoted zeal, but it struck me, and I have heard others make the same observation, that many female teachers have exhibited great vanity of dress, much more than their circumstances would warrant or their position would justify; such a display of dress and manners would have a very injurious effect on their pupils, and, consequently, I think it is an evil to be guarded against; in the training of female teachers neatness and cleanliness are particularly indispensable in female education, whilst vanity of dress is opposed to good sense, decent economy, and female modesty.

Allow me, then, gentlemen, to sum up the conclusions I have come to in the foregoing observations:—

1. That the system of primary education for Ireland should be denominational.
2. That the teaching powers of masters and mistresses should be developed with special care in the training schools, and that their classification at all times, but particularly when they are teaching, should, in a very great measure depend on their efficiency of teaching. The proficiency of the pupils should be made the standard of their merit.
3. Female teachers should be made to feel that vanity of dress will elicit the censure of their superiors, and that their training should be conducted in such a manner that the female teachers would be the models of their pupils in dress, modesty, and virtue.

I again most respectfully beg to say that His Eminence Cardinal Cullen fully represents my views and wishes on the system of primary education.

Thanking you most sincerely, Gentlemen, for having given me an opportunity of expressing myself on the important subject of primary education,

4. From the Bishop of Kilmore.

Longford, October 26th, 1868.

Sirs,—Your letter inviting me to meet the Commissioners of Education in Dublin in the course of this week, reached me on the eve of the triennial visitation, and when I was leaving home for diocesan work. Though I expect to return this week, I could not conveniently, or indeed safely go to Dublin, as I have rather a severe cold.

Perhaps the Commissioners will allow me to state briefly the conclusions at which I have arrived after some careful reflection and experience:—

I. It appears to me first of all, that the State should exercise absolute control over the books of secular instruction in all the schools which they subsidize.

II. That they should ascertain the results of this teaching by their Inspectors, and regulate the amount of help afforded accordingly.

III. That in towns and populous neighbourhoods affording materials for two or more schools, they should allow the denominational system, as regards religious teaching to prevail, imposing no restrictions in any such schools, except as regards secular teaching.

IV. That in neighbourhoods where only one school can find a place, they should govern it by the rules of the present National system, as regards religious instruction.

Such a scheme would yield to the most extreme parties much of what they claim, would satisfy all the moderate, and would secure the State against misapplication of its funds, either to no purpose, or mischievous ones.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

5. From the Right Rev. Dr. O'Hea, Roman Catholic Bishop of Ross.

Skibbereen, October 26, 1868.

Gentlemen,—In reply to your communication of the 19th October, I beg to say that at this season of the year a journey to Dublin would to me be most inconvenient.

As to any objections I have to the present system of National or primary education, they have been more than once embodied in the memorials that were from time to time forwarded by the prelates of the Roman Catholic Church of Ireland to the Government of the day. I consider it unnecessary on the present occasion to allude to these objections, when it is in the power of the Royal Commissioners to have recourse to those documents, and to examine the arguments therein put forward by the bishops of Ireland in favour of a substantial modification or change in the present system of education, called National.

I am ready to acknowledge that it has been a great boon to Ireland, and no small improvement on the vicious systems of education which preceded it. But owing to its negative character as to nationality and to religion, it has not met the expectations of those to whose care the mass of the population of this country is committed. It has not worked as beneficially as it ought, in giving to the youth of Ireland that sound religious and literary education which, for the welfare of the country, it ought to be the study of its rulers ever to inculcate. It has ignored the antecedents of our country, its history, and its religion. Like many other institutions of which we do complain, it has neglected the interests of the majority in order to foster the advancement of the minority. The framing of its rules, and the modifying of them, has been left to the caprice, sometimes to the bigotry, of its Commissioners. It even encouraged that great curse of our distracted country—proselytism. The Catholics of Ireland have many charges against the system, and it is only by introducing into it radical changes that it can be rendered palatable to those who take a deep interest in the morals, religion, and social welfare of the youth of the country. Some of those changes have been already pointed out to the Government of the day by the Roman Catholic bishops of Ireland. It is to be hoped that due weight will be attached to their representations, and that the question of education, will, with the other important questions which agitate the country to its very depths, command the serious consideration of both houses of Parliament.

* Since dead.

I beg to remain, &c.,

6. From the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy, Roman Catholic Archbishop of Cashel.

Thurles, October 30th, 1868.

Gentlemen,—For a reply to your letter of the 19th of the current month, I beg to refer to my letter of the 8th of last March in answer to one from the Right Honorable the Earl of Dunraven similar in import to that which I have had the honour to receive from you.

I cannot say that I shall name any person to represent my views and wishes on the matter of primary education to the Commissioners.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

✠ Patrick Leahy.

To George A. May and D. B. Dunne, Esquires, Secretaries to the Commission on Primary Education, Dublin.

Thurles, March 8th, 1868.

My Dear Lord,—In reply to your letter of the 4th of this month, I beg to say that I am not at present disposed to offer any evidence orally or in writing, before the Commissioners recently appointed to inquire into the state of primary education in Ireland. I hardly need assure your lordship of the respect I entertain towards yourself and the eminent men associated with you in this Commission. If I respectfully decline to meet the invitation of Her Majesty's Commissioners, it is not for want of a due appreciation of the able and impartial manner in which I have no doubt they will discharge the duties laid on them—but upon quite other grounds. I am sure the Commission is altogether unnecessary, in so far as it might serve to elicit the opinions of the Catholic Bishops of Ireland on the subject of primary education.

What may have been the special motives of those who advised Her Majesty to issue this Commission it is not for me to say. But that they wished, through the medium of such inquiry, to ascertain the opinions of the Catholic bishops of Ireland on the subject of primary education cannot for one moment be supposed. The opinions of the Catholic prelates on this subject are no secrets to Her Majesty's Advisers any more than to the public at large, having been over and over again published, as one might say from the very house-tops—and at this hour of day to ask Catholic bishops to make known those opinions seems, I say it with every respect, all one as asking them to make known what is already well-known, to re-state for the twentieth time what has been already so often stated to no purpose.

I might say much, if not quite the same thing, with respect to the other heads of information from whomsoever else derivable, falling within the range of inquiry prescribed to the Commissioners. What are they to ascertain that is not already well ascertained?—or that may not, at least, be ascertained with the utmost facility from existing data? The Report and Evidence presented by the Endowed Schools' Commissioners; the evidence before the select Committees of both Houses of Parliament on National education; the voluminous reports of the Commissioners of National Education and of their Inspectors; the parliamentary returns with reference to National education made from time to time—these and other authentic documents furnish a body of trustworthy information so ample as to leave nothing to be desired for acquiring a thorough knowledge of the state and working of primary education in Ireland, or for introducing such changes in the National system as may be for the public good.

I have the honour to be, &c.,

✠ P. Leahy, Archbishop, &c.

CORRESPONDENCE WITH VERE FOSTER, ESQ.

Among the persons who were mentioned to the Commission as able to give valuable information upon the condition and circumstances of elementary education in Ireland, was Mr. Vere Foster. Mr. Foster was invited in July, 1868, to give evidence. His answer was as follows :—

13, Donegal-place, Belfast, July 13th, 1868.

GENTLEMEN,—I received this day your letter of the 9th inst. If you will tell me the special points on which information is desired, I will exert myself to the best of my ability to obtain such information from reliable sources.

Having been subject for some years to inflammation of the eyes, I have scarcely read anything or visited schools, but have devoted my attention exclusively to certain publications, namely, the preparation of good and cheap writing and drawing copy-books. I, therefore, do not consider myself competent to be a direct witness, but would prefer being a medium for inquiry, and could leave my business here and travel through the country without any expense to the Commission, if by so doing I can further their important object.

I am, your obedient servant,

(Signed), VERE FOSTER.

Messrs. George A. C. May and D. B. Dunne, Secretaries, &c.

In reply, Mr. Foster was informed that what the Commissioners desired was to have his own views upon the subjects of their inquiry; and he was told that it was not possible to define beforehand the scope of the questions which might be put to him in the course of an oral examination. Mr. Foster's answer to this was the following :—

108, Marlborough-street, Dublin, July 15th, 1868.

DEAR SIR,—I do not consider myself a competent witness, and therefore would rather not submit to a public examination, but, as I mentioned in my former letter, if you will state the special points on which it may have been desired to question me, I will gladly use my best efforts to obtain reliable information, and shall be willing to give evidence at a later stage of the inquiry.

I am, yours faithfully,

RETURNS FROM THE CHURCH EDUCATION SOCIETY.

(4TH MAY, 1868.)

STATEMENT of the COMMITTEE of the CHURCH EDUCATION SOCIETY, setting forth the reasons which have up to the present time prevented that SOCIETY from placing the SCHOOLS over which they have control in connexion with the NATIONAL BOARD.

Church Education Society for Ireland,
10, Kildare-street, Dublin, March 19, 1868.

GENTLEMEN,

We have had the honour of receiving your letter of the 29th ultimo, conveying the wish of the Commissioners of Primary Education that the Church Education Society should furnish a statement of the reasons which have up to the present time prevented them from placing the schools over which they have control, in connexion with the National Board.

In reply, we are instructed by the Committee of the Church Education Society to state, for the information of the Commissioners, that it is the fundamental principle of the Society that in all its schools the Holy Scriptures shall be used in the daily instruction of every child in attendance, who is capable of reading.

The Church Education Society holds that the Scriptures being the divine rule of faith and practice, ought to be made an essential part of education, and that not only they should be read at certain stated hours, but also that the teachers should be at liberty on every suitable occasion to refer to them, whether in administering a reproof or enforcing a duty, or illustrating a lesson, and it declines to undertake the education of children on any other terms.

As exemplifying the views of the Society on this point, we beg leave to quote the following passage from the Report of the Commissioners appointed to inquire into the state of popular education in England, 1861 (vol. i., page 312) :—"The plan of drawing a line between religious and secular instruction, and confining the religious instruction to particular hours, would, we believe, be equally unlikely to succeed. The principal promoters of education maintain that such a line cannot be drawn, and that every subject which is not merely mechanical, such as writing and working sums, but is connected with the feelings and conduct of mankind, may and ought to be made the occasion of giving religious instruction. They maintain that the religious influence of the school depends no less upon the personal character and example of the teacher, on the manner in which he administers discipline, upon the various opportunities which he takes for enforcing religious truth, and on the spirit in which he treats his pupils, and teaches them to treat each other, than upon the distinctive religious teaching."

The views of the Society receive further illustration from the following extract from the Report of the Rev. E. P. Arnold, one of Her Majesty's Inspectors of Schools, addressed to the Committee of Council on Education, 1866, page 24 :—"The reading lesson is certainly by far the most important which a child receives in the way of real education. It is an opportunity for moral and religious teaching, for enlarging the mind by illustration and explanation, for opening new fields of knowledge in the geographical and historical illusions which are scattered through the lesson. In the hands of a good teacher, a reading lesson to a first class, given without hurry in a class-room, or a quiet school, should be the most interesting, instructive, and educating lesson of the day. . . . . He should point out to the children the points to be imitated and admired in the characters and conduct of the persons about whom they are reading."

These principles cannot be carried out in schools in connexion with the National Board. That Board, requires, as a condition of granting aid, that "all children are to have full power to withdraw from religious instruction, if their parents direct them so to do, and the reading of the Scriptures comes within the rules as to religious instruction" (Rules and Regulations, part i., sec. 4, 10, 14). Nor does it permit any incidental reference to be made to the Sacred Scriptures during the hour set apart for literary instruction,* although the reading books prepared for the use of the advanced classes in National Schools abound with lessons which afford the teachers most suitable opportunities for doing so.†

* See observations of the Commissioners on a memorial to the Lord Lieutenant from the Bishop and certain of the clergy of the diocese of Down and Connor.

† The reading books prepared by the National Board contain lessons in Natural History, Manufactures, Political Economy, the British Constitution, the Industrial Resources of Ireland, and a copious review of the mineral, vegetable, and animal kingdom.

The Church Education Society concurs in a statement of the Board of National Education, respecting qualifications and duties of the "teachers," that they "should be persons of Christian sentiment," and that "they should not only possess the art of communicating knowledge, but be capable of moulding the mind of youth; and of giving to the power which education confers a useful direction."—(Rules and Regulations, part i. sec. 11.) But the Society cannot admit that this duty can be properly fulfilled if, in "moulding the mind" of those whom they educate, they are forbidden to refer to the Sacred Scriptures.

In the desire to extend as widely as possible the blessings of a Scriptural and secular education, the Society opens its schools to children who are not members of the United Church of England and Ireland without requiring them to learn the Church formularies.

The members of the Society are painfully sensible of the great disadvantages which adherence to their principles has so long entailed on their schools, by depriving them of all share in the large funds appropriated by the State for primary education; and, independently of such considerations, they feel, and have always felt, that it was their duty to co-operate with the Government in that important work, if they could do so consistently with the higher duty of giving to the Word of God its proper place in their schools.

SECTION I.—GENERAL INFORMATION.

Paragraph 1.—Brief Accounts of the Origin, Objects, Founders, Date and Place of Establishment of the Society, with copies of such of the Laws and Rules of the Society as relate to its objects and principles, and generally to the matter of Education.

1. The Church Education Society was formed in Dublin in the year 1839, by many of the clergy and laity of the Church in Ireland, united in conscientious objections to the then recently established system of National Education in Ireland. In the first report of the Society the Committee recorded their "fixed determination never to avail themselves of any system of education in which the Scriptural instruction of every pupil is not recognised as the fundamental principle of Christian education." The following were the original presidents, vice-presidents, and committee:—

Presidents.

His Grace the Lord Primate.

The Lord Bishop of Meath, the Lord Bishop of Kildare, the Lord Bishop of Kilmore, the Lord Bishop of Clogher, the Lord Bishop of Elphin, the Lord Bishop of Ossory, &c., the Lord Bishop of Dromore, the Lord Bishop of Down and Connor, the Lord Bishop of Cork and Ross, &c., the Lord Bishop of Limerick, &c., the Lord Bishop of Killaloe, &c.

Vice-Presidents.

The Marquess of Downshire, the Earl of Courtown, the Earl of Mayo, the Earl of Clancarty, the Viscount Harberton, the Viscount Adare, M.P.; Lord Dunsany, Lord Mountsandford, Hon. Justice Johnston, Hon. Baron Pennefather, Hon. Baron Foster, Hon. Sidney Herbert, M.P.; Hon. Somerset Maxwell, M.P.

The Very Rev. the Deans of Ardagh, Ardfert, Armagh, Cashel, Connor, Clogher, Cork, Derry, Elphin, Emly, Kildare, Kilfenora, Killaloe, Kilmore, Leighlin, Limerick, Lismore, Ossory, Ross, St. Patrick's, Dublin, and Tuam.

The Ven. the Archdeacons of Achonry, Aghadoe, Ardagh, Armagh Clogher, Cloyne, Connor, Cork, Derry, Down, Dromore, Dublin Elphin, Emly, Ferns, Glendalough, Kildare, Kilfenora, Killala, Killaloe, Kilmacduagh, Kilmore, Leighlin, Limerick, Lismore, Meath, Raphoe, and Tuam.

Assistant Secretary.

Thomas Woodward (now Dean of Down).

The following are the fundamental "laws and rules of the Society, as to its objects and principles":—

I. Fundamental Laws.

I. The name of the society shall be "The Church Education Society for Ireland."

II. The objects of the Society are, to assist schools at present existing in the country, and to establish new schools, on an improved system, for the purpose of affording to the children of the Church instruction in the Holy Scriptures, and in the Catechism, and other formularies of the Church, under the direction of the bishops and parochial clergy, and under the tuition of teachers who are members of the United Church of England and Ireland.

III. The Society will supply its schools with copies of the Holy Scriptures in the Authorized Version, or integral portions thereof, which shall be used in the daily instruction of every child in attendance who is capable of reading; and no other version of the Holy Scriptures shall be used in the Society's schools.

IV. The schools of the Society shall be open to all children whatsoever belonging to the parish in which the school may be situated, and having the parochial minister's approbation for attending it; and no child shall be excluded on account of the inability of its parents to pay for its instruction.

V. In order to accomplish the object stated in the second law, the Society will use the following means:— 1st. It will connect itself closely with all the diocesan education societies existing in the country, and endeavour to promote the formation of others, where none have been as yet established, and it will maintain a confiding and co-operative intercourse with them all. 2ndly. It will establish and maintain a model and training school for the education of teachers, supply suitable books and other school requisites for the use of schools established by it, and assist in furnishing and repairing school-houses. 3rdly. It will promote the formation and further the maintenance of an efficient and stated inspection of the schools assisted or established by it.

VI. The funds that are now, or may hereafter become available, within their respective districts, to the several diocesan education societies, may be applied, under the direction of their respective committees, to the support of schools in which the Holy Scriptures, in the Authorized Version, are daily read by all the children in attendance who are capable of reading; but they shall be required to transmit annually to the committee of this Society a statement, in detail, of their receipts and expenditure, in order to its being embodied in the general report.

VII. Such of the archbishops and bishops of the United Church of England and Ireland as shall be pleased to accept the office, shall be Presidents of the Society, and ex-officio members of the committee; and such of the deans and archdeacons of the same as shall accept the office, together with such lay noblemen and gentlemen (members of the Society) as shall be named to the committee by the presidents, shall be vice-presidents thereof; every beneficed or licensed clergyman subscribing £1 annually, either to the general or diocesan fund, shall be a member; every member of the United Church of England and Ireland subscribing £10 at one time to the general fund of the Society, shall be a member for life; and every lay member of the Church subscribing £1 annually to the same, shall be a Member of the Society for and during the year for which his subscription is paid; the Presidents, Vice-Presidents, and Members to have the privilege of voting at all annual or special general meetings of the members of this Society.

VIII. An annual meeting of the members of the Society shall be held in Dublin, on such day as the committee shall appoint, when the proceedings of the foregoing year shall be reported; a statement of the accounts, not only of the Society itself, but of each diocesan society in connexion with it, shall be presented; and the managing committee, treasurers, honorary secretaries, and auditors, for the ensuing year elected. Fourteen clear days' notice of such meeting to be transmitted specially, in writing, by the secretaries to the presidents, and notified by advertisement in at least two of the Dublin newspapers, to the vice-presidents and members of the Society at large; and nothing shall be brought before, or discussed at such annual meeting, but what is immediately connected with the report, and appointment of the committee and officers, as aforesaid.

IX. A special general meeting of the members of the Society may be called at any time, on the requisition of any one of the presidents; or of five of the vice-presidents, three of whom at the least shall be clergymen; or of the committee; or of one-fourth of the diocesan committees, on addressing a letter, duly signed, to the secretaries, distinctly specifying the object of the meeting. Fourteen clear days' notice of such meeting, and of the purpose for which it is called, to be transmitted specially, in writing, by the secretaries to the presidents of the society, and to the committees of the different diocesan societies in connexion with it, and notified by advertisement in at least two of the Dublin newspapers, to the vice-presidents and members of the society at large; and no other matters shall be brought before, or discussed at such meeting, than those for which it has been thus specially called.

X. Five trustees, one of whom, at least, shall be a president of the Society, shall be elected from among the life members, at a special general meeting, duly summoned for that purpose; they shall hold their office for life, unless removed by the vote of a special general meeting; and any vacancies which may occur in their body shall be filled up by the vote of the members of the Society, at the annual meeting next ensuing. All property in land or houses, of which the society may from time to time become possessed, shall be vested in the trustees for its use.

XI. A number of clerical members of the Society, resident in Dublin or its vicinity, not exceeding sixteen; and a number of lay members of the society, also residing in or near Dublin, not exceeding fifteen; together with the members of the several diocesan committees, shall constitute the managing committee of the Society, five of whom shall form a quorum; such committee to be elected in the first instance, by the votes of the several diocesan committees, signifying the same by resolution passed in committee, duly summoned for that purpose; and after the first year by the members assembled at the general annual meetings of the society.

XII. Two or more honorary secretaries, one of whom may be a layman, one or more treasurers, and three lay auditors, only one of whom shall be a member of the committee, shall be appointed from among the members of the Society, in the same way as is directed for the appointment of the committee by the foregoing law.

XIII. The committee shall have power to fill such vacancies as may occur in their own body in the intervals between the annual general meetings of the Society, and to elect from among the members of the Society a stipendiary assistant-secretary, and such other subordinate officers as they shall deem necessary for conducting the affairs of the Society; subject to the approval of the members of the Society assembled at the first annual general meeting next ensuing such appointments.

XIV. All orders of, or drafts for, payments on account of the Society, shall be signed, in committee, by the chairman and two other members thereof; and a copy of each such order or draft, with the names of the parties who signed it, shall be entered on the minutes of the proceedings of the committee.

XV. The committee shall have its own proceedings, and also the accounts of the Society, entered in separate books, to be kept for that purpose; and, in like manner, the proceedings of the Society, at any of its general meetings, shall be entered in another book, to be kept for that purpose; all which books shall be at all times open to the inspection of the presidents, vice-presidents, and members of the society.

XVI. None of the laws of the Society shall be altered or repealed, nor shall any new law be enacted, except at a special general meeting, called for that purpose by requisition, as specified in the 9th law; and no law shall be considered as altered, repealed, or enacted, until confirmed at a subsequent special general meeting, convened expressly for that purpose, at a clear interval of a month, at least, after the special general meeting at which the alteration, repeal, or enactment of such law was introduced.

XVII. No member of the Society shall be entitled, by virtue of an annual subscription, to vote at any general meeting of the members of the Society, unless he shall have been a subscriber, and his name entered as such on the books of the Society three clear months previous to such meeting.

II. Terms of Union.

1. Terms of Union between the Society and Diocesan Associations.

The Church Education Society will receive into union all diocesan associations, on the terms set forth in its fundamental laws.

Diocesan associations thus in union may retain all funds procured by them, and apply them as they deem fit to the establishment of Scriptural schools within their respective dioceses, and the payment of the salaries of all teachers employed by them.

The Church Education Society will assist—1st. In defraying the expense attendant on the training of teachers: 2ndly. In establishing a model school in each diocese: 3rdly. In securing suitable inspection.

2. Terms of Union between the Society and Schools.

1. The Society will receive into union schools in connexion with diocesan associations.

Patrons wishing to connect their schools with the Society may make direct application to the secretary of the central Society in Dublin, should there not be a diocesan association.

2. The school to be placed under the superintendence of the parochial clergymen, and the inspection of the society.

3. The Scriptures, in the Authorized Version, to be read daily by all children who are in the reading classes.

4. The teacher to be a member of the Church. The appointment of teachers is vested in the patron.

5. The children of the Church to be instructed in the Catechism, and other formularies of the Church.

6. No books to be used in the instruction of the pupils except such as are, or shall be, included in the list of the Church Education Society for Ireland.

The society will grant books and school requisites to the schools thus in union.

On the 27th May, 1863, the following resolutions were passed:—

"That no further free grants in books and other requisites be made by the central society to any diocese or school; and that no running account be kept in future with the Kildare-place society.

"That a grant at the rate of ten shillings per school, or such amount as the funds will admit, be annually made, for the purpose of inspection to such of the diocesan committees as are not visited by the official inspector of the central society; and that if any diocesan committee shall have already provided, and continue to provide satisfactorily for inspection, liberty shall be given to apply the grant to the purchase of school requisites for the schools in the diocese."

The society will further assist those schools which not only observe the foregoing conditions, but also adopt the mechanical system recommended by the society, and exhibited in its model schools:—

1st. In fitting up the school-rooms.

2nd. In giving gratuities to the teachers, as far as its funds will permit.

SCHOOL REGISTER.

A specimen of the "School Register" is given at top of the next two pages.

N.B.—Examples are given in this specimen to show how the School Register should be kept. The first date shows the day on which the Pupil entered the school, with the superintending Clergyman's initials attached, and the subsequent entries, the dates of his promotions from class to class. This promotion is to bear the initials either of the superintending Clergyman, or the Inspector by whom it has been made. The column headed "Number of days of Attendance" is to be filled up from the Roll Book at the close of each year.

A Session is a period of five months.

There are two Sessions in each year, viz.:—
From 8th February to 8th July.
„ 8th August to 8th January.

Number of students trained from January, 1855, to the close of 1867:—
I. Male Students, . . . 342
II. Female Students, . . 405
——747

The male students are in great demand, hence, they do not remain longer than two sessions.

Paragraph 3.—The attainments required to be possessed by the Students, Male and Female, previous to entering the Training Institution.

Application Paper for Male Candidates.—Church Education Society for Ireland, Kildare-place, Dublin.

For Candidates for Admission to the Training Schools.

☞ Persons intending to become Students are requested to read the whole of this Paper carefully.

Qualifications of Candidates.

I. Religious and moral principles.—The primary object of early education is to cultivate in children religious principles and moral sentiments; to awaken in their tender minds a sense of their evil dispositions and habitual failings, before they become callous by daily intercourse with vice—to lead them to the Saviour; to accustom them to trace the hand of their heavenly Father in His works of providence and grace; and to impress them with the truth that His eye is ever upon them; since such is the primary object—an object which, if unattempted, early education is valueless—the Committee consider that in addition to an unimpeachable and moral character, sincere piety is indispensable; indeed without it they think no teacher can be fitted for the work.

II. Natural disposition and abilities.—There are certain qualifications of temper to be looked for in the teacher of children. The power of sympathy is felt by all, but its effect upon children is almost incalculable; on this account an animated lively manner, tempered by self-possession, and a cheerful good humour combined with gentle firmness, are very important. To these should be added, that natural fondness for children, which leads to a participation in all their little pleasures and pains, and bears patiently with their infirmities and ill-humours. It is also particulary necessary that Infant school teachers should possess besides an aptitude to teach, the ability to draw out and direct the powers of children, a quickness of perception to see the effect of the instruction they are giving, and a readiness in availing themselves of accidental circumstances to awaken moral sentiment, or draw out some intellectual faculty.

The Candidate will be expected to pass an Examination in the following Subjects of the first four Classes of the Scale of Proficiency, which are as follows:—

MALE SCALE OF PROFICIENCY.

PARAGRAPH 4.—The nature of the Certificates given at the close of the Course of TRAINING, stating the qualifications required in a STUDENT, Male or Female, in order to become entitled to each grade of Certificate.

There are four grades of certificates (see copies of the certificates), namely :—1. The first class. 2. The second class, highest grade of. 3. The second class, superior grade of. 4. The second class, lowest grade of. (See copies.)

The qualifications required in a male student, in order to become entitled to a first-class certificate, are as follow.

He must be acquainted with—

I. Holy Scripture, together with the Church catechism; the history and contents of the Book of Common Prayer; and, to some extent. Church history.

II. The science of education, in its principles and practice, in its various departments, including the principles and art of. 1. Mental and moral culture. 2. Teaching. 3. Organization, management, &c., &c., of schools. And to be possessed of skill and experience in the practice of them.

III. Reading with accuracy, distinctness, fluency, and intelligence.

IV. Writing, including ornamental writing.

V. Drawing: including mechanical and ornamental designs; the drawing, shading, and colouring of diagrams; map drawing.

VI. English grammar: including parsing, analysis of sentences, derivations of words, elements of logic, composition, &c.

VII. Geography: including physical, political, and mathematical geography, with popular astronomy and use of the globes.

VIII. History, viz.: Collier's and Hume's Student's History of England, with a knowledge of ancient history, in illustration of the Old and New Testaments.

IX. Social science: including the principles of the British Constitution.

X. Arithmetic: in theory and practice; also, mental arithmetic.

XI. Book-keeping.

XII. Euclid: the first six books, with deducibles.

XIII. Algebra, to the end of quadratic equations.

XIV. Mensuration: including the mensuration of planes and solids, and artificers' works.

XV. Trigonometry: the resolution of plane triangles, with practical applications in surveying, navigation, &c.

XVI. Natural philosophy: the several branches, including heat, and the steam-engine; particular regard being had to the explanation of the "Philosophy of Common Things" in nature, the useful arts, and domestic life.

XVII. Natural history: the leading facts and principles.

XVIII. Music: including the principles of music, and, when practicable, skill in vocal music, and performance on the harmonium.

The female students are not required to be acquainted with Euclid, algebra, mensuration (except the mensuration of the principal planes), or trigonometry. They (the female students) must be acquainted, to a fair extent, with all the other subjects, and with—

I. Needlework, in all its branches.
II. Domestic economy, in its principles and practice. (See the examination papers.)

The qualifications required in students for each of the other grades of certificates are a little lower than those required for the first-class certificates, in some of the foregoing subjects, as mathematics, &c.

Theology and the science of education are not included among those subjects whose standard may be lowered for certificates below the first class.

The highest attainments in literary and scientific subjects are insufficient to entitle a student to even the lowest grade of certificate, unless accompanied by extensive Scriptural knowledge, and a thorough acquaintance with the science of education, including—1. The principles and methods of intellectual and moral culture. 2. The principles and art of teaching. 3. All that relates to school economy, together with skill in the practice of them.

A person possessed $\frac{3}{4}$ of a ship, and sold $\frac{1}{8}$ of his share; what part of the ship had he remaining?

6. Find the sum of $5\frac{1}{2}$, $6\frac{3}{4}$, and $7\frac{3}{8}$, by vulgar fractions and by decimals.

7. Suppose I take at interest £600 for 28 months at 5 per cent. per annum, with the condition to pay as much of the principal as I please before the time expires. Now after 9 months I pay £160; after 8 months £190; and after 6 months £175. What have I to pay at the expiration of the 28 months.

8. If I buy a pound of cloves for 6*s.* 3*d.*, and sell it for 6*s.*, how much is the loss per cent.?

9. A boy having been asked his age, said, that when he was born, his father was 30 years old, and that his father's age at present, was exactly three times his own age. How old was the boy?

N.B. Give the solution of this question in words.

10. Find the cost of a carpet $\frac{3}{4}$ yard wide at 3*s.* 9*d.* a yard, for a room 20 feet long by 16 feet broad.

11. Why is a certain mode of book-keeping called "double entry?" What is the meaning of the terms "debit," and "credit?"

ARITHMETIC, MENSURATION, &c.:—BOOK-KEEPING.

Male Students.

1. Explain the principle of the rule for—
   1. Dividing one fraction by another.
   2. Reducing vulgar fractions to decimals.
   3. Pointing the quotient in division of decimals.

2. Reduce the mixed repeater 35 to an equivalent vulgar fraction, from the definition of repeating decimals, and also by the method of series.

3. Write down the algebraic formula from which the rule for the extraction of the square root arises, and by it find the square root of 3136.

4. A begins trade, January 1st, with a capital of £1000; B joins him, March 1st, with £1500; three months subsequently C joins them, with £2800: they trade together till the end of the year, and gain £1776 10*s*. How must this gain be divided?

5. A person possesses £3,200 3 per cents., which he sells at 99¾; he invests the proceeds in railway shares at £56 a share, which shares pay 5 per cent. interest on £45, the amount paid on each share. How much is his income altered by the transaction.

6. A tobacconist buys 10 hhds. of tobacco, wt. nett, 30 cwt. 3 qrs. 14 lbs., at 9*d*. per pound, payable in three months, and sells it for 11⅛*d*. per pound, payable in seven months: how much per cent. per annum is gained at that rate.

7. A person bought a horse in poor condition for £1 6*s*.; and having fed him for some time, he sold him for £5; by which he lost half of the first cost, and one-fourth of the expense of the keeping of the horse. What did his keeping amount to, and what was the total loss?

N.B.—Give the solution of this question in words.

8. A cask weighing 2 cwt. 0 qrs. 12 lbs. 4 oz. floats in a square cistern full of water, 2 feet 6 inches being the length of one of its edges. How much does the water sink in the cistern when it is removed, a cubic foot weighing 1000 ounces?

9. What will it cost to re-dress the stone surface of a church spire 50 feet in the slant height, with a diameter of 8 ft. 6 in. at the base, the work being paid at 5*d*. per square foot?

10. To determine the distance of a ship at anchor at C, I measured a straight line A B=1000 yards on the shore, and observed the angles C A B=32° 10′, and C B A=83° 18′. Required the distance of the ship from A.

11. Describe as accurately as you can the process of "balancing" and "closing" a set of books kept by double entry.

12. How could a journal be dispensed with in double entry.

Geometry.

Male Students.

1. Explain the following terms, viz.:—1. Theorem.—2. Proposition.—3. Corollary.—4. Problem.—5. Hypothesis.—6. Definition.—7. Demonstration.—8. Lemma.—9. Magnitude.—10. Axiom.—11. Postulate.—12. Converse Proposition.—13. Indirect Demonstration.

2. Define the following, viz.:—1. Right Line.—2. Circle.—3. Re-entering Angle.—4. Salient Angle.—5. Gnomon.—6. Segment of a Circle.—7. Sector.—8. Secant.—9. Similar Segments.—10. Circumscribed Figure.—11. Submultiple.—12. Compound Ratio.—13. Similar Rectilinear Figures.—14. Reciprocal Figures.—15. Extreme and Mean Ratio.—16. Homologous Sides.

3. State and demonstrate the laws relating to the squares of the sides of

1. A right-angled triangle.
2. An acute-angled triangle.
3. An obtuse-angled triangle.

4. State some of the uses to which Euclid VI. 4, may be applied.

5. If two chords of a circle intersect each other at right angles either within or without the circle, the sum of the squares described upon the four segments is equal to the square described upon the diameter.

Algebra.

Male Students.

1. Perform the operations indicated in the following formulæ, and reduce the results to their simplest forms, viz.:—

I. $(5a^3 - 8ab + 6ac - 7bc - 9c^3) \times \frac{1}{3}ab^2c.$

II. $\{5(a-x) - 4y^3 + 2a^2x^3\} \times \{2(a-x) - y^3\}$

III. $(x^3 - 3x^2 + \frac{1}{4}x - 1) \div (x - 1)$

2. Reduce the following expressions to their simplest forms, viz.:—

I. $\dfrac{a+1}{a-1} + \dfrac{a-1}{a+1} + 2\left(\dfrac{a^2-1}{a^2 \times 1}\right)$

II. $\dfrac{a^{-2}+c^{-2}}{a^{-2}-c^{-2}} - \dfrac{a^{-2}-c^{-2}}{a^{-2}+c^{-2}}$

3. Solve the following equations, viz.:—

I. $\dfrac{2x(a-x)}{3a-2x} = \dfrac{a}{4}$

II. Given $xy = 1225$; and $\sqrt{x} + \sqrt{y} = 12$, to find x and y.

4. A boatman went down a river and up again in 6 hours: and found that he could row 9 miles an hour with the stream, and only 3 miles an hour against it. How far did he go?

5. By selling a horse for £24, I lose as much per cent. as it cost me. What was the prime cost of the horse?

Natural Philosophy, &c., and Practical Mechanics.

Male and Female Students.

1. What is the law of the reflexion of light Account for the image of an object on the bank of a river appearing in an inverted position.

2. Explain the origin of the colours used in painting. Why, for example, is a red paint red, and a blue one blue? Why is grass green?

3. What is conduction of heat? Show by examples of "common things" that a knowledge of its law is essential to our comfort and convenience.

4. Enumerate the principal parts of an electrical machine (plate or cylinder), and state the precautions to be taken in order that it may work efficiently.

5. Mention some of the general properties of the atmosphere; also the instruments which act by its agency.

6. Explain the philosophy of any six of the following "common things," viz.:—1. The heaviest articles are placed lowest in the hold of a ship.—2. The fall of a shower of rain.—3. A blower increases the draught to a fire.—4. The amount of the shock experienced when two steamboats come into collision. 5. The motion of a bird when flying.—6. Cutting bread with a knife.—7. An echo.—8. On the summits of lofty mountains, sounds are greatly diminished in intensity.—9. Iron sinks in water, nevertheless a ship made of iron floats.—10. Water is made to ascend to a great height by a fire engine.—11. An oar, in water, appears bent.—12. The use of butter with bread.—13. Boiling water is kept hot in a bright metal pot better than in an earthern vessel.—14. It is colder in a thaw than in a frost.—15. Rain generally follows a flash of lightning.—16. A magnetized needle when suspended freely, turns in a certain direction.—17. A pair of spectacles.—18. The manufacture of coal gas.—19. Soot.—20. Water or humidity rusts iron.—21. In our climate the north wind is cold.—22. The proverb—

> "If red the sun begins his race, > Expect that rain will fall apace."

23. Swans and ducks dive under the water without being wetted.—24. Plants which are kept in a window bend towards the glass.—25. Cold produces hunger.—26. Some persons are near sighted.—27. The sun is twice vertical to every place between the tropics in the course of a year.—28. The tides are greater than ordinary twice every month, viz. at the times of new and full moon.

7. Give some account of—

1. The mechanism of the heart.
2. The circulation of the blood.
3. The process of respiration.

8. Explain the following terms, viz.:—1. Quadrumana.—2. Cheiroptera.—3. Carnivora.—4. Rodentia.—5. Edentata.—6. Cetacea.—7. Pachydermata.—8. Ruminantia.

9. Explain generally the circumstances under which a body may be supported upon an inclined plane, taking into account the friction of the plane.

10. The water flows into a mine 80 fathoms in depth, at the rate of 15 cubic feet per minute, and an engine, set to work when the mine contains 2,000 cubic feet of water, is observed to empty it in two hours; what is the horse power of the engine?

11. The mean pressure of the steam upon the piston of an engine is 12lb. per square inch, the diameter of the piston is 60 inches, the length of the stroke 7 feet, how many strokes must it make per minute to drive with 180 horse power? And, how many cubic feet of water would it raise per minute, from a depth of 156 fathoms, one-fourth of the driving power being supposed to be lost by friction?

N.B.—The female students are not expected to answer questions, 9, 10, and 11.

VOCAL MUSIC.

Male and Female Students.

1. How many scales in use in modern music?

2. Of how many notes does the scale in general use consist of?

3. What is the first note of a scale called?

4. What the fifth?—what the fourth?—what the eighth, above or below?

5. Name the major key, and its relative minor that require no sharp or flat in their signature?

6. Name the sounds in the minor key (in numbers) that require to be raised accidentally ascending. Give an example.

7. Are the sounds accidentally sharpened in the ascending minor scale retained in its descent? Give an example.

8. Write all the major keys, that require sharps or flats in their formation with their relative minors.

9. Name the tonic, dominant and sub-dominant of each key.

10. When male voices use the treble clef does it represent the actual sounds of their voices?

11. Name the position of the treble, counter-tenor tenor and bass clefs on the stave?

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

Female Students.

1. Mention the different articles required by a laundress for washing. Give directions for washing woollen articles and coloured prints.

2. Give directions for cleaning oil cloths and marble chimney-pieces, and for removing spots of grease from boards.

3. Describe how you would teach a girl to clean a grate.

4. Write a sketch of a lesson on the proper arrangement of a bed-room.

5. Give some simple directions for attending on the sick.

6. Mention some of the evils of bad ventilation.

7. What would you do in order to avoid fever poisons, and to disinfect a house in which there had been fever.

8. Show the effects on health of cold water in the morning.

9. Give rules for making a shirt, and enumerate the different kinds of work needed.

10. What materials are best suited for the dress of a teacher in summer and winter. Give reasons.

11. Show the advantage to teachers and others of the post-office savings' banks. What is the interest given—the security afforded—the smallest amount which may be deposited, and the total amount which may be deposited by the same person?

12. What do you believe a teacher with a salary of £30 per annum, and furnished lodgings, may fairly be expected to put by for sickness and old age?

PARAGRAPH 5.—The Per-centage of the STUDENTS who obtained Certificates at the close of their course of TRAINING, stating the Per-centage of those who obtained each of the several grades of certificates, also the Per-centage of those who did not obtain Certificates.

I.—The Male Students (from August, 1862, to January, 1868):—

First, or highest class, . . .	24·8 per cent.
Second, highest grade of, . .	21·7 „
Second, superior grade of, .	6·2 „
Second, lowest grade of, .	15·5 „
None, ...	31·8 „

All the certificated, and more than 39 per cent. of the uncertificated, students engaged in school-keeping in various parts of Ireland, on leaving the training institution.

Those students who did not obtain certificates, for the most part, withdrew from the institution before the completion of their course of training.

Several of the male students, after spending some years conducting schools, became clergymen, having distinguished themselves in the university during their undergraduate course.

II.—The Female Students (from August, 1862, to January, 1868):—

First, or highest grade, . .	16·8 per cent.
Second, highest grade of, .	30· „
Second, superior grade of, .	14·3 „
Second, lowest grade of, .	15·5 „
None, ...	23·4 „

All the certificated, and many of the uncertificated, students engaged in school-keeping in various parts of Ireland, on leaving the training institution.

Those students who did not obtain certificates, for the most part, withdrew from the institution before the completion of their course of training.

PARAGRAPH 6.—The Titles of all BOOKS of instruction used in the TRAINING INSTITUTION.

I.—The Male Students.

The Holy Bible.
The Book of Common Prayer.
Wolfe's Ecclesiastical Primer.
Riddle's Scriptural History.
Gill's School Management, &c., &c., &c.
Sheldon's Manual of Elementary Instruction, &c.
Stuart's Outlines of Mental and Moral Science, &c.
Bromby's Grammar, &c.
Johnson's Dictionary, &c. (cheap edition).
Chambers' English Language and Literature, &c.
Bell's Speaker.
Cornwell's Geography, &c.
Reid's Physical Geography, &c.

Keith's Use of the Globes, &c.
An Atlas.
Easy Lessons on Money Matters, &c.
Collier's History of England, &c.
Thomson's Arithmetic, &c., &c.
Tables of Logarithms.
Bonnycastle's Algebra, &c.
Bonnycastle's Mensuration, &c.
Galbraith and Haughton's Trigonometry, &c.
Lardner's Euclid, &c.
Haddon's Book-keeping, &c.
Lardner's Animal Physiology, &c.
Lardner's Natural Philosophy, &c.
Tate's Exercises in Mechanics.
Lardner on the Steam-engine, &c.
Hullah's Manual of Singing.
The Choralist.

Every male student is required to provide himself in all the books on this list, except Bell's "Speaker," Hullah's "Manual," and the "Choralist."

In many cases the students provide themselves with other books on each subject, in addition to those they are required to have in use. Such subjects have "&c." after the names of the text books. They likewise provide themselves in many theological works.

The students have access to a library of carefully selected books on each of the foregoing subjects.

II.—The Female Students.

The Holy Bible.
The Book of Common Prayer.
Wolfe's Ecclesiastical Primer.
Riddle's Scripture History.

The following publications of the "Home and Colonial School Society," viz. :—

Religious Instruction.
Elementary Instruction.
Hints for Infant Teachers.
Tables of British Geography.
Domestic Economy.
Also, Currie's Principles of Education.
Bromby's Grammar.
Sullivan's Grammar.
Morell's Analysis of Sentences.
Collier's Smaller History of England.
Cornwell's Geography.
Keith Johnston's Atlas.
Hughes' Scripture Atlas.
Thomson's Arithmetic.

The students have access to a library of carefully selected books, on each of the foregoing and other subjects.

Answers to Queries respecting the Male Training Schools at Bandon.

1. Opened in Bandon, A.D. 1854.

2. Students are admitted at any time they apply, if sufficiently qualified, and if there be a vacancy. The number in training is ten, the time that they remain is generally one year and a half.

3. Attainments the same as those required for admission to the Central Training School in Dublin.

4. Certificates are not given until the students have been one year in charge of a school, and it has been inspected, and until they attend the annual examination. The Inspector gives marks for efficiency in conducting the school, which, being added to the marks for answering, the teacher is classed accordingly. There are three classes, and in each class three divisions; twenty marks constitute the difference between each division.

5. A considerable number obtained employment out of the diocese, these and others in the diocese not having attended the annual examination are not classed; in the highest class, divisions 1st and 2nd, there are 3; and 1st class, 3rd division, there are 10 per cent.; in the 2nd class, 1st division, 10 per cent.; in the 2nd class, 2nd division, 20 per cent.; in 2nd class, 3rd division, 8 per cent.; in 3rd class, 1st division, 5 per cent.; and in 3rd class, 2nd division, 5 per cent.

RETURNS FURNISHED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

STATEMENT of the CHRISTIAN BROTHERS, setting forth the REASONS which have up to the present time prevented them from placing the SCHOOLS over which they have control in connexion with the NATIONAL BOARD.

Christian Brothers' Schools,
North Richmond-street, Dublin,
March 9th, 1868.

GENTLEMEN,

I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your favour of 29th ult., requesting, "that the Christian Brothers should, if they think it right, furnish the Commissioners with a statement in writing, setting forth the reasons which have, up to the present time, prevented them from placing the schools over which they have control in connexion with the National Board." In reply I beg leave, on behalf of the Christian Brothers, to state there is no objection whatever to give the information sought for.

The great object which the Institute of Christian Brothers proposed to itself is the education of youth, especially the poor, according to the spirit and principles of the Catholic Church.

The motive which induced the members of the Institute to engage in so responsible and arduous an undertaking was the deplorable ignorance of the children of the poor, resulting from the penal enactments of times past affecting the education of Catholics.

In devising a System of Education to carry out their object, the Brothers were guided by the conviction that they should ever keep prominently before the mind of youth the supernatural end of their creation, and that their sojourn in this world is but a preparation for the next; consequently that education in its true and proper sense should not be limited to secular instruction alone, but must extend to and include, because of its paramount importance, the religious also. They therefore determined on a scheme of education, in which the religious element should be the leading feature.

The system of the National Board is based on a very different principle. It gives to secular instruction the first and chief place. The rules of the Board do not allow a religious emblem to be exposed in the school-room, and the incidental teaching of Catholic doctrine is directly prohibited; while in the non-vested schools the inculcation of Catholic religious truth, even at the time set apart for religious instruction, is altogether excluded, if the patrons so desire it. "It is for the Patrons or Managers to determine whether any, and if any, what religious instruction should be given in the school-room," thus practically teaching the children that religion is a matter of secondary importance,—and may be even laid aside altogether at discretion,—whereas the pursuit of secular knowledge is constantly advocated and, as far as possible, enforced by the periodical examination of Inspectors.

In the school-course of the Christian Brothers, the religious element is its chief characteristic. They make use of religious emblems in their schools; they begin and terminate the day's school business with prayer; they frequently recall the attention of the children to the holy presence of God; they daily give catechetical instruction to the children in the Christian doctrine; they usually inculcate some moral or religious truth in the reading class, if the lesson admit of it; they assemble the children on Sundays and holidays for special religious instruction, and they establish school libraries, for the circulation of religious, moral, and carefully selected literary works. From this it is evident that religion is the leading principle, nay, the very spirit which guides and directs their whole educational system.

To assist them in carrying out their plan, the Brothers prepared a series of class books, in which, wherever practicable, the same religious element is found.

The class books of the National Board, considered in relation to Catholic teaching, do not supply to Catholic youth references to religious or moral subjects in conformity with Catholic doctrine, not to speak of certain books amongst them which, it is much to be feared, are calculated to impress their minds with sceptical or rationalistic views.

But, besides the total absence of the Catholic element from the system of the National Board, there is another scarcely less important objection; and that is, the power which the Commissioners of National Education possess of changing, from time to time (with the sanction of the Lord Lieutenant for the time being), the fundamental rules of the Board,—a power which enables the said Commissioners and Lord Lieutenant to enact laws that may be completely at variance with the principles of the Christian Brothers, and to which laws, consequently, they could never submit.

When the National system was first introduced into this country, some friends of the Institute, for whose opinions the Brothers entertained very great respect, recommended them to avail themselves of the pecuniary advantages which the new system offered; and accordingly some five or six of their establishments were placed in connexion with the Board of Education. Willing to give the system the fullest trial, the Brothers continued this connexion for a few years; but, finding the conditions and restrictions it imposed would ultimately prove fatal to the main object of their Institute, a special meeting of the Brothers was held in the year 1836 on the subject, at which it was resolved, after mature deliberation, to withdraw the schools from connexion with the Board.

Finally:—As the Institute of Christian Brothers was established solely for the education of Catholic youth; as the primary object of the Brothers is the religious instruction of their pupils; and, as the experience of more than sixty years attests the fact that the system which they have devised is, in their judgment, the best adapted to the end proposed;—for these reasons the Christian Brothers considered that they ought not continue in connexion with a system which is based upon so different a principle, and which they believe to be unsuited to the true educational requirements of a Catholic population.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen,
Your obedient servant,

J. A. HOARE.

George A. C. May and D. B. Dunne, esqrs., Secretaries, Offices of Primary Education Commission,
Sackville-street, Dublin.

PARAGRAPH 1.—BRIEF ACCOUNT of the ORIGIN, FOUNDERS, DATE, and PLACE of ESTABLISHMENT of COMMUNITY, with EXTRACTS from the RULES, or the CONSTITUTION of the ORDER, in reference to the OBJECTS and DUTIES of the COMMUNITY in the matter of EDUCATION.

Origin of the Institute.—The Institute of Christian Brothers was founded in the city of Waterford, in the year 1802, by Mr. Edmond Rice, a native of Callan, in the county Kilkenny.

Mr. Rice had succeeded his uncle, who was a wealthy merchant in the city of Waterford, and had realized a considerable property in trade before he thought of founding an institution for the education of youth. Towards the close of the last century (about the year 1793) he first conceived the idea of retiring from business and spending the remainder of his days in religious retirement in the Eternal city—his brother John had already gone there to study for the Church.

The long-continued operation of the penal laws in this country in prohibiting all Catholic education had reduced the lower classes of the population to extreme ignorance, and their sad condition, resulting from that ignorance, had enlisted for them the sympathy of many benevolent individuals. The education of the female poor of Waterford had been provided for by the establishment of convent schools in that city, but no provision of a similar kind as yet existed for the boys.

Under these circumstances Mr. Rice considered that much good might be done by opening a school for the instruction of that class of neglected children, and, therefore, seriously deliberated with himself whether it would not be more advantageous to religion and more conducive to the salvation of souls that he should remain in Waterford for that object rather than carry out his first idea of embracing a life of complete seclusion. He felt himself strongly inclined to the instruction of the poor in consequence of the number of boys whom he daily met wandering about the streets and the suburban roads of the city in idleness and its usual attendant, vice.

Before coming to a decision in a case of such importance, Mr. Rice consulted some confidential friends of great experience (amongst others the Right Rev. Dr. Lanigan, then Bishop of Ossory), and after laying before them all his doubts and difficulties, he requested them to consider the matter, and give him the benefit of their opinion. Having thus maturely considered the question and recommended it earnestly to God, he finally determined, with the advice of the friends above referred to, to abandon his original intention of going to Rome, and devote himself unreservedly to the instruction of the poor of Waterford.

EXTRACTS from the "RULES" in reference to the Objects and Duties of the Community in the matter of Education.

Object of the Institute.—"The object or end for which Mr. Rice founded the Institute of Christian Brothers, was, the education of male children, especially the poor, according to the principles and teachings of the Catholic Church."

Spirit of the Institute.—"The Brothers should recollect that the instruction of poor children is the great object of their institute and for which, through the mercy of God, it has been particularly raised up; they should always teach them gratis, contenting themselves with the glorious recompense promised to all, 'who instruct many unto justice.'" (Dan. xii. 3.)

Order and Regularity.—"The Brothers should use their endeavours that order and regularity be kept up in their schools, and particularly that silence, the foundation of both, be observed: hence they will ever give the scholars in their own persons an example in this particular."

Subjects Taught.—"They shall teach the children in the way of science such things as are befitting them. They are however to have the Brother Director's permission for teaching such subjects as are not ordinarily taught in the schools of the Institute."

The following is the classification of studies pursued in the schools as comprehended under the foregoing rule:—Reading, spelling, writing, arithmetic, geography, English grammar, dictation, elements of composition, history, book-keeping, geometry, mensuration, linear and architectural drawing, algebra, trigonometry, navigation, and the elements of natural philosophy.

Forming the Pupils to Piety.—"But above all things the Brothers are to recollect that the instruction of the children in piety and religion is the great and main end of their Institute. This is to be their first and principal care in regard to their pupils. They will therefore instruct them in the duty of morning and evening prayer, and the other obligations of a Christian life. They will in a special manner instruct them how they are to dispose themselves for receiving worthily the Sacraments of Penance and the Holy Eucharist; and shall moreover be careful that the children be instructed in the Christian Doctrine for half an hour each day of school, and in explaining the several parts of it, they are to speak in a simple and familiar manner, adapting their language to the age and capacity of their hearers, avoiding everything abstruse or difficult, which might embarrass themselves or the children."

Correction of the Scholars.—"The Brothers shall be ever watchful that, in correcting the scholars, they be never prompted by any emotion of passion or impatience, so that the scholars may always see that the correction is given because they deserve it, and because it is necessary for their amendment."

"They shall never apply a contemptuous or injurious name to any of the children, nor allow them to do so to each other; they shall never call them by any but their proper names."

Inspectors of Schools.—"The Brother Director of each house is to be the ordinary inspector of the school or schools depending on the house of which he has the charge. He shall watch over them, and see that all things be properly conducted, and, above all, that silence and regularity be duly observed."

Visitor of Schools.

Duties of his Office.—The Brother who is appointed to the office of visitor is to examine—

Firstly—"If the children are taught the ordinary prayers, the commandments of God, and of the Church, and the principal mysteries of religion; if the Catechism is explained to the children in a manner suited to their age and capacity; if the more advanced scholars understand it; and if the school prayers are recited in a respectful manner."

Secondly—"If the children are properly classified; what is their proficiency in reading and spelling, in writing, in arithmetic, in bookkeeping, in English grammar, in geography, and in the other branches taught in the schools; if the writing and arithmetic papers are clean and neatly written; what is the number of scholars in each school, and what is the order and discipline of it."

Thirdly—"What is the state and condition of the school buildings and premises, and if each school is sufficiently supplied with the necessary furniture and appliances, such as maps, slates, black-boards, &c."

Paragraph 2.—Constitution of the Order as to Qualification and Admission of Members, period of Noviciate, Outlines of Course of Training and Instruction for the Duties of Teaching; Scheme of Government—general and branch; Means of Support of the Community.

The Admission of Members—Qualifications, &c.

Qualifications.—Members are usually admitted between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five years. They should be of decent families, of irreproachable character, and must be recommended by a clergyman, or by one of the Brothers, to either of whom they must be personally known. Called to live in community, and to be engaged in the work of instruction, they should have social dispositions, sound judgment, and zeal, together with sufficient knowledge or capacity to acquire it. None are admitted whose parents are heavily in debt, whose services are necessary for their families, who have been engaged in low employments, or who have a delicate constitution, short sight, deafness, or any natural deformity. Each postulant is required to bring with him a suitable outfit, and to pay at the rate of twenty-five pounds a year during the first two years of his probation.

Period of Probation.—Before being admitted as a life member of the Institute each candidate must undergo a probation of at least eleven years.

Outline of Instruction of Candidates.—During the early stages of their course, the novices are under the immediate direction of a novice master who gives them daily regular instructions on their various duties, and trains them to discharge with efficiency the obligations of their state; they likewise receive from him and from other members of the community, regular lectures on the different branches usually taught in the schools; the novices themselves also devote a considerable portion of each day to the study of these subjects, and they are obliged to lecture each other alternately upon them, under the immediate superintendence of their master, in order to train them to give similar lectures when they are placed in charge of a school.

Qualifications necessary for Life Members.—Each candidate during his course of probation is informed of the standard of qualification he is expected to attain, and is advised to devote the hours for study appointed by his rule in preparing himself for his final examination. The following is a printed form of the qualifications referred to:—

Qualifications.

For ———. In addition to those mentioned, Com. Rules, page 29, par. 4.

1. Orthography. To spell correctly and give the meaning of any word in the "School Expositor;" to know the "Method of Teaching" spelling, as laid down in that treatise; and to write correctly from dictation.

2. Reading. To read with ease and intelligence any of the class-books; also to be familiar with the "Rules for Reading," as given in the "Literary Class-Book."

3. Writing. To write a good, bold hand; and to be well acquainted with the rules of penmanship.

4. Grammar. To know accurately the definitions and rules in Etymology and Syntax in the "School Grammar;" to be able to parse and analyze the Exercises given therein; and to know the rules of punctuation and composition, as well as the method of teaching both these branches, but particularly the latter.

5. Geography. To know the map of the world with its geographical definitions, its great divisions and sub-divisions, &c., and to be competent to give in a simple lecture a satisfactory general view of the whole. To have a similar knowledge of the maps of each of the five great divisions of the globe, as well as those of Ireland, England, Scotland, and Palestine; and of the "Outlines of Astronomy," and to be able to solve the seven problems on maps, given in "The Second Geography."

6. Arithmetic. To know at least from Notation to Double Position in "The Commercial Arithmetic," so as promptly to enunciate the definition and the principle of each rule, to illustrate the reason of it clearly and methodically, and to solve the "Questions for Exercise."

7. Geometry. To be able to demonstrate any proposition in the first six books of Euclid, and to enunciate from memory their several definitions, axioms, theorems, and problems.

8. Mensuration. To know "superficies" and "solids," so as to solve easily every question under those heads in our own treatise, and give the reasons of the rules.

9. Algebra. To know as far as Quadratic Equations included.

10. Bookkeeping. The knowledge of Bookkeeping, both by single and double entry, according to our own system, must be such as to secure a thorough acquaintance with Posting, Closing, and drawing out a correct Balance-sheet.

11. History. To know the Outlines of Ancient and Modern History, and the Abridgement of English and Irish History, as contained in the "Historical Class-book."

12. Christian Doctrine. To have a full and accurate knowledge of the Christian Doctrine as set forth and explained in the catechetical works of the Right Rev. Drs. Hay and Challenor, Rev. Dr. Power, and in the Catechism of the Council of Trent, and to be conversant with approved methods of catechising

13. Organization, Method, &c. To know how to establish and maintain order in School, how to keep the lists and register, to organize classes, train monitors, draw up Orders of Exercises adapted to the different Schools; and to know the methods of teaching the various classes of each grade, as laid down in "The Manual of School Government."

Examination for Life Members.—Before being admitted as a life member, printed forms of the questions to be answered are handed to each candidate, who is required to give answers written on paper within a given time, and under the immediate superintendence of an examiner appointed for the purpose, who must not allow him the use of either book or manuscript to assist him in the solution of the questions. The following is one of these examination papers:—

Scheme of Government—General and Branch.

General.—The institute is governed by one Superior-General, with two assistants, who form his council. He is charged with the government of the whole body, and must inform himself at regular intervals of the condition and discipline of each house, and of the state of efficiency of the schools depending on it, that he may see if all things are carried on according to established rule, and in conformity with the spirit of the Institute.

The Superior-General makes the visitation of all the houses at appointed times, either himself in person, or by other brothers, his deputies, who report to him the result of their visitation.

Branch.—The Superior-General appoints the local superiors or directors of the various branch establishments of the Institute.

They are responsible for the management of the houses over which they are placed, and of the schools depending on them, and are bound to render to the Superior, at stated periods, an account of their administration.

Means of Support of the Community.

The greater number of the establishments of the Institute are chiefly dependent for support on the voluntary contributions of the localities in which they are respectively situated.

Paragraph 3.—Name and Situation, by Provinces and Counties, of each School Establishment of the Christian Brothers, with date of Opening, number of Stories, number of School-rooms and of Class-rooms, total extent of Accommodation, at eight square feet to each Pupil; total number of different Pupils on Roll with number in Daily Average Attendance in the year 1867; Classification, as to Subjects taught, of total number on Rolls, number of Pupils of each year of Age on Roll, Creed of Pupils on Roll, Average Age at which Pupils first enter Schools, Average Age at which they finally leave School; amount of School-fees and amount of Local Subscriptions or other support to each School Establishment in 1867, amount received for Books and School Requisites in 1867; gross amount of Local Contributions or other support to each School in year 1867; total sum received for Books and School Requisites in the year 1867; number of Brothers that usually teach in each School, number of Monastic Houses of Christian Brothers in each town, and total number of Members of each Community.

PARAGRAPH 4.—The names of such SCHOOLS as had been in connexion with the KILDARE-PLACE SOCIETY, or with the NATIONAL BOARD, and date at which such connexion ceased.

KILDARE-PLACE SOCIETY AND NATIONAL BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Kildare-place Society.—No school of the Christian Brothers was ever in connexion with the Kildare-place Society.

National Board of Education.—The schools in Richmond-street, and Mill-street (now Francis-street), in Dublin; and those in Waterford, Dungarvan, Ennis, and Ennistymon, were in connexion with the National Board from 1832 to Christmas 1836, when the connexion ceased, for causes already assigned to the Commissioners.

CLASSIFICATION of STUDIES referred to in "School Registry."

READING.

Classes.
1. First Book of Lessons.
2. Second ditto.
3. Third ditto.
4. Fourth ditto.
5. History—Ancient and Modern.

ARITHMETIC.

1. General Principles, Notation, Numeration, Addition, and Subtraction.
2. Simple Multiplication.
3. Simple Division.
4. The Compound Rules.
5. Reduction of Coin, Weights and Measures.
6. Proportion—Simple and Compound.

6. Algebra.
7. Trigonometry—Plane and Spherical.
8. Navigation.
9. Natural Philosophy—Properties of Bodies, Mechanics, Hydrostatics, Hydraulics, Pneumatics, &c., &c.

Note.—The Order of subjects here laid down is not intended to be invariably followed. The requirements and taste of the pupil should be consulted, and his studies directed accordingly. A boy, for example, who is preparing for mercantile business, and whose time at school will not admit of his completing the full course, should study Book-keeping both by Single and Double Entry, rather than Astronomy or the use of the Globes. The same may be said of Geometry, Mensuration, and Architectural Drawing, for such as are destined for any of the building trades; and so of others.

In noting down the proficiency of the pupil in the column headed "Book-keeping," &c., in the School Registry, the figures which represent the branches learned only should be entered, the other figures of that section being omitted altogether. Thus the number of figures will indicate the number of subjects that have been studied.

RETURNS

FROM THE

GOVERNORS OF ERASMUS SMITH'S SCHOOLS.

PARAGRAPH 1.—A List of all the English Schools under the management of the Governors of Erasmus Smith's Schools, or in connexion with their foundation, stating in reference to each of them the following particulars:—(a.) Locality of the School; (b.) Number of pupils each school-room is suited for; (c) Number of pupils on the Roll during the year 1867; (d.) Average number of pupils in attendance during the year 1867; (e.) Number of pupils belonging to the Established Church; (f.) Number of pupils belonging to the Roman Catholic Church; (g.) Number of pupils belonging to the Presbyterian Church; (h.) Number of pupils of other Religious Denominations; (i.) Similar details for the current year 1868.*

(Page 76, and pages 87, 88, 89, 90, of the Report of the Endowed Schools Commission, Ireland, were referred to in illustration of the particular details which the Royal Commission desired to possess.)

Notes respecting the above particulars:—

The School-rooms are considered to be generally suitable.

The numbers on Roll and Religious Denominations are the Average Numbers for the six months ending 1st November, 1867, the six months ending 1st May, 1868, and the six months ending 1st November, 1868; and the average attendance is for the same periods.

The Returns required by the Governors do not separate Presbyterians from other Protestant Dissenters; and I am, therefore, unable to comply with particulars in your letter as to "Presbyterians" (g) and "Other Religious Denominations" (h).

EUSTACE THORP, Registrar,

20th March, 1868. Governors Erasmus Smith's School.

* NOTE.—Returns showing any changes that had taken place during the half years ending 1st May, 1868, and 1st November, 1868, were subsequently sent in.

RULES to be observed in the ENGLISH SCHOOLS on the foundation of the Governors of the Schools founded by Erasmus Smith, esq.

1. School shall be open at half-past nine on every week-day, and shall close at three on every day, except Saturday, on which day it shall close at one o'clock.

2. The roll shall be called at ten o'clock on every morning, and, immediately afterwards, the teacher shall enter in the report book, the numbers then present.

3. On every day all children who have attained a suitable proficiency, shall read to the teacher a chapter in the Bible. The teacher shall examine the children as to their understanding what they have read, explaining the sense in plain language, without entering into controversial or abstruse matters.

4. The Bible shall be used for religious instruction only, and not for the purpose of teaching to spell or to read.

5. The children whose parents are members of the Church, shall be instructed on at least one day in every week in the catechism of the Church of England, and no other catechism shall be taught or admitted into the school: the attendance of the children of other denominations, on this occasion, shall be as their parents may direct.

6. No child under the age of six years shall be admitted.

7. Parents or friends of children shall not interfere in the course of education in any manner whatever, except as before specified in rule 5.

8. No books shall be admitted into the school but such as shall be approved of by the governors.

9. A roll, register, and report book, according to the form prescribed by such model school as the governors may approve, are to be kept by each master and mistress, and an abstract of the same, certified by the clergyman of the parish, is to be transmitted half-yearly, as has been usual, to the Registrar. The roll, register, and report book, are to be kept in the school, for the purpose of being examined and checked by the inspector. Any child absent one month (except from illness) is to be struck off the roll, and not to be re-entered without the sanction of the local patron or the superintending clergyman. A list shall be kept of the books belonging to the school, containing their titles and the number of each; the list to be renewed the first weeks in January and July in each year, and a copy thereof to be inserted in each of the half-yearly reports.

10. Three vacations shall be allowed in each year; one at Christmas, and one at Easter, of a week each; and one in autumn of a fortnight; and no other vacation to be allowed. The commencement of each to be notified by the teachers to the local patron or superintendent. The teacher to inform the inspector, (at the Spring inspection), when the autumn vacation takes place.

11. The teachers are to require the children to come to school cleanly, and in decent clothes, so far as their circumstances will allow; and they shall not permit them to sit down until after due inspection.

12. Monitors may be appointed by the teachers upon the plan pursued in such model schools as the governors may approve; but care is to be taken that they be selected upon the grounds of assiduity, good conduct, and superior attainments; and arrangements must be made that their own instruction by the teacher shall be properly attended to.

13. The teacher shall not, on any account whatsoever, permit the school-houses to be used for purposes not connected with the business of the schools, except when licence for the performance of Divine Service shall be granted by the bishop of the diocese, or when the sanction of the clergyman of the parish shall be obtained for the holding of a Sunday school.

14. The supply of books and school requisites is to be kept up by local funds; to this object the governors are ready to contribute whenever their assistance is required; but in no case will their contribution exceed one-half of the sum required.

15. Any variation from the prescribed hours of business or times of vacation, must be made with the sanction of the patron or superintendent, and must be notified to the governors.

N.B.—These rules to be posted in a conspicuous part of the school-room.

INCORPORATED SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING ENGLISH PROTESTANT SCHOOLS IN IRELAND.

No. 1.—PETITION TO KING GEORGE II. FOR A CHARTER OF INCORPORATION.

THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.

The humble petition of the LORD PRIMATE, LORD CHANCELLOR, ARCHBISHOPS, NOBLEMEN, BISHOPS, JUDGES, GENTRY and CLERGY of this your MAJESTY'S kingdom of IRELAND; whose names are hereunto subscribed:

HUMBLY SHEWETH,

THAT in many parts of this kingdom, there are great tracts of mountainy and coarse land, of ten, twenty, or thirty miles in length, and of considerable breadth, almost universally inhabited by Papists; and, that in most parts of the same, and more especially in the provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, the Papists far exceed the Protestants, of all sorts, in number.

That the generality of the Popish natives appear to have very little sense or knowledge of religion, but what they implicitly take from their clergy, to whose guidance in such matters, they seem wholly to give themselves up, and thereby are kept, not only in gross ignorance, but in great disaffection to your sacred Majesty, and Government, scarce any of them having appeared to be willing to abjure the Pretender to your Majesty's throne, so that if some effectual method be not made use of, to instruct these great numbers of people in the principles of religion and loyalty, there seems to be very little prospect, but that superstition, idolatry, and disaffection to your Majesty, and to your royal posterity, will, from generation to generation, be propagated amongst them.

Among the ways proper to be taken for the converting and civilizing of these poor deluded people, and bringing them (through the blessing of God) in time, to be good Christians and faithful subjects: one of the most necessary, and without which, all others are like to prove ineffectual, has always been thought to be, that a sufficient number of English Protestant schools be erected and established, wherein the children of the Irish natives might be instructed in the English tongue, and the fundamental principles of true religion, to both which they are generally great strangers.

In pursuance hereof, the parish ministers throughout the kingdom, have generally endeavoured, and often with some expense to themselves, to provide masters for such schools within their respective parishes, as the law requires them to do, but the richer Papists commonly refusing to send their children to such schools, and the poorer, which are much the greater number, not being able to pay the accustomed salary, as the law directs, for their children's schooling, such schoolmasters, where they have been placed, have seldom been able to subsist, and in most places, sufficient masters are discouraged from undertaking such an employment; nor is it (as we conceive) to be expected, that the residence of the Protestant clergy upon their respective benefices, will ever be a sufficient remedy for this growing evil, if some effectual encouragement be not given to such English Protestant schools.

To the intent, therefore, that the youth of this kingdom, may generally be brought up in the principles of true religion and loyalty, in all succeeding generations,

We, your Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, most humbly beseech your Majesty, that out of your great goodness, you would be pleased to grant your royal charter, for incorporating such persons as your Majesty shall think fit, and enabling them to accept of gifts, benefactions, and lands, to such a value as your Majesty, in your great wisdom, shall think to be proper; that the same may be employed, under such rules and directions, as your Majesty shall approve of, for the supporting and maintaining such schools, as may be erected in the most necessary places, where the children of the poor may be taught gratis.

And, we are the more encouraged to make this humble application, from the good success which the same method has already had, and (through God's blessing) we hope will further have, among your Majesty's subjects of North Britain. And also, in some measure, by what we have seen already done in this kingdom, in some few places, where such schools have been erected, and maintained at the private expense of charitable persons.

We humbly submit ourselves to your Majesty's great wisdom and goodness, and as in duty bound shall ever pray.

Dated this 17th day of April, 1730.

No. 2.—ROYAL CHARTER OF KING GEORGE II.,

For Erecting English Protestant Schools, &c. (1733).

George the Second, by the grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith, &c. To all persons to whom these presents shall come. Forasmuch as we have received information by the petition of the Lord Primate, Lord Chancellor, archbishops, noblemen, bishops, judges, gentry, and clergy of our kingdom of Ireland, that in many parts of our said kingdom there are great tracts of mountainy and coarse land, of ten, twenty, and thirty miles in length, and of considerable breadth, almost entirely inhabited by Papists, and that in most parts of the same, and more especially in the provinces of Leinster, Munster, and Connaught, the Papists far exceed the Protestants of all denominations in number. That the generality of the Popish natives appear to have very little sense or knowledge of religion, but what they implicitly take from their clergy, to whose guidance, in such matters, they seem wholly to give themselves up, and thereby are kept, not only in gross ignorance, but also in great disaffection to our person and government, scarce any of them appearing to have been willing to abjure the Pretender to our throne. So that if some effectual method be not made use of to instruct these great numbers of people in the principles of true religion and loyalty, Recites, that in many parts of this Kingdom there are great tracts of land almost entirely inhabited by Papists.

That they are kept by their clergy in great ignorance of the true religion, and bred up in great disaffection to the Government.

there is little prospect but that superstition and idolatry and disaffection to us and our royal posterity will, from generation to generation, be propagated amongst them. That amongst the ways proper to be taken for converting and civilizing of the said deluded persons, and bringing them (through the blessing of God) in time to be good Christians and faithful subjects, one of the most necessary, and without which all others are likely to prove ineffectual, has always been thought to be the erecting and establishing a sufficient number of English Protestant schools, wherein the children of the Irish natives may be instructed in the English tongue, and the fundamental principles of true religion. That in pursuance thereof, the parish ministers (throughout our said kingdom) have generally endeavoured, and often with some expence to themselves, to provide masters for such schools within their respective parishes, as the law requires them to do; but the richer Papists commonly refusing to send their children to such schools, and the poorer (which are much the greater number) not being able to pay the accustomed salary, as the law directs for their children's schooling, such schoolmasters (where they have been placed) have seldom been able to subsist; and, in most places, sufficient masters are utterly discouraged from undertaking such an employment; nor is it to be expected that the residence of the Protestant clergy, upon their respective benefices, will ever be a sufficient remedy for this growing evil, if some effectual encouragement be not given to such English Protestant schools. To the intent therefore, that the children of the Popish, and other poor natives of our said kingdom of Ireland, may be instructed in the English tongue, and in the principles of true religion and loyalty, in all succeeding generations.

That the erecting of Protestant English schools in those places is absolutely necessary for their conversion.

That the English parish schools already established are not sufficient for that purpose, nor can the residence of the parochial clergy only fully answer the end.

And to the end that so good a design may the more orderly and effectually be carried on, know ye therefore, that we, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, by and with the advice and consent of our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin and councillor, Lionel Cranfield, Duke of Dorset, our lieutenant-general, and general governor of our said kingdom of Ireland, and according to the tenor and effect of our letters, under our privy-signet and sign-manual, bearing date at our Court at Richmond, the twelfth day of July, one thousand seven hundred and thirty-three, in the seventh year of our reign, have granted, ordained, declared, constituted, and appointed: and by these presents we do for us, our heirs and successors, grant, ordain, declare, constitute, and appoint, that our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin and councillor, Lionel Cranfield, Duke of Dorset, our lieutenant-general, and general governor of our kingdom of Ireland, and the chief governor or governors of our said kingdom, for the time being; ..... Hugh, Lord Archbishop of Ardmagh, Primate of all Ireland, ... and the Archbishops of Ardmagh, for the time being; ..... Thomas, Lord Windham, our Chancellor, and the chancellor, commissioner or commissioners, keeper or keepers of the Great Seal of our kingdom of Ireland, for the time being; ..... the Archbishops of Dublin, Cashell, and Tuam, for the time being; ..... [here follow the then Earls of Kildare, Roscommon, Cavan, Mountrath, Bellemont, and Kerry; the then Viscounts Netterville, Charlemont, Mountcashell, Tyrone, and Duncannon;] ..... and the bishops of Meath, Kildare, Waterford and Lismore, Cork and Ross, Clogher, Raphoe, Killaloe, Derry, Down and Connor, Kilmore and Ardagh, Ferns and Leighlin, Limerick, Ardfert and Aghadoe, Dromore, Elphin, Killala, Ossory and Clonfert, for the time being;* ..... [here follow the then Lords Athenree, Howth, Santry, Altham, and Southwell;] ..... and the Chief Justice of our Court of King's Bench, the Master of the Rolls, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, the Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer of our kingdom of Ireland, for the time being; the Speaker of the House of Commons of our kingdom of Ireland, for the time being; [here follow the names of the then Puisne Judges of the three Common Law Courts, and the then Lord Mayor;] and the Lord Mayor of our city of Dublin, for the time being; ..... Charles, Bishop of Kildare, and Doctor Jonathan Swift, ... and the deans of Christchurch and St. Patrick, Dublin, for the time being; ..... and the Prime Sergeant, Attorney, and Solicitor-General, for the time being; ..... the Archdeacon of Dublin, for the time being; ..... the Provosts and Vice-Provosts [of Trinity College, Dublin], for the time being ..... [here follow ninety other names]; and such others as shall be from time to time chosen, nominated, and elected, in and to the places and stead of such of them as shall decease; shall be one society, corporation, and body politick, to have continuance for ever by the name of the INCORPORATED SOCIETY in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland; and that by the same name they shall have perpetual succession; and that they and their successors (by that name) shall be able and capable in law, to purchase have, take, receive, and enjoy to them and their successors, in fee and in perpetuity, any manors, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, pensions, tithes, or other hereditaments in our kingdom of Ireland,† not exceeding in the whole the clear yearly value of two thousand pounds sterling. And further, that they may take and receive any sum or sums of money, or any manner or portion of goods or chattels that shall to them be given, granted, devised or bequeathed by any person or persons, bodies politick and corporate, capable to make a gift or devise thereof; and therewith and thereout to erect, maintain, and support in all places of our said kingdom of Ireland, where they shall judge the same to be most necessary and convenient, such, and so many English Protestant schools, as they shall think proper.

The Lord Lieutenant and some of the chief nobility, gentry, and clergy of this Kingdom are appointed Commissioners to execute the purposes of this Charter.

The said Commissioners have a power to elect others in the room of their deceased members, and are constituted a Corporation or Body Politick, by the name of the Incorporated Society in Dublin for promoting English Protestant schools.

Are made capable to receive and enjoy in perpetuity manors, lands, &c., the same not exceeding the yearly value of £2,000, to be applied for the establishing and supporting English Protestant schools in such places as they shall think proper.

* The Bishop of Cloyne and the Chancellor of the Exchequer were by mistake omitted in the Charter. See note above, page 104.

† A.D. 1792, an additional Charter was granted by His present Majesty (George III.), by which the Society is enabled to receive and enjoy any manors, &c., not exceeding in the whole the clear yearly value of three thousand pounds sterling, in addition to the lands which, by the first Charter, the Society was empowered to hold. And they are also enabled to grant leases in possession, and not in reversion, on their estates, within any city, town-corporate, or market town, for any term not exceeding 99 years; and in any other place for any term not exceeding three lives or 31 years, reserving the best rent that can be obtained for the same.

The said Society is empowered to nominate and appoint proper schoolmasters and schoolmistresses, to be approved and licensed by the archbishops and bishops respectively, to continue during the pleasure of the said Society.

And, we do hereby give to the said Society full power and authority, to nominate and appoint fit and able persons, to be approved and licensed by the archbishops, or bishops of this kingdom, in their respective dioceses, to be schoolmasters and schoolmistresses of the same, and to continue schoolmasters and schoolmistresses therein, during the will and pleasure of the said Society, to teach the children of the Popish, and other poor natives of our said kingdom, the English tongue, and to teach them to read, especially the Holy Scriptures, and other good and pious books; and to instruct them in the principles of the Protestant religion, established in our said kingdom, and to teach them to write, and to instruct them in arithmetick, and such other parts of learning, as to the said Society shall seem meet, and to bring them up in virtue and industry; and to cause them to be instructed in husbandry and housewifery, or in trades or manufactures, or in such like manual occupations, as the said Society shall think proper.

The schoolmasters and schoolmistresses to be supported by this Society, and are to be provided with all things necessary for the instruction of the poor children in the principles of the Protestant religion, reading, writing, and arithmetic; as likewise with useful tracts and all necessary materials proper for teaching them housewifery, trades, &c.

The said Society out of the fund aforesaid, providing for the said poor children, or for such of them, as by the said Society shall be judged proper, all necessary materials and utensils; as also bibles, common prayer books, and other proper books; and giving them, or to such of them, as the said Society shall think proper, encouragements, by providing clothes, diet, and lodging for them, as to the said Society shall seem meet, until such time as they shall judge the said children fit to be put out to trades or services, or other employments; and to allow the said masters and mistresses respectively, such yearly wages or salaries, as to them shall seem reasonable and fitting; together with the benefit of school-houses, dwelling-houses, gardens, fields, and other fitting accommodations for the said masters and mistresses and children, for the purposes aforesaid, to be hired, taken, purchased, and built by the said Society, according to the exigencies and conveniences of the places wherein the said Schools shall be erected.

[Here follow clauses empowering the Society and their successors, by the name aforesaid, to sue and be sued in all Courts, and to have a common Seal.]

The Society to have a general meeting quarterly, viz., the first Wednesdays in May, August, November, and February, or oftener, and any seven to be a quorum.

And for the better carrying on the aforesaid pious design, we ordain and appoint, that the said Society have a general meeting of the members thereof quarterly in Dublin, at such place or places as they shall think proper, viz., the first Wednesdays in May, August, November, and February, yearly, in all time coming, and oftener, when and where the said Society shall think meet. And any seven members of the said Society who shall convene at the said times and places, are hereby declared to be a quorum of the said general meetings, and to be able and capable to do and transact all acts, matters and things relating to the affairs of the said Society. And the said Society, at their first general meeting, which we hereby direct to be on the first of the said quarterly days, that shall be thirty days next after the date of these presents (timely intimation whereof, the said Lord Primate, or Lord Chancellor, or the Commissioners of the Great Seal of Ireland, for the time being, are hereby empowered and required to give to the members of the said Society), are, by plurality of voices, of such as shall be present, to elect from among themselves a President and Vice-President. And also to elect a Treasurer, Secretary, Register, or Clerk, and such other officers and servants as they shall find needful, to continue till the first Wednesday in November next thereafter, and until others be chosen to succeed them. And the said President, or Vice-President, at the time of such election, is hereby empowered to administer an oath to the said Treasurer, Secretary, Register, or Clerk, and the said other officers, and servants, which oath they are hereby respectively required to take for the due and faithful execution of their respective offices. And, we do further, for us, our heirs, and successors, direct and appoint, that upon the first Wednesday in November, in all time coming (or in case of any emergency preventing their meeting on that day, then at the next meeting thereafter), the said general meeting shall make a new election of persons to serve in the aforesaid respective offices, or continue the former, as they shall think most convenient. And likewise, we do hereby ordain and appoint, that the said Society do, at their first general meeting, nominate and appoint fifteen of their number to be a committee, to meet in Dublin the first Monday in every month, or oftener, as need shall require, in such place or places as shall be agreed upon by the said Society, and the said committee, or any three or more of them, at the time and place appointed for their meeting, are hereby empowered to carry into execution all such orders, rules, and directions as shall from time to time be made by the said Society, pursuant to the powers hereby given to them; the said committee to continue till the first Wednesday in November next following the said first meeting of the said Society; at which time, and on every first Wednesday in *November yearly, the said Society shall nominate fifteen of their members to be a committee for one year, for the purpose aforesaid. And further, the said Society, at their general meetings, are hereby empowered, as they shall see cause, to nominate and appoint fit persons in any place of our dominions, or elsewhere, to receive subscriptions, money, or other things, contributed towards the aforesaid design. And, we do hereby will and ordain, that the Treasurer do lay before the said Society, at their general meeting on the first Wednesday in November, yearly, an account of his receipts and disbursements for the year then ending; which, being examined and approved by the said Society, shall be entered in a book, to be kept for that purpose; which book, and all other the books and papers of the said Society, shall at all times be open and free for the perusal of the several members thereof, that they may see what lands, goods, chattels, and sums of money have been given to, and received by, the said Society from time to time, and how the same have been laid out and applied, by virtue of these presents, or any authority hereby given.

The said Society at the first general meeting to elect a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Secretary, and Register or Clerk, &c.

The President or Vice-President to administer an oath to the Treasurer, &c., for the faithful execution of their offices.

That the said Society at the first general meeting upon the first Wednesday in November, or next meeting thereafter, make a new election of persons to serve in the said offices or continue the former.

The Society at their first general meeting to appoint a Committee of fifteen of their number, which Committee is to have a meeting in Dublin, and is empowered to carry into execution all rules and directions of the said Society; and a Committee in manner aforesaid is to be chosen yearly on every first Wednesday in November.*

The Society to nominate persons to receive subscriptions, benefactions, &c.

The Treasurer to lay before the Society on the first Wednesday in November, yearly, an account of his receipts and disbursements, the same to be entered in a book.

* By an Act 34th Geo. III., chap. 15, sec. 7th, the election of officers and servants, and the appointment of a Committee of fifteen, is to be made "at a general board of the said Society to be holden on the first Wednesday in February (instead of November) in every year, between the hours of one and three in the afternoon."

And we do hereby, for us, our heirs, and successors, grant unto the said Society, at their quarterly meetings, in all time coming, and at no other meetings, full power to make such rules and ordinances, and from time to time to alter the same, as they shall judge most convenient and needful for the good government of the said Society, and management of the affairs thereof, and the effectual promotion of the good ends intended hereby, and to give such instructions, directions, orders, encouragements, and salaries to those they employ, as they shall judge needful and reasonable. Provided always, that the said rules, ordinances, instructions, and directions be not repugnant to the laws and statutes then in force within our said kingdom of Ireland: And that the same be approved of and confirmed by the said Lord Primate, or one of the said Lord Archbishops, for the time being, and one of our said Lord Chief Justices, or Chief Baron, for the time being. [Here follow clauses to the effect that whenever the President, Vice-President, &c., shall die, the survivors shall remain incorporate; and they, or any seven of them, may appoint a new President, or Vice-President, &c., in the room of such persons; and upon the death or removal of their Treasurer, Secretary, &c., they shall in like manner choose others to succeed; and seven of them at such general meetings may remove from their offices any such Treasurer, &c., for misdemeanors.]

A power to make such rules, &c., as the said Society shall think necessary.

A proviso that the said rules be not repugnant to the laws of this Kingdom, and the same be approved by the Lord Primate, Chief Judges, &c.

And our will and pleasure is that no lease or leases of any lands or tenements belonging to the said Society be made or executed but at some one of their general and quarterly meetings, with the approbation of the President, or Vice-President, and Treasurer, and the major part of the other members then present, such major part being at least seven in number, and that every lease so to be made shall be of lands, tenements, or hereditaments in possession, and not in reversion, and for a term not exceeding three lives, or thirty-one years, whereon there shall be reserved the best yearly rent that can be had or gotten for the said lands or tenements at the time of making such leases respectively, without any fine or other income, to be had or taken for the same. And we further grant to the said Society full power and authority, at any of their quarterly meetings in time coming, to elect and assume into their number and Society, such subscribers or benefactors to their fund, being Protestants, as they shall judge fit and qualified to assist in carrying on the design aforesaid, which persons so from time to time elected, shall be deemed and taken to be members, and part of the said Society and Corporation, as if herein particularly named as such. Provided always, and we do hereby expressly declare our royal will and pleasure to be, that it shall not be lawful for the said Society to diminish their capital stock, arising from the annual rent or income of any manors, lands, tenements, annuities, pensions, tithes, or other hereditaments, whereof they shall at any time be seised or possessed by gift, purchase, or devise; but they shall confine their expences yearly to such annual rent or income, and to such sums of money, goods, and chattels as shall from year to year be subscribed or given to them, or the interests and profits thereof, etc., etc.

All leases of lands or tenements to be made at a general meeting and with the consent of the President, &c., the said meeting at least consisting of seven in number.

Every lease to be made not exceeding three lives or thirty-one years in possession and without fine.

Subscribers being Protestants to be admitted into the Society.

Proviso to restrain the Society from diminishing their capital stock.

Witness, our said Lord Lieutenant-General and General Governer of our said Kingdom of Ireland, at Dublin, the 24th day of October, 1733, in the seventh year of our reign.

No. 3.—LETTERS PATENT OF KING GEORGE III.,

To the Incorporated Society for Promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland.

[32*nd George* 3*rd*, 10*th January*, 1792.]

[Recite Letters Patent, 7th Geo. II., 24th October, 1733, whereby the Lord Lieutenant and other persons therein, and such others as should be nominated and elected in their place, were appointed a Corporation or body politic, by the name of the Incorporated Society in Dublin for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland, were made capable to receive and enjoy in fee, &c., lands, manors, &c., not exceeding the clear annual value of £2,000, also any sums of money granted or bequeathed to them, and to support English Protestant schools therewith, Provided that no lease of lands, &c., should be made or executed, but at some general and quarterly meeting, with approbation of President, &c., for three lives or thirty-one years in possession without fine.

Recital of Letters Patent, 7 Geo. II., 24 October, 1733.

That the Society by Petition stated, that it might prove of advantage, if enabled to take and enjoy further grants; that a great part of the Society's property consists of land and houses situate in the cities of Dublin and Cork, and that many of the houses are falling to ruin by reason of the restriction to leases not exceeding three lives or thirty-one years.

Petition of Society for larger powers of holding and leasing

That, therefore, the Society prayed by their Petition that their powers might be extended as to enjoyment of further grants, &c., and to be enabled to make longer leases of lands, &c., subject to restrictions as in Charter.]

Now know ye, that we of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, and by and with the advice and consent of our right trusty and right entirely beloved cousin and councillor, John, Earl of Westmoreland, our Lieutenant-General and General Governor of our said kingdom of Ireland; and according to the tenor and effect of our letters, under our privy signet and sign manual, bearing date at our Court at St. James's, the 16th day of June, 1791, in the thirty-first year of our reign, have given and granted, and by these presents for us, our heirs and successors, give and grant unto the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland, and to their successors for ever, full power and authority, and that they and their successors for ever (by that name) shall be able and capable in law to purchase, have, receive, take, and enjoy to them and their successors in fee and perpetuity, any manors, lands, tenements, rents, annuities, pensions, tithes, or other hereditaments in our kingdom of Ireland, not exceeding, in the whole, the clear yearly value of £3,000 sterling, in addition to the lands which the said Corporation was by the said Letters Patent of our said Royal Grandfather, empowered to take. And further, that they may take and receive any sum or sums of money, and any manner or portion of goods or chattels that shall to them be given, granted, devised, or bequeathed by any person or persons, bodies politic and corporate, capable to make a git for devise thereof, and therewith and thereout to erect, maintain, and support, in all places of our said kingdom of Ireland, where they shall judge the same to be most necessary and convenient, such and so many English Protestant schools as they shall think proper.

Society hereby made capable to receive and enjoy manors, lands, &c., not exceeding £3,000 yearly value in addition to foregoing amount of £2,000 yearly.

And therewith to erect and maintain schools as they may judge expedient.

To make leases within a city, town corporate, or market town, for terms not exceeding ninety-nine years, and in other places for three lives or thirty-one years.

And we also do hereby give and grant to the said Society, and their successors for ever (by the name aforesaid), full power and authority to give and grant any lease or leases of any lands or tenements belonging, or which may hereafter belong, to the said Society, and which are or shall be situate within any city, town corporate, or market-town, within our said kingdom of Ireland, for any term or number of years not exceeding ninety-nine years, and of any lands or tenements belonging, or which shall hereafter belong to the said Society, situate in any other place within our said kingdom of Ireland, for any term not exceeding the term of three lives or thirty-one years. Provided every of such lease and leases be made by the said Society at some one of their general and quarterly meetings, with the approbation of the President or Vice-President and Treasurer, and the major part of the other members then present, such major part being at least seven in number, and that every lease so to be made shall be of lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in possession and not in reversion, and that there shall be reserved on every such lease the best yearly rent that can be had or gotten for the said lands or tenements, at the time of making such leases respectively, without any fine or other income, to be had or taken for the same, but not otherwise, any clause, matter, or thing in the said recited Letters Patent, contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding, etc., etc.

Provided same be made at one of the general and quarterly meetings, with approbation of President, &c., in possession, at best yearly rent, and without fine.

Witness, our said Lord Lieutenant-General and General Governor of our said kingdom of Ireland, at Dublin, the 10th day of January, in the thirty-second year of our reign.

Enrolled in Rolls' Office, 18th January, 1792.

No. 4.—RANELAGH ESTATES ACT.

An Act, 1 George III., vesting the several estates granted by the Right Honourable Richard, late Earl of Ranelagh, for the erecting and supporting two Charity Schools in the Town of Athlone, and two Charity Schools in the town of Roscommon, in the Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland, and for other purposes mentioned therein.

Whereas by indenture bearing date on or about the Twenty-seventh day of August, One Thousand Seven Hundred and Eight, and made, or mentioned to be made, by and between the Right Honourable Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, of the one Part, and the Right Honourable Laurence, Earl of Rochester, the Right Honourable Sir Richard Cox, bart., the Right Honourable Henry Boyle, esq., the Right Honourable Charles Deering, esq., Sir William Robinson, knight, Robert Rochfort, esq., then Lord Chief Baron of the Court of Exchequer in Ireland, and William Westgarth, of the city of Dublin, esq., all since deceased, of the other Part; he, the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, did in pursuance of the powers and authorities therein mentioned, limit and appoint ALL THAT the castle, manor, town, and lands of Athlone, in the county of Roscommon, and the lands and liberties of the Brawney, and divers messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with the customs, provisions, duties, tithes, fishings, and commodities belonging to the said castle, house, manor, and town of Athlone, and to the Abbeys of St. Peter and Benedict, or either of them, situate, lying or being in the counties of Roscommon and Westmeath, or elsewhere in the province of Connaught, in as large and ample manner, to all intents and purposes, as the same were granted unto him, the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, by his late Majesty, King Charles the Second, in and by two letters patents under the Great Seal of Ireland, the one bearing date the Thirtieth day of July, One Thousand Six Hundred and Seventy-two, and the other bearing date the Eighteenth day of December, One Thousand Six Hundred and Seventy-five; and also all that and those the town and lands of Clonarke, containing four hundred and twenty-seven acres, profitable land, plantation measure, be the same more or less, and the lands of Gortecaughan alias Gortecarson, containing forty-three acres, two roods, and twenty perches of the like measure, be the same more or less, together with all and singular the rights, members, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, or in anywise appertaining, situate, lying, and being in the said barony of Athlone, in the said county of Roscommon, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, and the rents, issues, and profits of all and singular the said premisses, and all the estate, right, title, interest, property, claim and demand whatsoever of him, the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, of, in, to, or out of the said premisses, and every or any part or parcel thereof, unto the said Laurence, Earl of Rochester, Sir Richard Cox, Henry Boyle, Charles Deering, Sir William Robinson, Robert Rochfort, and William Westgarth, their heirs and assigns for ever, upon the trusts, and to and for the uses and purposes therein and hereinafter mentioned and declared: That is to say, to the use and behoof of the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, and his assigns, for and during the term of his natural life, without impeachment of or for any manner of waste; and from and after the decease of the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, to the use and behoof of the Right Honourable the Lady Catharine Jones, daughter of the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, and for and during the term of ninety-nine years, without impeachment of or for any manner of waste, if the said Lady Catharine Jones should so long live; And from and after the determination of that estate, to the use and behoof of the said Laurence, Earl of Rochester, Sir Richard Cox, Henry Boyle, Charles Deering, Sir William Robinson, Robert Rochfort, and William Westgarth, and their heirs, during the life of the said Lady Catharine Jones, upon trust to support the contingent remainders therein mentioned. And from and after the decease of the said Lady Catharine Jones, to the use and behoof of such person as should be the husband of her, the said Lady Catharine Jones, at the time of her decease, for and during the term of his natural life: And from and after the decease of such husband, or in case the said Lady Catharine Jones should have no husband at the time of her decease, then to the use and behoof of the heirs of the body of the said Lady Catharine Jones, lawfully issuing; and for want and in default of such issue, then upon trust, that the said Laurence, Earl of Rochester, Sir Richard Cox, Henry Boyle, Charles Deering, Sir William Robinson, Robert Rochfort, and William Westgarth, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them, should by, with, and out of the rents, issues, and profits of the said premises (but not by sale or mortgage of the same or any part thereof), erect and build in some convenient place in or near the said town of Athlone, two free schools, with a chapel belonging to them, and convenient lodgings for a schoolmaster and for a schoolmistress, according to a plan or model thereof to be directed and appointed by him, the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, by writing under his hand and seal, and for want of such directions and appointment, in such manner and form as the said trustees, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of the survivor of them, should think fit and convenient, the said two schools to be and continue for ever, the one for teaching and instructing gratis the poor Protestant boys of the town and manor of Athlone, and the other for teaching and instructing gratis the poor Protestant girls of the said town and manor of Athlone, the number of such boys not to exceed or be under the number of twenty at any one time, and the number of such girls also not to exceed or be under the number of twenty at any one time: The said schoolmaster to be always an English man, or of English extraction, and a Protestant, and in Holy Orders, and to be obliged to say prayers twice a day in the said chapel, and to preach and catechise the said boys and girls every Sunday, and the said schoolmistress to be always an English woman, or of English extraction, and a Protestant; the said schoolmaster and schoolmistress to be named by the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, with the advice of the bishops of Meath and Elphin, for the time being, and to be obliged to follow the directions of the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, and to be removeable upon misdemeanors: And the said twenty boys and twenty girls to be named also by the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, with the advice of some of the chief inhabitants of the said town and manor of Athlone; but none of the said boys or girls, so to be admitted, to be under the age of seven years, nor above the age of twelve years, and the said boys to be taught in that time in reading, writing, and arithmetick; and the said girls in reading, writing, spinning, and knitting, and such other works, as the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, should direct and appoint. And also upon further trust, that they the said Laurence, Earl of Rochester, Sir Richard Cox, Henry Boyle, Charles Deering, Sir William Robinson, Robert Rochfort, and William Westgarth, and the survivors of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them, should likewise by, with, and out of the rents, issues and profits of the said premises (but not by sale or mortgage of the same, or any part thereof) erect and build in some convenient place, in or near the town of Roscommon in the county of Roscommon, two free schools with a chapel belonging to them, and convenient lodgings for a schoolmaster and schoolmistress, according to the plan and model thereof, to be directed and appointed by him the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, by writing under his hand and seal, and for want of such directions, and appointment in such manner and form, as the said trustees, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of such survivor should think fit and convenient, the said two schools to be and continue for ever, the one for teaching and instructing gratis the poor Protestant boys of the town and manor of Roscommon, and the other to be for the teaching and instructing gratis the poor Protestant girls of the town and manor of Roscommon; the number of such boys not to exceed or be under the number of twenty at any one time, and the number of such girls also not to exceed or be under the number of twenty at any one time; the said schoolmaster to be always an English man, or of English extraction, and a Protestant, and in Holy Orders, and to be obliged to say prayers twice a day in the said chapel, and to preach and to catechise the said boys and girls every Sunday; and the said schoolmistress to be always an English woman, or of English extraction, and a Protestant; the said schoolmaster and schoolmistress to be also named by the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, with the advice of the bishops of Meath and Elphin, for the time being, and to be obliged to follow the directions of the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, and to be removable upon misdemeanor; and the said twenty boys and twenty girls to be named also by the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, with the advice of some of the chief inhabitants of the said town and manor of Roscommon, but none of the said boys and girls so to be admitted to be under the age of seven years, nor above the age of twelve years, and the said boys to be taught in reading, writing and arithmetick; and the said girls in reading, writing, spinning, and knitting, and such other work as the said trustees or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, should direct and appoint. And upon further trust, that they

the said trustees, and the survivors of them, should, by the ways and means aforesaid, raise and pay unto the said schoolmasters the sum of thirty pounds a year a piece for their respective salaries, and unto the said schoolmistresses the sum of twenty pounds a year a piece likewise, for their respective salaries; the said salaries to be paid unto them, the said schoolmasters and schoolmistresses, respectively, by even and equal half-yearly payments, that is to say, on the first day of May and the first day of November, clear of all taxes, charges, and deductions whatsoever. And upon further trust, that the said trustees, and the survivors or survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them, should by the ways and means aforesaid, clothe the said forty boys and forty girls once in every year, the charge, however, not to exceed the sum of one pound sterling for the clothing each boy and girl. And upon further trust, that they, the said trustees, and the survivors of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them, should by the ways and means aforesaid, raise and pay the sum of five pounds a year to each of the said four schools, for and towards the providing of each of the said schools with fuel for firing, and for the buying of books, to wit, Bibles and Common Prayer Books, for the use of the said schools. And upon further trust, that they the said trustees, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them, should out of the rents, issues, and profits of the said premises, lay aside yearly, and every year, from and after the said several schools or hospitals should be erected and finished, and the said boys and girls be thereunto admitted, the sum of eighty pounds sterling, as a stock, and lodge the same in some safe hands, and should at the end of five years, at which time the said stock would amount to the sum of four hundred pounds, lay out and dispose of the same in and for the binding out apprentices, twenty of the said boys and twenty of the said girls, viz., ten boys and ten girls out of each of the said four schools, to such trades as they the said trustees, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of the survivor of them, should judge most proper, giving ten pounds sterling with each of them, the said boys and girls; and after the determination of the said five years, should lay out and dispose of the said sum of eighty pounds a year, in and for the binding out apprentices, four of the said boys, and four of the said girls, viz., two boys and two girls out of each of the said four schools, every year for ever, preference to be always given to the four seniors of the said boys, and the four seniors of the said girls, but none of them to have that advantage who should not have continued five years in the said schools, from their first admittance, and upon the death of any boy or girl admitted to the said schools as aforesaid, or upon apprenticing any of the said boys and girls in manner aforesaid, forthwith, to fill up the vacancies of such boys or girls so dying, or put out apprentices as aforesaid, by admitting the like number of other boys and girls into the said schools, in the room of them so dying, or apprenticed in manner as aforesaid.

And it is thereby declared that the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them should, from time to time, have power to appoint a receiver of the rents of the said premisses, and to allow him a salary not exceeding the sum of twenty pounds a year; and that such receiver should be subject to the directions of the said trustees, or the major part of them, and the survivors or survivor of them, and the heirs of the survivor of them, and removeable at his or their pleasure, and to give good security for his true accounting for what he should so receive.

And upon this further trust, that they the said trustees, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor should, after payment of all and every the sum and sums of money before mentioned, and after payment for the repairs of the said four schools, so to be erected and built as aforesaid, by the ways and means aforesaid, raise and pay by half-yearly payments as aforesaid, the sum of twenty pounds a year, to the minister of Athlone aforesaid, for the time being, for ever, and also, twenty pounds a year to the minister of Roscommon aforesaid, for the time being, for ever, and should apply the overplus (if any there should be) of the rents, issues, and profits of the said premises, after the trusts and use in the said deed mentioned should be satisfied, for the use of the hospital at Dublin, founded by his late Majesty, King Charles the Second, for old and decayed soldiers, as they the said trustees, and the survivors and survivor of them, or the heirs of the survivor of them, should think fit and convenient.

And upon further trust, that they the said trustees, or the major part of them, or the survivors or survivor of them, or the heirs of the survivor of them, should, with the consent and approbation of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, for the time being, grant leases of the premises thereby granted, or any part thereof, upon the expiration of the then present leases, to such person or persons, and under such rents and covenants as they should judge most advantageous for the said charity. So as the then present rent of the said premises should not be lessened, if the same could possibly be avoided.

And upon further trust, that where any part of the said premises were then let for lives, with a covenant to supply a life falling, upon the payment of a fine, that the benefit of such fine should be applied for the use of the said four free schools, and particularly for the repairs thereof.

And whereas the said Richard, Earl of Ranelagh, died in or about the year 1711, but did not in his lifetime direct or appoint any plan or model for the building of the aforesaid free schools, or any of them, and upon his death, his daughter, the said Lady Catharine Jones, came into the possession and receipt of the rents, issues, and profits of the said lands and premises, and continued in the receipt thereof until her death.

And whereas the said Lady Catharine Jones died in the year 1740, unmarried and without issue.

And whereas the said Sir Richard Cox survived all the rest of the said trustees, and died in or about the year 1733, leaving Sir Richard Cox, baronet, his grandson, and heir-at-law, to whom the legal estate of the said lands and premises, subject to the said trusts, descended and came.

And whereas by deeds of lease and release, bearing date, respectively, on or about the 15th and 16th days of April, in the year of our Lord, 1748, the deed of release being made, or mentioned to be made between the said Sir Richard Cox of the first part, the Right Honourable Robert Lord Baron Newport, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and the Right Honourable Thomas Marlay, esq., Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of Chief Place in Ireland, of the second part, and Sir Arthur Gore, baronet, now the Right Honourable the Lord Viscount Sudley, the Honourable Arthur Dawson, esq., one of the Barons of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer, Anthony Malone, esq., now Chancellor of the said Court of Exchequer, Philip Tisdall, esq., His Majesty's Solicitor-General, Nehemiah Donnellan, and Godfrey Willes, esquires, the said Sir Richard Cox, for the considerations therein mentioned, by and with the consent and approbation of the said Robert, then Lord Chancellor of Ireland, and of the Right Honourable Thomas Marlay, esq., then Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of Chief Place in Ireland, did grant and release, and convey all and singular the said castle, manors, towns, lands, tithes, tenements, and hereditaments, unto the said Arthur Gore, now the Right Honourable the Lord Viscount Sudley, Arthur Dawson, Anthony Malone, Philip Tisdall, Nehemiah Donnellan, and Godfrey Willes, their heirs and assigns, to the use of them the said Sir Arthur Gore, Arthur Dawson, Anthony Malone, Philip Tisdall, Nehemiah Donnellan, and Godfrey Willes, and of the said Sir Richard Cox, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor, upon the said several trusts and confidences, and to and for the said several uses, intents, and purposes, in and by the said recited indenture of the Twenty-seventh of August, 1708, and directed and appointed to take effect, from the death of the said Lady Catharine Jones, without issue.

And whereas the said charitable intentions of the said Richard, late Earl of Ranelagh, have not been hitherto carried into execution, nor any of the said four free schools erected or built; and from the present circumstances and situation of the said towns of Athlone and Roscommon, the said four free schools, if now to be erected and built, and to be conducted under the said several rules and regulations, would not be of much advantage to the said towns of Athlone and Roscommon, or to the public; and it will be greatly for the benefit of the said towns of Athlone and Roscommon, and of the public, that all and every the said manors, towns, lands, tenements, hereditaments, and tithes, which now remain vested as aforesaid, in the said Arthur Lord Viscount Sudley, Arthur Dawson, Anthony Malone, Philip Tisdall, Nehemiah Donnellan, and Godfrey Willes, esquires, and the said Sir Richard Cox, baronet, for the uses and upon the trusts aforesaid, should be from henceforth vested in the Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, upon the several trusts, and to the several uses hereinafter mentioned, which cannot be effectually done without the aid of an Act of Parliament.

Be it enacted by the King's most excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords spiritual and temporal and Commons in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that the said castle, manor, town and lands of Athlone, in the county of Roscommon, and the said lands and liberties of the Brawney, and the divers messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, with the customs, provisions, duties, tithes, fishings, and commodities belonging to the said castle, house, manor, and town of Athlone, and to the Abbeys of St. Peter and St. Benedict, or either of them, situate, lying, or being in the counties of Roscommon and Westmeath, or elsewhere in the said province of Connaught; and also all that and these, the said towns and lands of Clonark, and the said lands of Gaurtecaughan, otherwise Gortecorson, together with all and singular the rights, members, and appurtenances to the said premisses belonging, or in anywise appertaining, and the reversion and reversions, remainder and remainders, and the yearly and other the rents, issues, and profits of all and singular the said premisses, shall be from henceforth vested, and shall be deemed and taken to be in the legal and actual seizin and possession of the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland for ever; to the uses, intents, and purposes, and upon the several trusts hereinafter mentioned, and to no other use, intent, purpose, or trust, whatsoever.

And whereas great arrears of the rents that have grown due since the death of the said Lady Catharine Jones, out of the said lands, tenements, hereditaments, tithes, and premisses, remain still due and in arrear; and also several fines remain due upon the deaths of several of the lives for which some parts of the premisses were held, and several large sums of money have been received on account of rents and fines that have so become due out of said premisses, by several persons.

Be it further enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that all and every the yearly and other the yearly rents, profits, and emoluments that have become due and payable out of the said manor, lands, tenements, hereditaments, tithes, and other the said premisses, or out of any part or parts thereof, since the death of the said Lady Catharine Jones, and all fines of renewal, that have become due or demandable for, or by reason of the deaths, or death of any of the life or lives for which any part or parts of the said premisses was, or were held since the death of the said Lady Catharine Jones, shall be vested in the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland. And that the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, shall be, and are hereby authorized to sue for in any court of law or equity, and receive or compound for all rents, and arrears of rents, and fines for renewal, that have grown or become due since the death of the said Lady Catharine Jones, and that remain unpaid out of the said castle, manor, towns, lands, tithes, tenements, hereditaments, and premisses, or any part or parts thereof, and also, all such sums of money as have been received by any person or persons for or on account of the said rents and fines, or any part or parts thereof. Provided always that such agreement or composition be approved of by the Lord Chancellor, and Lord Chief Justice of His Majesty's Court of King's Bench for the time being, or by either of them.

And be it further enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that the said Incorporated Society shall out of the yearly rents, issues, and profits of the said lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premisses, pay unto the minister or clergyman, for the time being, who shall have the cure of souls in Athlone, the sum of twenty pounds a year for ever, and the like sum of twenty pounds a year for ever to the minister of Roscommon, for the time being, the said several sums of twenty pounds a year to be payable to the said ministers respectively, in half yearly payments, on the 1st day of May and the 1st day of November for ever; the first payment thereof to commence and to be made on the 1st day of November, which shall happen next after the schools hereinafter mentioned shall be built and furnished, and that the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, shall, by and out of the remainder of the yearly rents, issues, and profits of the said lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premisses, and by and out of the arrears of rents, fines, and sums of money hereby vested in the said Incorporated Society, build one or more good and sufficient house or houses in or near the said town of Athlone, and one or more good and sufficient house or houses in or near the said town of Roscommon, with proper and convenient yards, out-houses, gardens, and inclosures to the said several houses, for the reception, maintenance, and education of so many poor Protestant boys and girls, if such can be conveniently had, as the clear remaining income of the said castle, manors, towns, lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premises, will properly maintain and support, under such rules and regulations as the said Incorporated Society shall direct and appoint. And that the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, shall have power, and is hereby authorized and enabled, as often as any of the said lands, tenements, hereditaments, tithes, and other the premisses hereby vested in them, shall be out of lease, to make new leases thereof, or of any part thereof, for such terms, and in such terms, and in such manner as hereinafter is mentioned (that is to say), of such part of the said premisses as lie within the said town of Athlone, for any term not exceeding the term of sixty-one years, in possession, and not in reversion, and of all or any part or parts of the rest of the said manor, lands, tithes, hereditaments, and premisses, for any term not exceeding the term of thirty-one years, in possession, and not in reversion. Provided always, that upon every lease or leases the said Incorporated Society shall hereafter think fit to make of any part of the said premisses, the best and highest rent that can be reasonably had or got for the same at the time of making thereof, be reserved and made payable thereby, and that the same may be made without any fine. And that the said Incorporated Society shall be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to appoint and choose a receiver of the said rents, and to give him a yearly salary not exceeding twenty pounds a year, for his care and trouble in collecting the said rents, and that such receiver so to be by the said Incorporated Society appointed, shall give good and sufficient security to the said Incorporated Society to be accountable to them for the rents he shall so receive.

And whereas several sums of money, amounting in the whole to the sum of £1,338 12*s.* 4*d.*, sterling, part of the rents of the said premisses, which became due since the death of the said Lady Catharine Jones, were deposited with the Right Reverend Father in God, Doctor Edward Synge, now Lord Bishop of Elphin, who agreed to receive the same for the benefit of the said charity, upon the terms of keeping such sums as should be paid into his hands on that account, in the same manner that he kept his own proper money, and not otherwise, whereout the said Edward, Lord Bishop of Elphin, paid to Luke Vipond, attorney, the sum of £50 9*s.* 7*d.*, in full of a bill of costs and gratuity for business done by the said Luke Vipond, relating to the said trust, which being deducted from the said sum of £1,338 12*s.* 4*d.*, there then remained in the hands of the said Edward, Lord Bishop of Elphin, the sum of £1,288 2*s.* 9*d.*, which said last-mentioned sum, together with several other sums of the said Bishop's own money, amounting to the sum of £1,311 5*s.*, to the amount in the whole of £2,599 7*s.* 9*d.*, he, the said Lord Bishop of Elphin, before the 3rd of March, 1755, had lodged and deposited for safe custody only in the bank, lately kept in the City of Dublin, by Messieurs William Lennox and George French.

And whereas the said bankers soon after failed in their credit, and stopped payment, and the said Lord Bishop of Elphin hath not hitherto been able to get, nor hath he received out of the said sum of £2,599 7*s.* 9*d.*, any more than the sum of £895 2*s.* 9*d.* And it being just and reasonable that the loss sustained by the failure of said bankers, should be borne respectively by the said Incorporated Society, and the said Edward, Lord Bishop of Elphin, in the proportion the said sum of £1,288 2*s.* 9*d.* bears to the said sum of £1,311 5*s.*, which was deposited in the hands of the said bankers as aforesaid, and that upon the payment over of such proportionable part of the said sum of £895 2*s.* 9*d.* to the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, by the said Lord Bishop of Elphin, and upon his the said Bishop's contracting and engaging to pay over to the said Incorporated Society in the like proportions, any further sum or sums of money he shall receive, or be paid on account of the said debt of £2,599 7*s.* 9*d.*, that he be exonerated and discharged from the said sum of £1,288 2*s* 9*d.*

Be it enacted, by the authority aforesaid, that the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, be empowered, and the said Incorporated Society is hereby directed and required to take and accept of the said proportion of the said sum of £895 2*s.* 9*d.* aforesaid, together with the said Lord Bishop's own covenant and engagement to pay over to the said Incorporated Society, in the same proportions, any further sum or sums of money the said Bishop of Elphin, his executors, administrators, or assigns, shall or may hereafter receive, and be paid by the said bankers or their assigns, on account of the deposit of £2,599 7*s.* 9*d.*, in full satisfaction of the said sum of £1,288 2*s.* 9*d.*

Saving, nevertheless, to the King's most excellent Majesty, his heirs and successors, and all bodies politick and corporate, and all and every person and persons whatsoever, except the said Arthur, Lord Viscount Sudley, Arthur Dawson, Anthony Malone, Philip Tisdall, Nehemiah Donnellan, and Godfrey Willes, esquires, and the said Sir Richard Cox, baronet, for and in respect of the legal estates vested in them respectively, by the hereinbefore recited deeds of lease and release, all such estate, right, title, interest, claim, and demand whatsoever, whether in law or equity, of, in, to, or out of the said premisses hereby vested, as they, or any of them had before the passing of this Act, or should, or might have had in case this Act had never been made, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that the expense of passing this present Act of Parliament shall be defrayed and paid by the said Incorporated Society in Dublin, for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, out of the rents, issues, and profits of the manor, lands, and premisses, and the said arrear of rent, and the sums reserved or to be reserved on account thereof, which are hereby vested in the said Society for the purposes aforesaid.

No. 5—ABSTRACT OF WILL OF BISHOP POCOCKE.

[Proved in the Court of Prerogative, and Administration granted on the 25th June, 1766, to the Rev. Thomas Burton.]

1763. July 10th. By WILL of this date, Richard Pococke, Doctor of Laws, and Bishop of Ossory, gave and bequeathed to his sister, Elizabeth Pococke, spinster, then of Newtown in Hampshire, his house and land in Newtown, Hampshire, in which she then lived.

And Testator thereby left all his manuscripts to the Radcliffe Library, Oxford, and thereby made the Incorporated Society, &c., the Executors of his said last will and testament, and gave, devised, and bequeathed to them all his estate, real and personal, except as before excepted,

In trust for the uses following:—He thereby left to each of his servants, William Belcher and his wife, the sum of £10, and to all the rest of his then servants living with him at his house in Kilkenny, the sum of £5 each, and to all his English servants the sum of £5 each over and above the £10, and £5 in case they left Ireland to settle in England.

And Testator thereby left the interest of all his estate, real and personal, and all the income of his said estate, real and personal, to his sister aforesaid, during her life, and desired it to be remitted to her quarterly, as it should come in; and after the decease of his sister, testator thereby left his estate, real and personal, for the uses following—

To found a weaving school at Lintown, near Kilkenny, in the house Testator built, for weaving, for Papist boys who should be from twelve to sixteen years old, and who had not been at any school before of any public foundation, and particularly in none of the Charter schools, to be apprenticed to the Society at fourteen years old, for seven years, said boys to be bred to the Protestant religion, and Testator thereby devised, that all his antiquities, and everything relating to Natural History, and all his coins and medals, should be sent to England, to London, to be sold by public auction, as likewise all his books, which would not sell here according to a just value. And Testator desired that the Rev. Mr. Mervyn Archdall be requested to pack up his Natural Curiosities, and label them, for which he desired that a proper present might be made to him, though he was a signing witness to said will.

And Testator declared same to be his last will and testament, and desired same should stand good though it should be deficient in point of law.

Executed in presence of three witnesses, and attested.

1765. March 24th. Testator made a codicil to his said will as of this date.

And thereby left to his sister Elizabeth, his house and land in said parish of Newtown, Hampshire.

And Testator left and bequeathed to his servant, William Belcher, and his wife, each of them £20, and to all his other servants living with him at his house at the time of his death, the sum of £5 each, and to all those who were English, and immediately transplant themselves into England, £5 more to each of them to bear their charges.

And Testator thereby devised that the Rev. Mervyn Archdall should pack up carefully his natural collection in will before-mentioned, for which trouble Testator thereby bequeathed unto said Rev. Mervyn Archdall the sum of £25, and he directed said curiosities should be sent by sea to London as therein.

And Testator thereby left all the residue of his estate, real and personal, to the Incorporated Society in Dublin for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland.

In trust for the uses following:—1st. That the interest and rents should be paid half-yearly to his said sister Elizabeth, or her order, during her natural life, and then to Elizabeth Mills, spinster, of Higham Ferrars, for and during her natural life, excepting that said Testator left to Elizabeth Mills £—— a year, English money, during her life, £4 English money to Jane Bingham, of Havant, spinster, during her life, and then testator left all his estate, real and personal, for founding a school for Papist boys from ten to twelve years, who should become Protestant, and to be bred to linen-weaving, and instructed in the principles of Protestant religion, said boys not to have been at any school before of any public legal foundation, and in particular in none of the Charter schools, to be apprenticed to the Society after they are fourteen years old for seven years, and desiring that his manufacturing house at Lintown, Kilkenny, if not disposed of by Testator, should be applied to that use; and if the Society should think it better to sell any of his leases, Testator desired the produce might be disposed of in some Government security, and if any other religion should at any time be established, than the (then) present Protestant religion, he then left the whole for such time to St. Patrick's Hospital in Dublin, for lunatics, under the direction of the Archbishop of Dublin, for the time being, and of the other governors of said hospital, to revert to the Society whenever it should be re-established for the purposes above mentioned. Testator left the said Incorporated Society the executors of his last will and testament.

And Testator left all his manuscripts to the British Museum of London, to the Governors or Trustees thereof.

And by a note at the foot of said codicil Testator declared, "The above will written with my own "hand on the 24th of March, 1765, I do desire may be looked on as a codicil to the other will, signed "and sealed as far as it differs for it not having in London convenient witnesses."

Richard Pococke, formerly Bishop of Ossory, and late Bishop of Meath, afterwards died without altering or revoking said will or codicil. A suit was instituted by the Society against Elizabeth Pococke, sister of deceased, who had entered a caveat, and a decree was pronounced therein in favour of the will, and administration was granted to the Rev. Thomas Burton, of the city of Dublin, clerk, for the parties interested, which administration afterwards became void.

1766. June 25th. The Society and Elizabeth Pococke afterwards renounced, and as of this date administration was granted to the said Thomas Burton forthwith of the Court of Prerogative in Ireland, saving the rights, &c.

The said Elizabeth Pococke enjoyed the said estates under said will during her life, and died leaving the said Elizabeth Mills her surviving, who also enjoyed the said estates until her death, 1780. which occurred about this date, whereupon the Society became entitled, and entered into and have ever since continued in possession of the said estates, and receipt of the rents and profits thereof.

No. 6.—CELBRIDGE SCHOOL ESTATES.

Abstract of Will of William Conolly, Esq.

[Proved in the Court of Prerogative on the 2nd day of December, 1729.]

1729. October 18th. By will of date in margin, William Conolly, Esq., gave and devised (inter alia) to his nephew William Conolly, and his heirs for ever, all his Testator's estates in the several counties of Donegal, Dublin, Fermanagh, Wexford, the county of the city of Waterford and elsewhere in the kingdom of Ireland, and testator thereby gave and bequeathed the sum of £500 sterling to his wife Catherine Conolly, to his said nephew William Conolly, to the Right Reverend Arthur, Lord Bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh, to the Right Honorable Marmaduke Coghill, Esq., to Thomas Marlay, Esq., his Majesty's Attorney-General, and to the Rev. Mr. George Marlay, Vicar of Kildrought, to be laid out by them in erecting a convenient building in or near the town of Celbridge, in the county of Kildare, on such spot of ground as should be set out to them for that purpose by Testator's said wife and nephew, for the reception of forty orphans or other poor children. Testator did likewise give and devise the sum of £250 yearly, to be issuing out of the manor, town and lands of Rathfarnham, in the county of Dublin, and the appurtenances thereof, to his said wife, Catherine Conolly, to his said nephew William Conolly, to the said Right Rev. Arthur, Lord Bishop of Clonfert and Kilmacduagh, the Right Honorable Marmaduke Coghill, Esq., Thomas Marlay, Esq., and to the Vicar of the parish of Kildrought aforesaid for the time being, and the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs of such survivor for ever.

Upon trust and in confidence that they lay out and expend the said sum of £250 yearly in the maintenance and education of forty such orphans or poor children, under such rules, regulations, and directions as they or the major part of them should think proper, and in the instruction of such children in the linen or hempen manufactures, or in husbandry.

And upon this further trust, that upon the death of any of his said trustees, from time to time, the survivors should convey the said yearly sum thereby devised to the use of themselves, and of some one other person whom the majority of the survivors should think fit to nominate in the place and stead of the person so dead, under the trust thereinbefore mentioned.

And also upon trust that upon the death of his said nephew, or other person or persons to whom the manor of Castletown or Kildrought should descend or come, the survivors of his said trustees or of the persons nominated by them should nominate such person or persons to whom the said manor of Castletown or Kildrought should descend or come, it being his Testator's intention that the lord of the said manor should always be one of the persons entrusted with the disposal of Testator's said intended charity, the said sum of £250 per annum be paid half-yearly, viz., on every 1st day of May and every 1st day of November, by even and equal portions, and in case of non-payment that his said trustees and the survivors of them, their heirs and assigns, should have power to distrain for and recover the same, and Testator thereby appointed his wife Catherine Conolly, and his nephew William Conolly, Arthur, Lord Bishop of Clonfert, Doctor Marmaduke Coghill, and Thomas Marlay, executors of his said will, which was duly executed in presence of three witnesses.

1729. Dec. 2nd. Proved by Catherine Conolly, Bishop of Clonfert, and William Conolly, as of this date, saving the right of the other two executors.

Abstract of Deed dated 28th September, 1811.

1811. Sept. 28th. By indenture of the date in margin, between the Right Honorable Nathaniel Clements, Earl of Leitrim, eldest son and heir-at-law of the Right Honorable Robert, late Earl of Leitrim, deceased, formerly Robert Clements, Esq., the Right Honorable Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly, otherwise Lennox, widow of the Right Honorable Thomas Conolly, deceased, and the Rev. Patrick Sands, clerk, Vicar of the parish of Kildrought, in the county of Kildare, of the first part, John Joseph Henry, of Straffan, in the county of Kildare, Esq., of the second part, Edward Pakenham, Esq., Lieutenant-Colonel of the Donegal Militia, eldest son of the Honorable Thomas Pakenham, of Coolure, in the county of Westmeath of the third part, and the Incorporated Society in Dublin for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland of the fourth part.

Reciting the will of the Right Honorable William Conolly, bearing date on or about the 18th day of October, 1729.

And reciting the death of the said William Conolly, &c., &c.

And reciting the sum of £500 thereinbefore mentioned, had been laid out in erecting a house for the establishment of the said school and offices upon the lands granted for that purpose, namely, for the reception of the children to be maintained and educated therein, pursuant to the will of the aforesaid William Conolly, etc., etc.

And reciting that the trustees directed by the said will to be appointed and kept up had not been regularly appointed and kept up pursuant to the directions contained in the said will, by reason whereof the annuity or devise of £250 . . . . . and also the lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premises . . . . . were then legally vested in the said Right Honorable Nathaniel Clements, Earl of Leitrim, etc., etc.

And reciting that the said Right Honorable Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly was lady or proprietor of the manor of Castletown or Kildrought thereinbefore mentioned, and the said Patrick Sands was Vicar of the said parish of Kildrought.

And reciting that it had been proposed by the said Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly and the said Patrick Sands, that the trusts contained in the said will of the said William Conolly, touching and concerning the said Charity school, and the burthen of the execution thereof, should be assigned over unto the said Incorporated Society, their successors and assigns, and also that all and singular the estates, annuities, lands, tenements, hereditaments, premises, revenues, terms for years, and all the furniture, goods and chattels whatsoever belonging or of right appertaining unto the said Charity school, and then vested in the trustees thereof, or in the heirs, executors, or administrators of the said trustees, or the survivor of them, should also be conveyed and assigned over unto the said Society, their successors and assigns, to enable them to carry into effect and execution the said trusts of and concerning the said school.

And reciting that the said Society had agreed to and acquiesced in the said proposal, and consented to take upon themselves the execution of the said trusts, etc., etc.

And it was thereby declared and agreed upon, by and between the several parties that the said lands and premises, and the three several annuities of £250, £50, and £9 mentioned, had been granted, released, and assigned to the said Society.

In trust that the same, and the rents, issues, and profits of such parts of the said lands and premises as should not be occupied by the said school should be by them and their successors and assigns used, applied, laid out and expended in and upon the support of the said Charity school, and the maintenance, education, and instruction of the said children, according to the intention of the said William Conolly, deceased.

Covenant by the Society that they the said Incorporated Society, their successors and assigns, should and would well and truly and diligently execute all and singular the trusts in the said will of the said William Conolly thereinbefore set forth touching and concerning the said Charity school of Celbridge aforesaid, so as to fulfil and carry into effect and execution the intents thereof as originally founded and directed by the said will.

And further, that they the said Incorporated Society, their successors and assigns, should and would faithfully apply and dispose of all and singular the aforesaid devise of £250 a-year and the said released lands, and the said annuities of £50 and of £9, and the rents, issues, and profits of the said lands thereby granted and conveyed, or intended so to be, to and for the support and maintenance of the said school, and the several persons necessary for the conducting and maintaining thereof.

Proviso that it should and might be lawful to and for the said Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly, for and during her natural life, and each and every the future and successive lord of said manor of Castletown or Kildrought, from time to time, as often as any vacancy should occur in the said school, to recommend and nominate any child whom she or he might think proper, not being deformed, maimed or unhealthy, nor under the age of six years, nor above the age of ten years, and who had not been removed from any other school for misconduct, to fill up such vacancy till the number of children so nominated by the said Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly and the said lords of the manor should amount altogether to thirty, and when they should amount to thirty, then as often as any of the thirty children so nominated, or any nominated in their room, should happen to die or be removed from the said school, it should and might be lawful to and for the lords of the said manor for the time being to nominate and appoint another child, such as above described, in the place and stead of the child so dying or being removed, so that there might always be in the said school thirty children nominated by the lord of the manor of Castletown or Kildrought; and that the said Society and their successors should nominate and appoint all the rest of the children to be nominated in the said school.

Proviso that in case the said Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly, or the lord of the said manor for the time being, should omit or neglect to nominate and recommend to the said Society and their successors, in writing, a fit and proper child to fill up any vacancy that should occur among the children so recommended as aforesaid, for the space of six months after such vacancy should happen, then, and as often as that should happen, it should and might be lawful to and for the Society and their successors to admit such child as they should think fit.

Covenant by said Nathaniel, Earl of Leitrim, John Joseph Henry, Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly, and Patrick Sands, for themselves respectively, and for their respective heirs, executors, and administrators, that they had not done any act to incumber, for quiet enjoyment and for further assurance.

Executed by the Earl of Leitrim, Lady Louisa Augusta Conolly, and Patrick Sands, and by Edward Michael Pakenham, in presence of one witness. Not registered.

No. 7.—ABSTRACT OF WILL OF JOHN ROGERSON, ESQ.

24th April, 1785. Probate granted on 18th May, 1785.

By WILL of this date, John Rogerson of Betterville, in the County of Carlow, Esq., gave and bequeathed all his real and personal estate (excepting his household furniture, coach, and cattle) unto the Rev. Doctor Howard St. George and Rev. Mr. Henry St. George, and George William Molyneux, Esq., and the survivors and survivor of them, and the Heirs, Executors, and Administrators of such survivor,

Upon trust, to pay certain life annuities to his servants and others, which have long since terminated, viz., to Anne Barnes during life, one annuity or yearly rentcharge of £60, out of the rents, issues, &c., of his estate, in the County of Dublin, payable half-yearly, and to commence from the day of his decease, with full power to distrain and sue for same.

And to his servant Letitia Mason during her life one annuity or yearly rentcharge of £40, out of the rents, issues, and profits of his County and City of Cork estate, the same payable half-yearly, and commencing from the day of his decease, with full power to sue and distrain for same.

Proviso, if either of said annuities sold or aliened, same to cease being paid, and to merge into the inheritance of said John Rogerson's estates.

Upon trust, to sell by public cant to the highest bidder, all his real and personal estate, goods and chattels, except his household furniture, coach and cattle, as before excepted, and thereout to pay the following legacies, viz.:—£2,000 sterling, to Clement Wolsley, with interest from Testator's decease; £3,000 to his said Trustees, to be equally divided amongst them, provided they took on themselves the execution of the trusts of said Will, with interest from the day of Testator's decease; £4,000 to the several Hospitals and charitable foundations in the City of Dublin, thereinafter mentioned, viz.: Foundling Hospital, Mercer's Hospital, the Lying-in Hospital, or any other charitable foundations, and in such proportions as Testator's trustees and executors should think fit, to be paid as soon as possible after Testator's decease, with interest for same, from the day of his decease; and Testator thereby bequeathed all the rest and residue of the money arising from such sale as aforesaid, to be paid as soon as possible after his decease to the Incorporated Society for promoting Charter Schools in Ireland, for the use of said Schools, and he thereby appointed his said Trustees, Executors of his said last Will.

Executed and Attested by three witnesses.

1785, May 8. That Testator died as of this date.

Probate granted to Rev. Doctor Howard St. George, Rev. Henry St. George, and George William Molyneux, the Executors and Trustees named in said Will, forth of the Court of Prerogative in Ireland, on the 18th May, 1785.

No. 8.—SUMMARY OF THE OBJECTS

Of the Incorporated Society for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland, its Operations, and Mode of Working.

Members.—The Incorporated Society consists of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant for the time being, the archbishops, bishops, and chief judges in Ireland, and other personages, all of whom are ex-officio members; together with a large number of the nobility, clergy and gentry, elected members at various times. (List of members sent herewith:—see page 118.)

Officers.—The Lord Lieutenant for the time being is annually elected president, and His Grace the Lord Primate of Ireland vice-president of the Society.

Committee of Fifteen.—From the general body of the members a committee of fifteen is annually elected (list sent herewith). This committee transacts the ordinary routine business of the Society; the election of members, granting and sealing of leases, and other important business being reserved for the general Board. The meetings of the general Board are held annually, quarterly, and when occasion requires, more frequently; those of the committee of fifteen are held monthly.

Committee of Account.—There is also a committee of account elected annually, to which are submitted the accounts of the income and expenditure of the Society.

Deputation.—A deputation of members is also annually appointed, to which are referred the visitation and inspection of the several institutions and schools; the examination of the pupils in attendance, the examination and election, under the rules laid down by the Society (as detailed in printed statement hereinafter mentioned) of boys and girls, candidates for vacant places on the foundation of the boarding institutions, and a general oversight of all matters connected with the efficiency and well being of the establishments.

Schools.—In connexion with the Society there are twenty-one boarding institutions and day schools. In the printed statement sent herewith will be found (page 119) the names, locality, and capability of each of those establishments; (pages 119 and 120), the advantages afforded by the Society, the rules and regulations for the election of free pupils, the institutions to which they are elected, the districts whence candidates for Election may present themselves; the terms upon which pay pupils are received, and other general information concerning the schools.

Competitive Examinations.—Candidates seeking admission on the respective foundations, present themselves at public examinations, held at the institutions in the presence of all persons who may be pleased to attend, amongst whom are invariably found a large number of the local clergy and gentry, parents and friends of the candidates, school teachers, &c. In all cases the candidates are allowed to select numbered cards, and they are only known by their numbers to the examiners, who are total strangers to all the parties. Thus patronage has nothing whatever to do with the admission of children to the Society's institutions, good conduct, and merit in answering, being the only essentials required in order to secure success. And with respect to the highly important collateral objects and effects of the elective system, it may be remarked that the operations of the Society extend over fourteen of the counties of Ireland, as well as over certain districts of five other counties. The children in attendance at the scriptural schools situate throughout this large area, are eligible to compete at open public examinations (impartially conducted) for the free scholarships of the Society, and thus without any direct expenditure outside its own schools, the society is engaged in a work the beneficial effects of which, in promoting sound education, are widely felt beyond the limits of those establishments.

Honorary Certificate.—For some years past an honorary certificate (page 121) has been issued by the Incorporated Society to each teacher by whom a successful candidate for admission on the foundation has been educated. These certificates are found to have the effect of stimulating teachers to increased efforts for the general improvement of their schools, being highly prized by them as creditable testimonials of the care and attention which have been bestowed upon their pupils.

Exception to Rule of Admission by Competition.—There is indeed one (and only one) exception to the rule of admission by competitive examination, namely, in the case of the Celbridge girls' institution, into which a limited number of children are admitted, without examination, on the nomination of the lord of the manor of Castletown, Celbridge. But this matter is regulated by the terms of the deed under which the institution and its endowment vest in the Society, and is not within the power of the Society.

General Results.—In the printed statement already referred to, mention will be found made of the annual re-election of a certain number of boys whose period of residence (four years) at the provincial institutions has expired, to the Santry Training Institution, near Dublin. While the further opportunity of improvement thus afforded to boys so re-elected is very valuable, the committee of the Incorporated Society are happy to find that the remaining pupils are invariably satisfactorily provided for in consequence of the superior education afforded them; and it is a subject of very great gratification to the committee to know, as they have abundant opportunity of knowing, that large numbers of the young men educated in their institutions, both as free and pay pupils, are usefully and creditably occupying positions of high respectability in various walks of life, some as ordained ministers of the United Church of England and Ireland, some as sizars and scholars of Trinity College, working their way upward; very many as clerks in Government offices, having gained their places on distinguished answering; very many again successfully following commercial pursuits at home, in the colonies, and in America; many others employed in the grammar schools of England, &c., &c. In short, the testimonies which the committee have of the value and success of their system of education are numerous and striking. Mention may also be made of the successes gained by pupils from their institutions in examinations at Trinity College, Queen's University, Department of Science and Art, South Kensington, London; the Royal Dublin Society, and the various Civil Service competitive examinations.

Pay-boarders.—The department for the reception of pay-boarders in the institutions of the Society, was established with a view to utilize the dormitories and other rooms of the institutions, which were too large for the necessarily limited number of pupils since the withdrawal of the Government grants; as also to meet, as far as possible, the requirements of a large section of the middle classes of the community, namely, persons in respectable positions in life, but whose circumstances do not admit of their placing their sons at the higher and more expensive schools. In those institutions a really valuable education is provided on very moderate terms, and the marked success which has attended this extension of their advantages proves the high estimation in which the privileges thus afforded are held by the general public.

Thackeray Exhibition.—The abandonment of patronage on part of the Incorporated Society, and the adoption of the elective system, originated with the late Rev. Elias Thackeray, A.M., Vicar of Dundalk, a gentleman whose name is well known in connexion with efforts for the promotion of sound education in Ireland, and who during the greater part of a long life was a prominently useful member of the Incorporated Society. With a view to commemorate its sense of his important services, the Board of the Society, in the year 1855, founded a "Thackeray Exhibition" in Trinity College, of the yearly value of £30, to be conferred on any pupil passing from one of the Society's institutions or day-schools into the university, who shall obtain a science sizarship therein.* The very remarkable progress made by some of the boys in mathematics, together with the fact of the masters of the Society's institutions being willing to instruct the pupils in the Greek and Latin classics required for entrance to Trinity College, led to the expectation that a successful candidate would not unfrequently be found to claim this exhibition. And this expectation has been amply fulfilled, several payments having been made to successful candidates for the exhibition. It may be mentioned here, that although the Incorporated Society does not provide classical instruction for any of the pupils in its institutions, no objection is made to the masters so doing, provided such instruction shall not interfere with the English and Science Department.

Female Institutions.—It should be noticed that an examination of the outgoing girls annually takes place at the two Female Boarding Institutions of the Society (Celbridge and Roscommon), and the best answerer in each case is allowed the further privilege of free training as a schoolmistress. The other girls go out into life in various capacities—some as domestic servants in respectable families, others to such employments in shops, workrooms, &c., as are open to young women of their class in life. In these institutions the utmost care is taken to train the girls in habits of neatness and good order, and to afford such practical instruction in household matters, needlework, &c., as shall best fit them for the active duties of life.

Note.—The numbers given above are those which the Schools can comfortably accommodate. The number of Free Pupils is fixed in each case. Pay Boarders and Day Pupils vary in number at different times.

BOARDING INSTITUTIONS.

Boys.

Foundation (Free) Pupils.—A limited number of boys are annually elected to free places on the foundation of the Society, and are thenceforward dieted, lodged, clothed, and educated during four years (unless removed for misconduct) without expense to parents or friends. At the termination of this period, each boy vacates his scholarship, in order to make room for a newly-elected candidate, and ceases to have any further claim on the Society, except for a testimonial of character, in case he shall have proved himself entitled to it.

Note.—The only exception to this rule is in the case of re-election to the Santry Training Commercial and Scientific Institution, subsequently alluded to.

Competitive Examination.—Boys are elected by competitive examination, conducted by a deputation from the Society, who attend for the purpose at the several institutions and schools on certain days (in June or July each year), of which due notice is given to all persons interested in the matter.

Subjects.—Candidates are examined in the Book of Genesis, the first twenty chapters of Exodus, the four Gospels, the Acts of the Apostles; the Church Catechism and the scriptural references, showing its doctrine to be in conformity with the Word of God; reading, writing; the rudiments of English grammar; the geography of Europe, Palestine, and Asia Minor; and in arithmetic, as far as the rule of three inclusive, and vulgar and decimal fractions. The examinations are conducted with the strictest impartiality, and the best answerers elected.

Rules.—With reference to the examinations, the following rules are strictly observed:—

1. Candidates shall not be under twelve, nor above sixteen years of age.

2. Candidates must have been in attendance at a scriptural school within prescribed districts for at least one year previous to the day of examination.

3. Certificates of age and moral conduct, signed by the clergyman of the parish in which the candidate has been educated, as also of health, signed by a medical practitioner, must be produced previous to the examination.

4. Certificates are received only on the Society's printed forms, which can be obtained on application to the respective masters at the Institutions.

5. The number of candidates in each case must be at least three times that of the vacancies to be filled; when this does not occur, the scholarships are given only in that proportion, and the Society confer the remainder upon deserving but unsuccessful candidates at other institutions.

6. When two brothers are candidates at the same examination, only one of them can be elected, if the next boy on the examination list be found duly qualified.

Elected foundationers are required to have, on their admission, each—one jacket, one waistcoat, one pair of trousers, one pair of shoes, one cap, two shirts, and two pair of stockings—all in good repair.

Districts privileged to supply Candidates.—Candidates are eligible to the respective foundations from the scriptural schools of the following districts:—

To the Pococke Institution, near Kilkenny—from the counties of Kilkenny and Waterford, and the parish of Durrow, Queen's County; from the city and county of Cork, and from the county of Kerry.

To the Dundalk Institution—from the counties of Louth and Down; the county Armagh; and the parishes of Lisburn, Ballinderry, and Glenavy, in the county of Antrim; also Ramoan, Ballycastle.

To the Ranelagh Institution, Athlone—from the towns of Athlone and Roscommon, and the counties of Roscommon and Galway.

To the Primrose Grange Institution, near Sligo—from the town and county of Sligo, and seven bordering parishes in the county of Mayo.

To the Farra Institution, near Mullingar—from the counties of Westmeath and Meath.

Santry School—re-election to.—A proportion of the scholars who have completed their term of four years in the above-named institutions are annually re-elected for an additional period to the Society's Training Commercial and Scientific Institution at Santry, near Dublin (if after examination and inquiry as to character, they shall appear deserving of such distinction), where an opportunity is afforded of continuing and extending those studies in which, as a necessary qualification for such re-election, they must have already made considerable progress.—N.B. Boys are also elected to the Santry or other Boarding Institution, from the day-school, 55, Aungier-street, Dublin.

Education afforded.—The foregoing institutions afford a sound scriptural and superior English, commercial, and mathematical education, calculated to fit young men for the offices of schoolmasters, accountants, assistants to civil engineers, and for commercial pursuits generally.

Thackeray Exhibition.—The Thackeray Exhibition in Trinity College, Dublin, of the annual value of £30, and tenable for four years, is open to the pupils of all schools under the Incorporated Society.

Catechists.—Each institution has the advantage of frequent visitation by the minister of the parish, or other neighbouring clergyman, the paid officer of the Incorporated Society, by whom the pupils are regularly catechised and instructed in the Holy Scriptures.

Pay (Hall) Boarders' Terms.—The Society permits the masters to receive boarders, irrespective of locality, and without any preliminary literary examination. They enjoy all the educational advantages above referred to, and are comfortably dieted and lodged, washed for, and supplied with stationery and medical attendance, at £20 each per annum, all of which is paid to the masters of the Institutions, no portion being receivable by the Society. The masters undertake all the risk, and out of the small profits arising from this department (after defraying the cost of dietary, &c.) they must pay extra assistant-masters, and meet sundry other expenses, as servants, washing, &c.

Day Pupils.—Day pupils are also received at the institutions, and instructed in English and mathematics at £3 per annum each.

Extras.—The masters are at liberty to provide instruction in classics, modern languages, drawing, &c., for pupils whose friends desire to afford them such advantages—the terms being subject to private arrangement.

Dietary.—The dietary appointed for boys on the foundation and for pay (hall) boarders, in the several institutions, is as follows :—

Breakfast, daily—stirabout or bread, and new milk.
Dinner, 3 days in each week—fresh beef or mutton, } with „ 3 „ „ —soup, seasoned, and thickened, with vegetables. } potatoes or bread.
„ 1 „ „ —bacon and greens, }
Supper, daily—bread and new milk.

Parlour Boarders.—The several masters are permitted to receive parlour boarders, on terms to be arranged with the friends of the pupils.

St. John's College.—The former charter school of Newport is now represented by the Newport daily school, and the old charter school premises are leased to the master of the college. The latter is that gentle man's private speculation, and for its success or failure the Society cannot be held answerable.

The Master's Terms are :—

	Guineas per Annum.
Boys are received as boarders, if under the age of 14, at	40
„ „ „ if above „ „	45
„ „ day pupils	10 to 12

Modern languages, drawing, stationery and washing, extra.

GIRLS.

Foundation (Free) Pupils.—A limited number of girls are annually elected to free places on the foundation of the Celbridge and Roscommon Female Boarding Institutions, where they remain during four years, (unless removed for misconduct), and are dieted, lodged, clothed, and educated without expense to parents or friends. At the termination of this period each girl vacates her place in the Institution, in order to make room for a newly-elected candidate, and ceases to have any further claim on the Society, except for a testimonial of character and conduct, in case she shall have proved herself duly entitled to it.

Competitive Examination.—Girls are elected by competitive examination, conducted by a deputation from the Society, who attend for the purpose on certain days, in June or July each year, of which due notice is given to all persons interested in the matter.

Subjects.—The candidates are examined in spelling, reading, and writing, and in St. Mathew's gospel, together with the Church Catechism and the scriptural references, showing its doctrines to be in conformity with the Word of God :—the examinations are conducted with the utmost impartiality, and the best answerers elected.

Rules.—With reference to these examinations the following rules are strictly observed :—

1. Candidates shall not be under ten nor above fourteen years of age.
2. Candidates must have been in attendance at a Scriptural school within prescribed districts, for at least one year previous to the day of examination.
3. Certificates of age, attendance at school, and moral conduct, signed by the clergyman of the parish, as also of health, signed by a medical practitioner of the neighbourhood, must be produced previous to the examination.
4. Certificates will be received only on the Society's printed forms, which can be obtained on application at the Institutions.
5. The number of candidates in each case must be at least twice that of the vacancies to be filled. When this does not occur, the vacant places are given only in that proportion.
6. In cases where two sisters are candidates at the same examination, one of them only can be elected, if the next girl in the examination list be found duly qualified.

Education.—The Celbridge and Roscommon Institutions afford a sound scriptural and useful English education; the children are also instructed in needlework, and in domestic employments, including the care of the house, management of the dairy, laundry, &c.

Catechists.—As in the case of the Boys' Boarding Institutions, the pupils enjoy the advantage of regular scriptural instruction from clergymen who act as catechists, and are the paid officers of the Incorporated Society.

Candidates are eligible to the respective foundations from the scriptural schools of the following districts :—

Districts privileged to supply Candidates.—To the Celbridge Institution—from the counties of Kildare and Wicklow, Meath and Westmeath, and the following parishes in the county of Dublin, viz. :—

COUNTY OF DUBLIN.

Newcastle	Leixlip
Tallaght	Lucan and Esker
Clondalkin	Rathcoole
Kilmactalway	Saggart
Kilbride	Finglas
Castleknock	Glasnevin
Mullahidart	Clontarf
Clonsilla	Drumcondra, and
Chapelizod	Santry.
Palmerstown
Ballyfermott

To the Ranelagh Institution, Roscommon—from the towns of Athlone and Roscommon, and counties of Roscommon and Galway, and county of Sligo.

Pay Boarders' Terms.—The Roscommon Female Institution affords accommodation for a limited number of children, whom the mistress is permitted to receive as pay boarders—terms, which are moderate, and according to age, may be known on application to the mistress, at the institution.

DAY SCHOOLS.

Education.—The education afforded in the day schools is of an elementary character. In order to encourage these schools, and stimulate the exertions of both teachers and pupils, the latter (under the prescribed conditions as to age, attainments, and attendance at school) are eligible as candidates for free scholarships on the foundation of the Society's institutions.

Terms.—In general the teachers are allowed to receive a small payment from children whose friends can afford to pay for their education; the poorer children being free.

Dublin Day-school, 55, Aungier-street.—This school provides scriptural and general elementary instruction for its pupils, and further, for boys of competent ability, an excellent English, commercial, and mathematical education.

Scholarships.—A competitive examination is held annually for a scholarship in the Santry or other Boarding Institution of the Society: in such institution the successful candidate is maintained, clothed, and educated at the expense of the Incorporated Society.

Terms.—Fee for English and Science course, £4 per annum.

Fee for French, German, Italian, and Latin (if required), each £1 per annum.

 N.B.—It is the earnest desire of the Incorporated Society that their institutions and schools should be visited, and that the several public examinations of the pupils and of candidates for free scholarships should be witnessed by patrons of schools, by the clergy of the various districts, by parents and schoolteachers, and by all persons who take an interest in the improvement and welfare of the rising generation.

By order,

JOHN W. HACKETT, A.M., Clk., Secretary.

No. 11.—INCORPORATED SOCIETY, THACKERAY TESTIMONIAL.

At an annual general Board of the INCORPORATED SOCIETY in Dublin for promoting English Protestant schools in Ireland, held on the 7th day of February, 1855, reference having been made to the several minutes of the Society, respecting its desire to mark permanently the respect which so universally prevails for the memory of the late Rev. Elias Thackeray, A.M., Vicar of Dundalk,—

IT WAS RESOLVED—That the Board considers it an act of justice to the memory of the late Rev. Elias Thackeray, A.M., to institute a permanent testimonial commemorative of the many valuable services rendered by that gentleman to the institutions of the Incorporated Society, and to the cause of general education throughout Ireland, during the long period of his connexion with the Society as a member of its committee of fifteen:—

That the Board believes that the best mode of testifying the Society's appreciation of his services, as aforestated, and also that which would be most in accordance with his own views, were he living, is to create an exhibition in Trinity College, Dublin, of the value of £30 per annum, open to the boys educated in the Society's schools, and to be named the

"THACKERAY EXHIBITION:"—

That any young man who shall have obtained a scholarship on the foundation of the Society, or any boarder who shall have remained three years in any one of the Society's institutions, or any boy who shall have regularly attended one of the Society's day schools, for a period not less than five years, shall be eligible to that exhibition—provided he shall have matriculated in the University within three years after leaving such institution or day school:—

That the condition under which the exhibition be obtained, shall be the election to a science sizarship in Trinity College, Dublin, at the annual examination for this distinction:—

That the exhibition shall last for four years, provided that the person who obtained it shall obtain a science or classical honour of the first rank, or two honours of the second rank each year, and shall keep his class:—

That these resolutions, together with a list of the subjects of examination for science sizarship, be printed, and a copy always hung up in each of the Society's institutions and day schools; and that a copy be sent to the clergyman of every parish privileged to send forward candidates at the annual examinations for scholarships on the Society's foundation.

 Subjects for the science sizarship examination: Euclid—first six books; arithmetic; plane and spherical trigonometry and algebra.

The candidate, in order to be qualified to compete for the science sizarship, must first pass an examination in the classical entrance course—viz., GREEK: Homer's Iliad—the first six books; Greek Testament—St. Luke's Gospel and Acts; Euripides—Hecuba; Walker's Lucian. LATIN: Virgil's Æneid—first five books; Sallust; Livy—first three books; Latin and English composition.

Books recommended by the Incorporated Society to candidates for the science sizarship: Luby's trigonometry; Wood's algebra (11th edition, 1841) Mulcahy's modern geometry; Bland's algebraical problems.

By order,

RICHARD ARDILL, A.M., Clk., Secretary.

ROMAN CATHOLIC INSTITUTION AT CABRA

FOR

DEAF AND DUMB CHILDREN.

STATEMENT of the COMMITTEE of the CATHOLIC DEAF and DUMB INSTITUTION, CABRA, DUBLIN, concerning the NATURE and ORGANIZATION of the INSTITUTION, and its EDUCATIONAL ARRANGEMENTS.

It may be briefly stated that this is the only Catholic institution for the deaf and dumb in the United Kingdom.

It consists of two branches, one for males, the other for females, distant about a half mile from each other.

The former is under the care of the Christian Brothers, the latter under that of the religious ladies of the Order of St. Dominick, who are most assiduous in their duties towards their afflicted charge.

Both are under the control and management of a Committee of lay and clerical gentlemen, twenty-six in number, having as president His Eminence Cardinal Cullen, and as patrons the whole of the Catholic bishops of Ireland.

The total number of children now under instruction is 283, namely 165 boys and 118 girls. Thirty-one of these are from England and Scotland, leaving 252 as the offspring of Catholic parents in Ireland.

This is but a small proportion of those requiring education, for according to the report of the Census Commissioners for 1861 there were then 5,653 deaf mutes of all denominations and ages in Ireland. Under this head I rank also the dumb only, for observation and experience have demonstrated to us, that in point of intellect, they are a far inferior class to those who are totally deaf and dumb.

Among these 5,653 there were 4,275 Catholics returned as such, but the Census Commissioners inform us that there must have been more Catholics, and fewer of every other denomination, for in trying to explain a certain disparity that arose when comparing the proportion of Catholic and Protestant deaf mutes with the population, they say "That all the pupils in the Claremont, Moneymore, Strabane and Ulster Institutions, no matter from what source received, have been reared in the tenets of the Established Church, and returned as such in the column for religious profession."

This fact of tampering with the faith of Catholic children, joined to others of a similar nature, has been a source of painful and bitter feeling among the Catholic bishops and clergy of Ireland; while they themselves, as well as the Committee of this Institution, are utterly opposed to take advantage of the abandoned state of Protestant deaf mutes or even admit them, except at the earnest solicitation of their parents, and after explicitly stating the education received at Cabra will necessarily Catholicize their children.

Accompanying this you have a return in which I have analyzed the report of the Census Commissioners, and that of the numbers received into this Institution, from its foundation in 1846, to June, 1866.

From this it may be seen, that at the latter date there were 596 Catholic deaf mutes educated or under instruction at Cabra, while 3,678 remained in perfect ignorance, not only of a Divine being, of a Redeemer, or of a state of future rewards and punishments, but of the first principles that should guide their conduct in social life.

And yet, the law of the land holds these creatures amenable to justice, and punishes them as severely as it does the most enlightened citizen who has a choice of opportunities to learn what he owes to society, and of the evils which will be entailed upon himself by violating the sacred engagements he is under, of acting in conformity with the law.

The Act of Parliament making a slight provision for the education of the deaf and dumb is to a great degree inoperative. It leaves to the Boards of Guardians to pronounce whether a deaf and dumb child shall be educated or not, and in numerous instances this decision is reserved for the interested judgment of some rural guardian, who represents on the Board the electoral division in which the child resides. Most of these Boards act very conscientiously, and exercise their functions with great liberality, but there are others so exclusive that they will not grant the slightest concession to these primary objects of charity, so far as education is concerned.

Cases of extreme rigour are on record, one of which was specially brought under the notice of the Poor Law Commissioners, who testify great sympathy for the deaf and dumb; but though they instituted an inquiry, and felt the deepest interest in the case, they had no power to enforce compliance with their wishes or interfere with the decision of the Board.

Many other causes besides those mentioned, and which may be attributed in a great degree to religious prejudice, tend to nullify the provision made by Parliament in favour of the deaf and dumb; but to enumerate them here would render this outline too extensive.

When these children come first to us they have no conception of the Divine law or of their obligation to observe it.

Our principal care is to form them to virtue, and impress them with a high idea of everything relating to the service of God. They readily adopt the means at their disposal to discharge the duty of prayer, and few observe more reverence in this exercise.

But their first efforts are purely mechanical, consisting of a succession of arbitrary signs, expressive of the petitions in the Lord's Prayer, &c. It takes a long time before any idea can be conveyed to their minds of the existence of God, of the immortality of the soul, and other similar truths.

We find, however, that no other class of children derive such advantages from being educated and instructed as they do. They become pious, virtuous, and industrious, whilst if they have parents or other members of the family circle depending on them for support, they glory in assisting them by their labour.

Humanity alone would induce those who can make a proper provision for them not to delay it a single day, if they were aware of the evils that can be prevented, and the good that can be accomplished by the enlightenment of this large section of the population.

One thing should be particularly noticed with reference to their education, and that is the advantages to be derived from having a large number in the same establishment. A still more essential ingredient is to have experienced and permanent teachers, who are acquainted, not only with the elliptical language of signs which are in use among deaf mutes under instruction, but who also, by long practice, have acquired the power of adapting their mode of thought and expression to the limited capacity of persons whose range of ideas is necessarily small, whose reasoning powers are undeveloped, and whose chief guide is feeling. The presence of large numbers produces healthy emulation, better classification, and a readier conformity to established rules of conduct than that of a small or limited number. The expense of teaching is also considerably reduced, while the good example, content, and satisfaction shown by such a mass of children have a powerfully tranquillizing effect upon the minds of new-comers, who are naturally inclined to rebel against the slightest restraint placed upon them.

The method and mode of teaching are so peculiar that they would require to be treated as a separate subject, which the narrow limits of this outline forbid.

The difficulties attending it may, however, be easily understood, by representing to ourselves an ignorant-speaking person of this realm, who would have to learn some Eastern language grammatically without any other help than mere dumb signs.

And yet such has been the facility acquired by long practice, in advancing these children, that many of them can write a legible hand after twelve or eighteen months' attendance at school, and answer in writing such simple questions as lie within the sphere of their very limited knowledge.

Letters written by their parents can also be produced, expressive of their gratitude for the progress made by their children, as well as of the astonishment shown by respectable, intelligent persons, who previously knew them to be perfectly ignorant, but who were afterwards filled with surprise at their intelligence and improved demeanour.

To provide for the education of the vast number of deaf mute children, that are now at large throughout Ireland, and to render that education more effective, there are required—increased accommodation, specific support, and a longer period for them to be under instruction than they are at present.

To these indispensable requisites may be added, a certain allowance for the purpose of teaching a trade to those who are capable of learning it, so that they may not only be self-supporting in after-life, but withdrawn from idleness and the consequent dangers attending it.

But how much soever the Committee of this Institution may desire to secure the above advantages for the neglected deaf mutes of Ireland, they could not accept such on any condition involving "mixed education."

It is amongst the deaf and dumb that all the evils flowing from such a baneful principle would appear in full force. These might be pointed out in detail, but the limits of this sketch will not permit it. It is in their regard that the words of the Sovereign Pontiff Pope Pius the Ninth would receive their fullest verification, when he says, "There can be no doubt that in elementary schools religious teaching especially ought to occupy such a principal and dominant position in the instruction and education there received, that every other kind of knowledge which is imparted in them to the young, should be manifestly a mere accessory to it."

I remain, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

P. D. M'Donnell, Hon. Sec.,
Director of the Institution.

Paragraph 10.—Statement of Results of the Permissive Clause in the Amended Irish Poor Law Act authorizing the combination of two or more Unions for School purposes.

During the year 1855 orders were issued by the Commissioners, in eight cases, combining unions into school districts, in pursuance of the second section of the 11th and 12th Vic., cap. 25.

The following is a list of the districts; the union first named in each group being the union to which the children from the other unions in the district were to be sent:—

I. Ballina, Belmullet and Killala.
II. Monaghan, Clones and Castleblayney.
III. Donegal, Glenties, Stranorlar, and Ballyshannon.
IV. Enniskillen, Lowtherstown, and Lisnaskea.
V. Omagh and Gortin.
VI. Sligo, Dromore West, Manorhamilton, and Tobercurry.
VII. Ballymoney, Ballycastle, and Ballymena.
VIII. Roscrea, Donaghmore, and Borrisokane.

The result of the arrangements made under these orders was not found to be so satisfactory as to render an extension of the system desirable, and, with the exception of the order combining Omagh and Gortin Unions, these orders have been rescinded; and (with the one exception above mentioned) there has been no school district of unions in existence since September, 1862.

The dates on which the orders were severally rescinded were as follows:—

The Ballymoney group, 2nd May, 1857.
The Enniskillen group, 18th May, 1857.
The Monaghan group, 23rd September, 1857.
The Donegal group, 15th October, 1857.
The Ballina group, 11th July, 1860.
The Sligo group, 22nd August, 1860.
The Roscrea group, 8th September, 1862.

The general results of the system, while in operation, may be gathered from the annexed extracts from the Commissioners' Tenth Annual Report and the reports which the Commissioners obtained from their Inspectors on the subject, and which are published in the Appendix to that Report, from which it will be seen that while on the one hand some improvement in the instruction of the children was effected, on the other, it was found to operate as a discouragement to destitute poor persons, having families, to apply for relief.

The Clerk of Donaghmore Union (which was included in the Roscrea district) has forwarded to the Commissioners the following statement, as showing the results of the permissive clause in that Union:—

"The School Order was found to act as a severe test upon applicants for relief. Several children absconded from Roscrea Union sooner than remain in a workhouse removed from their parents.

"Parents took their discharge and that of their children rather than allow them to remain in the workhouse of another union.

"And the friends and relatives of deserted and orphan children applied for their discharge sooner than have them in a workhouse so far removed from them.

"When the School Order was issued in December, 1855, the total number of healthy inmates in this workhouse was 85, of whom 40 were sent to Roscrea, and at the expiration of a year only 14 of them were remaining there.

"When the Order was rescinded in September, 1862, the total number of healthy inmates charged to this Union was 58, of whom only 8 were in Roscrea. And on the 25th of March last the total number of healthy inmates in this Workhouse was 58, of whom 19 would have been in Roscrea Workhouse had the District School Order continued in force."

The Borrisokane Board of Guardians, in forwarding the returns, have expressed the opinion that the combination of two or more unions for school purposes, under 11th and 12th Vic., cap. 25, sec. 2, is not desirable.

In the Omagh district, where the order remains in force, the number of children in the Omagh Workhouse School, who were chargeable to Gortin Union, was only nine on the 25th of March last.

Extracts from Tenth Annual Report of the Poor Law Commissioners.

41. We have acquired, since the date of our last report, further experience of the working of districts of unions combined together for the purpose of educating and training children under the age of fifteen. The objects sought in forming these districts were economy of funds and improvement in the character of the school arrangements. These advantages have been realized, to some extent, in the cases in which the experiment has been tried, but, we regret to add, not without some detriment to the due administration of relief. We considered that, in issuing the orders forming school districts, it is not in our power, under the general words of the section authorizing the formation of such districts, to limit the discretion of the Guardians as to the class of children to be sent from the workhouse of the contributing union to the workhouse of the receiving union; and, consequently, not only orphans and deserted children have been sent, but likewise children, of sufficient age to be educated, whose parents were with them in the workhouse—the Guardians of the contributing unions being desirous to adopt this means of saving the expense of teachers altogether.

42. The consequence has been, that many poor women with families have left the workhouse or refused to enter it, although in great need of relief, because they found their children, or some of them would be sent to a workhouse many miles distant, and preferred begging through the country to relief on these terms. In the Appendix will be found reports from our Inspectors, Mr. Bourke, Mr. R. Hamilton, and Mr. Robinson, describing the operation of the school districts in this and in other respects. It appeared to us, on receiving these reports, that the only remedy of the evil pointed out was to recommend the Guardians to send to the district school only orphans and deserted children, and the children of parents who did not object to the separation, and to provide for the excepted cases by the employment of a teacher, if the services of the master or matron were not available for the purpose. This, however, is often the case where the number of inmates is very small indeed; and we have found the Guardians by no means reluctant to adopt the suggestion.

No. 1.—Extracts from a Report from Mr. Bourke, Poor Law Inspector, dated 2nd March, 1857.

In consequence of the observations contained in your letter to me of the 14th ultimo (Claremorris Union, No. 4,029), to the effect that facts had come under your notice with regard to the existing school districts, which rendered you extremely unwilling to increase their number, and gave rise to a doubt whether the present district schools should any longer be continued, I made the fullest inquiries in my power, as to the working of the order in the Belmullet Union, in order that the facts, as far as they can be ascertained, may be brought under your notice, and assist you in arriving at a conclusion.

I examined the Relieving Officers, the Master, and conversed with the Chairman of the Board, upon the subject, and all concur in opinion that applications for relief have diminished since the introduction of the district school. The relieving officers, however, both state that no inquiries have been made of them by parties applying for relief as to the probable destination of their children; and they are unable to give me a single instance of any parents who have abstained from applying for relief in consequence of the school order, and the removal of their children to Ballina. The only evidence they can give of the dislike entertained by applicants for relief to the system of separation from their children, is the attempt, frequently made, by parents to represent their children as under five years of age, up to which time of life they are retained at Belmullet. Finally, I have examined several of the application books of the relieving officers, and closely questioned them upon the entries. They positively assure me that they take down every application made to them; and I could not discover a single case of a family having applied and then declined to accept the proffered relief. And, I must add, that the instances of refusal by the Guardians were exceedingly rare, and were generally accounted for by reasons appearing on the face of the books. I may also add, that the relieving officers report that in the course of their journeys they meet frequent beggars, and often urge them to accept relief in the workhouse without success; but (except in the three cases hereafter mentioned) they cannot connect the refusal with the existence of the school order—attributing it rather to the charms of a wandering life, and the facilities for obtaining food and lodging in the cabins of the poor.

I next proceeded to investigate the cases of those families who had quitted the workhouse, owing, as is alleged, to the operation of the order; and, at the risk of prolixity, I subjoin the particulars :—

1. M. C., widow, and her son H., aged eight years.

They were admitted on the 10th June, 1855, and discharged themselves on the 28th June (the day on which the children were first sent to Ballina). They have since been begging, and are so still. It must be observed, however, that the mother was a mendicant before she came in, and had been but eighteen days in the workhouse; and it is very questionable whether she would ever have remained beyond harvest.

2. J. C. and wife, and three children, aged fourteen, nine, and seven years.

Admitted on the 15th June, 1855, and took their discharge on the 28th June same year.

The family is stated to have been in a very destitute state for about a month after their discharge, since when they have been doing pretty well, the man having found work at 1*s.* per day and his diet, and being able to support his family.

3. M. D., widow, and four children, aged eleven, eight, three, and one years.

Admitted 25th February, 1856, and discharged 29th March following, when two of her children were about being sent to Ballina.

She and her family are said to have been begging ever since, and she has stated to the relieving officer that she is deterred from entering the workhouse by the existence of the School Order.

4. E. G., aged nine, and M. G., aged eight.

Admitted in October, 1856, and discharged the following November.

In the case of these boys, it appears that their stepmother, a poor woman living in Belmullet, applied for their discharge after they had been a few weeks in Ballina, and is since supporting them, but not by mendicancy.

5. M. M'N., unmarried;—two children, aged twelve and three years.

An unfortunate woman of the worst possible character, who was admitted with her children on the 10th November, 1856, and left the workhouse on the 13th December following, when her eldest child, a girl, was ordered to Ballina. She was readmitted on the 20th December, and has since been in hospital under treatment for venereal disease. Her girl was sent to Ballina on the 23rd, but ran away on the 3rd January following, and is now in service, where she is supported, and receives £1 a year as wages.

These are the only cases having any bearing on the operation of the School Order, which, as far as I have been able to learn, have occurred in this union during the period of eighteen months that the system has been in operation. I forbear from expressing any opinion upon their relation to the question of district schools, as my object is simply to supply you with such materials as I can collect, for forming a correct judgment upon the continuance or discontinuance of the system which, I understand, is now under your consideration; but I must state that it seems to me well worth consideration in regard to these cases, how long parties, of the character and habits of those just enumerated, would have been likely to remain in the workhouse had there been no School Order in existence.

One other circumstance arising out of the Order now claims attention—the escape of children belonging to Belmullet Union from the Ballina schools. There have been six such cases since the schools were combined, and I subjoin them in detail :—

1. M. A. Her parents in America. She is a grown-up girl, about fifteen; who absconded on the 11th August, 1855, and has since been living with her aunt, who is in good circumstances. She occasionally receives remittances from her parents.

2. M. A. R. Her mother is in America, and she ran away on the 21st March, 1856, and has since been living with her grandmother. She is assisted by friends in the union who are well off.

3. C. G. An orphan. Ran away on the 24th March, 1856. Her uncle, who is well off, had made application for her discharge, which had been ordered, when the account came that she had anticipated it. She is living with this uncle.

4. H. H. This girl's father, who is a tradesman, went to England to seek for work in May, 1856, whereupon his wife and four children were admitted to Belmullet. The two eldest were sent to Ballina, from whence the girl absconded in September, 1856. It is not exactly known what then became of her; but about a week ago her father, having returned from England, took out his wife and two children from Belmullet Workhouse, and brought them to his former residence, where the daughter Honoria joined them, and is now living. The boy still continues at Ballina school.

5. A. E., orphan. Went to Ballina, June, 1855, and deserted on the 12th December, 1856. This boy appears to have reached the age of fifteen before he absconded. The Belmullet Board, having notice of the fact, ordered his discharge, but he had run away before it reached Ballina. He is well able to earn his bread, and is doing so by labour.

6. M. J. This girl is daughter to M. M'N. mentioned in the preceding series, and her case is there detailed.

No. 2.—Extract from Report from Mr. Bourke, Poor Law Inspector, dated 4th April, 1857.

At my last visit to the union I obtained all the information in my power as to the operation of the District School Order; and in obedience to the instructions conveyed in your letter of the 9th ult., No. 5,524, I subjoin all the details in a similar form to that which I adopted in the case of Belmullet.

The order took effect in Tobercurry Union upon the 29th August, 1855, at which time there were twenty-five healthy children in the house between the ages of two and fifteen years. And here I may observe that the Guardians seem to have understood your order as imperative upon them to remove from the workhouse all healthy children between these ages; whereas at Belmullet and Killala a narrower range was wisely adopted, and no child under five years was sent away. The effect of this proceeding on part of the Tobercurry Board will be traced in several of the cases which I shall presently enumerate.

Of these 25 children there were sent to Sligo 7; orphans claimed by friends, or who left the workhouse, 6; children who left with their parents, 12.—Total 25.

1. Children sent to the District School.—The seven children transferred to Sligo comprised five orphans—two deserted children, and their ages varied from twelve to five years. Four of them remain to the present day, one has died, and two have been discharged. These two are—

1. M. C., aged twelve. Her aunt, who lives near Temple House, took her out, and supports her.

2. P. O'H., aged seven. Deserted by her father, and her mother a lunatic. After remaining four months in Sligo workhouse (during which time her sister died) her father came and took her out. She continues to reside with him. He is a day labourer.

2. Orphans whose friends claimed them, or who left the workhouse of their own accord.—The cases under this class are as follows:—

1. K. C., aged five years. An illegitimate child, whose mother has gone to America. She was applied for by her grandmother when the School Order came into operation, and lived with her till she went to America. Since then she has continued with her grandfather, who is a day labourer in Tobercurry, and has a family of his own. He appears to have frequently asked the Relieving Officer to get her into Tobercurry Workhouse, but will not consent to her removal to Sligo.

2. A. O'C., aged ten, also an illegitimate child. Was applied for as a servant by a woman in the neighbourhood, with whom she lived about a twelvemonth, when she got ill, was readmitted to Tobercurry, and on her recovery transferred to Sligo, where she now is under the name of Hart.

3. M. H.; 4. M. H.; 5. E. H. Their father is dead. Their mother deserted them, and went to England, whereupon the children were received into the workhouse. On the adoption of the School Order, she reappeared, claimed her children, and took them away. It seems she had been several months back from England before that time, but had taken no notice of her children. She has married a second husband, and lives in Tobercurry with her children.

6. B. R. An orphan, aged nine years. The circumstances of this child's discharge cannot now be ascertained. Nor can she be traced. But at the time in question she had friends residing not far from the workhouse. I have directed the Relieving Officer to continue his inquiries.

3. Children who left the workhouse with their parents.—There are seven cases comprised in this class.

1. M. C. and two children, aged thirteen and eleven years. Upon the introduction of the School Order, the Guardians permitted this woman to remain in the workhouse, and her children to leave it—a very unwise arrangement, as it appears to me. The boy was readmitted in January, 1856, went to Sligo school, where he remained till the September following, and is now in service with the parish priest, and the girl, after having been frequently in and out of the workhouse in bad health, now lives with a friend near the workhouse gate, her brother trying to support her out of his wages.

2. P. B. and daughter, aged ten. He quitted the workhouse when the schools were transferred, taking his child with him, and is now begging about. He has once or twice entered the workhouse for a short time since this discharge, but always without his child. This man's antecedents must be inquired into before his case can be correctly viewed. His first admission with his child seems to have been in April, 1854, when he remained four months, and left it in August. He returned again in October of the same year, but without his child, and remaining five months, was discharged in March, 1855. Again he was readmitted, this time with his child, on the 19th July, 1855, and was discharged shortly after the adoption of the School Order, 5th September, 1855. In the intervals between his admissions to the workhouse this man supported himself by begging.

3. S. K., with two children, one aged five years, and the other a year and a half, took her discharge in September, 1855, rather than send her child to Sligo. She was readmitted in the December following, and the two children removed to Sligo. Six months after, in June, 1856, she left the workhouse with her children, and re-entered in the month of November following, when the eldest child, then about seven years, was sent to Sligo, and the younger, now between three and four, was suffered to remain with her in Tobercurry, where she now is.

4. R. Q., a widow, with two children, the eldest a girl of thirteen, and the other a boy of nine years. The widow took out her children rather than send them to Sligo. She is now hired as a servant to a man in the village of Tobercurry. The girl is also in service in the same place, and the boy lives with an uncle at Coollanny (some fifteen miles distant). This uncle is said to be a labouring man, and poor.

5. E. O'H., a widow, with two boys, aged fourteen and nine respectively. They all live near Temple House, supported by occasional fieldwork given to the mother. The children used to go to a neighbouring school, but it has been lately closed.

6. K. C., a widow, with one son, aged nine years. This woman went into service soon after taking her discharge, and was relieved in the workhouse for one month in the autumn of 1856, and again in January last. She was alone on both occasions, and told a pauper inmate that her boy was in service as a herd with a paternal aunt, and that she contrived to support herself, with occasional assistance from her father.

7. B. F., a deserted woman, whose husband was in England when she was admitted, with three children, aged five, three, and one year respectively. When the School Order was adopted, the Guardians suffered the eldest child to be taken out of the workhouse, and the mother, with the two little ones, followed in a few weeks. This interval was probably employed in communicating with her husband, for she and her children have since gone to join him in England, a subscription having been made up for her by her friends. This case, and No. 3 of the same class, appear to have been a good deal influenced by the interpretation as to very young children placed upon your Order by the Guardians.

Since the operation of the order, but one new case of admission and transfer to Sligo has occurred in the union. The child in that case was an orphan.

With reference to the subject generally, one of the Relieving Officers states that he is not aware of any cases of persons deterred from seeking admission by dislike to sending their children to Sligo; but thinks that the woman O'H. (case No. 5) would be glad to return if her children could remain in the house with her. Her eldest boy, though fourteen years of age, is not strong or well able to work, having broken his leg near the ankle. The woman has expressed herself determined never to separate from her children, saying she would rather "beg the world over."

The second Relieving Officer knows but of one case of a similar nature to this last, viz., that of K. C. (No. 1, class 2), but is aware of two new cases connected with the subject. One of a woman named A. W., living, with one son aged ten or twelve years, in Tobercurry, her husband being in America. She applied for relief in January, 1856, but refused it upon the condition of her son being sent to Sligo school. She supports herself and him by working as charwoman in the village. Her son does not go to school. The second is a case of a woman named K. D. who, with an infant (illegitimate, I believe) left the workhouse voluntarily to seek employment. She applied for relief on the 15th January last, her child being then three years old, and refused to accept it when told that her child must go to Sligo. She repeated her application on the 29th of the same month, asking to be allowed to remain with her child in the workhouse for a few weeks. This was conceded; and she voluntarily took her discharge upon the 18th February following. In this case, as in two previous ones, the Guardians' misconception of the order has worked unnecessary severity.

No. 3.—Report from Mr. R. Hamilton, Poor Law Inspector.

Strabane, March 7, 1857.

Gentlemen—In reference to your letter of the 28th ultimo, No. 4,923/57, directing me to visit the Glenties Union, and report to you the state of the children in the workhouse, and also in respect to the family mentioned in a communication from the Clerk of the Union, dated the 3rd inst., I have the honour to inform you that I visited the Glenties Workhouse on yesterday, and I found in it nineteen children, three over nine years of age, three of about five years of age, and thirteen under five years old. Of the three children above nine, one (a girl) suffers from sore eyes, and the Medical Officer objects to her removal to Donegal Workhouse. The other two, brother and sister, had recently been brought from Donegal for the purpose of taking their discharge. The mother of these children said she would rather beg from house to house than be separated from her children.

Another woman said to me that she intended to leave the workhouse "and to beg the world" with her children (three), rather than be separated from them. Of the remaining sixteen children four were infants, and the rest about five years of age and under.

The children in the workhouse receive no education of any kind.

They occupy, during the day-time, the apartment next the girls' school-room, intended for a nursery, and one or two adult females take charge of them.

The children looked healthy, and were tolerably clean.

I should be very sorry to see the children under five years of age separated from their mothers, and sent to Donegal.

With regard to the family consisting of a mother and four children, I have received a letter from the Relieving Officer, in which he says that for the last fortnight he has not heard of them, but that he is well aware they are still begging.

The Relieving Officer informed me that he was certain the family were still in the Union, and he has promised to make every inquiry about them, and to report to me the result.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. Hamilton.

No. 4.—Report from Mr. R. Hamilton, Poor Law Inspector.

Carndonagh, March 16, 1857.

Gentlemen,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant, No. 5,911/57, stating you are not prepared to press the sending of children from Glenties Workhouse to Donegal contrary to the wish of their parents, and requesting me to report if either the master or the matron would be competent to teach the children, and which of these officers I would recommend for that duty.

In reply, I beg leave to state that as the matron has to discharge the duties of infirmary nurse as well as matron, her time must be fully occupied, but I think the master might be able to devote two or three hours daily to the literary instruction of the children, and he is well qualified to discharge this duty.

I think the matron should take charge of the children under five years of age, and should superintend the industrial training of the girls. The master to superintend the industrial training of the boys.

If you think proper I shall visit the Union shortly, and arrange the details with the Board of Guardians, as there may be some difficulties to overcome, which I am not at present aware of.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. Hamilton.

The Poor Law Commissioners,

No. 5.—Report from Mr. R. Hamilton, Poor Law Inspector.

Strabane, March 21, 1857.

Gentlemen,—Adverting to your letter of the 20th instant, No. 6,803/57, and to previous correspondence respecting arrangements for the education of the children in Glenties Workhouse, I have the honour to inform you that as I was at Donegal last Thursday, I thought it better to go on to Glenties, and confer with the Guardians on the subject, but, unfortunately, there was no meeting of the Board on Friday.

However, I had the several officers before me, and stated that you were anxious to provide for the education of the children in the workhouse, without increasing the staff of officers.

It appears the matron is a regularly classed teacher under the National Board, and is quite competent to instruct the children, and she is perfectly willing to undertake this duty, if she be relieved from discharging the duty of infirmary nurse.

There is a paid nurse in the fever hospital, and at present, and generally for a great part of the year, there are no patients in it.

I think this nurse might take charge of the infirmary while the fever hospital is unoccupied, and she is quite willing to do so. This would relieve the matron of that duty during a great portion of the year, and enable her to undertake the instruction of the children.

Of course whenever the fever hospital is again occupied, the nurse would return to it, and the master and matron said they would, between them, make arrangements for the proper management of the infirmary during her absence.

On the whole, therefore, I think it would be better that the matron should be the officer selected to instruct the children, and not the master, as recommended in my former report.

On the part of the officers there would be no objection to this arrangement, and I do not think it would interfere with the proper management of the house.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. Hamilton.

No. 6.—Extract from Report from Mr. R. Hamilton, Poor Law Inspector, dated 21st March, 1857.

As regards the working of the School District Order, so far as Donegal is concerned, I have no hesitation in saying that the children are better fed, better clothed, and better educated in Donegal Workhouse than they were in Glenties Workhouse.

There were thirteen children from Glenties in the house. The progress of these children in literary acquirements has been very satisfactory. Seven of the above thirteen children are either orphans or deserted by parents; and there were only two of them who appeared anxious to return to Glenties.

No. 7.—Report from Mr. R. Hamilton, Poor Law Inspector.

Strabane, April 6, 1857.

Gentlemen,—In reference to your letter of the 9th of March, requesting a report from me respecting the working of District School Order in my district, I beg leave to inform you that the Order is only carried into effect in two instances in my district, viz., the children from Gortin Workhouse are sent to Omagh Workhouse, and the children from Glenties Workhouse are sent to Donegal Workhouse.

There were only six or seven children in Gortin Workhouse at the time they were first sent to Omagh, and since then but very few children have been admitted at Gortin.

The children originally sent have, with one or two exceptions, remained in Omagh, and I think they prefer being in that workhouse to Gortin Workhouse.

With regard to the operation of the Order at Glenties, I have had some correspondence with you on the subject since the date of your letter, and you have addressed the Board of Guardians suggesting that the children should not be sent to Donegal, contrary to the wish of their parents.

Whenever I visit the Unions of Gortin and Glenties, I will obtain all the information I can on the subject.

I think you have already been made aware of the facts, respecting the sending of the children from Glenties to Donegal, and therefore it is not probable I shall visit the union for some time yet, unless you think it necessary for me to do so.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. Hamilton.

The Poor Law Commissioners,
Custom House.

No. 8.—Report from Mr. R. Hamilton, Poor Law Inspector.

Strabane, May 2, 1857.

Gentlemen,—Adverting to your letter of the 2nd ult., forwarding your letter of the 9th of March, directing me to furnish you with a report respecting the operation of the School District Order in the unions in my district, in which it is in force, I have the honour to make the following report on the subject with regard to the Unions of Gortin and Omagh :—

The children in Gortin Workhouse were sent to Omagh Workhouse, under the Order, on the 25th July, 1855. There were then eight children in the house, between the ages of five and fifteen years. Only five of these children went to Omagh. The other three children appear to have been discharged that week. The total number of children sent to Omagh, including the above five, is only fourteen ; and there are but three children from the Gortin Union now in Omagh Workhouse. Of the fourteen children sent to Omagh, I find that seven are now at service, one has emigrated, three are with near relatives, and three still in Omagh Workhouse. During the year previous to the children being sent to Omagh, the number of children between five and fifteen years of age, (children under five were not sent to Omagh) appears to have varied from six to twelve.

I can only find two cases in which parents took their discharge from Gortin Workhouse, rather than be separated from their children—viz., a woman, named M., with two children, aged thirteen and ten ; and a woman, named O., with one child. It appears that the woman M. is still in the Gortin Union. Since she left the workhouse she has supported herself and children by her own industry. The children are now at service.

The woman O. has not been in the union since she left the workhouse.

The Relieving Officer states that, with the above exceptions, he does not recollect any instance of a person objecting to come into the workhouse on account of the children being sent to Omagh.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

R. Hamilton.

The Poor Law Commissioners, &c., &c.

No. 9.—Report from Mr. Robinson, Poor Law Inspector.

Lisburn, March 23, 1857.

Gentlemen,—I have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th instant, in which you request that I will report to you as to the operation of the District Schools Order in the unions in my district, in which it is in force.

Orders authorizing the formation of such schools have been issued in two instances in this district ; one combining the Unions of Monaghan, Castleblayney, and Clones for that purpose, Monaghan being the central or receiving union ; and the other combining the Unions of Ballymoney, Ballycastle, and Ballymena.

The order last alluded to has not been acted on by the Boards of Guardians of the Unions concerned, and it is only necessary, therefore, that I should advert to the working of the system in the Monaghan school district.

The order was issued in this instance on March 20th, 1855, and the children from five to fifteen years of age were removed from the Clones Workhouse to Monaghan on the 3rd of August, 1855, and the children of the same age sent in from the Castleblayney Workhouse on the 30th of September following. There were twenty-six children thus transferred from Clones, and forty-eight from Castleblayney ; since that time the discharge of children belonging to these two contributing unions have been nearly equal to the admissions ; and the following table shows the number of children from five to fifteen years of age at present on the roll of the school :—

Unions.	Orphans.	Deserted by Parents.	With Parent alive, and in receipt of Relief.	With Parent alive, but living out of the Workhouse.	Total.
Monaghan, .	14	17	22	2	55
Castleblayney,	23	7	11	2	43
Clones, . .	18	4	–	4	26
Totals, .	55	28	33	8	124

For some little time after the schools of the three unions were amalgamated, the arrangements were disturbed by misconduct on the part of the boys, and considerable difficulty was experienced in maintaining order and discipline. The children manifested much objection to leaving their own unions, and some of the boys absconded soon after their arrival at Monaghan.

Returns containing the particulars of all such cases, marked A, B, are attached to this report.

These difficulties have, however, been overcome, all the children are now orderly and well-conducted. They appear to be contented and happy, and none have absconded since the 14th of September last.

The teachers are efficient, and the school is conducted in a very satisfactory manner. A portion of land is cultivated entirely by the boys, and the children of both sexes receive a good industrial, as well as literary, education.

The amount originally fixed as the daily rate of payment for the maintenance and education of the Clones and Castleblayney children was found to be too low, and it was raised in March, 1856, from $3\frac{3}{4}d.$ a day for each child to $4d.$ The last half year's accounts show that $4d.$ a day is a fair charge ; and the proportion of the amount paid to the Guardians of Monaghan Union which exceeded the cost of maintenance of the Clones and Castleblayney children, and which was credited to establishment, was about two-thirds of the expense incurred in paying and supporting the staff of the school.

But while this result shows that the children of different unions may receive a better education in a district school than could be provided for them at the same cost in their respective workhouses, and that as a measure of economy the experiment has been successful, there are objections to the system, which have become apparent since it has been in operation, and to which it is necessary that I should allude.

The information given to me by the Officers of the Clones and Castleblayney Unions, and embodied in the returns annexed to this Report, marked C, D, shows that when the District School Order was acted on, parents who had children in the workhouse took their discharge to prevent the removal of such children to Monaghan : and in two or three cases, mothers induced persons outside to take charge of their children, while they remained in the workhouse themselves. Many of these persons (both parents and children) returned, but probably not until driven to do so by severe distress, and the feeling manifested proves that they were ready to encounter suffering in preference to a separation so painful to them.

If a district school could be formed of the orphan and deserted children received in several Unions, the measure would, I have no doubt, be attended with the best results; but experience has caused a considerable alteration in my views as to the advantages of the system as carried out at present; and I have no hesitation in stating it to be my present opinion that the removal of all children from the workhouse of the Union to which they belong, deters many destitute parents from seeking the relief which they know will be accompanied by total separation from their offspring, and induces them to resort to begging as a means of subsistence; mendicancy is thus increased, and the workhouse is made a much more severe test of destitution than is either desirable or humane.

The Order forming a district school at Monaghan was acted on by the Guardians of Clones and Castleblayney Unions, when they had more than once been urged to do so by your Inspectors, and before there had been opportunities afforded of testing the working of the measure.

The difficulties that interfered with the efficient management of this school have been overcome, and (as I have before mentioned) some of the persons who took their children out of the Clones and Castleblayney Workhouse have since returned. These circumstances, together with the fact, that a large majority of the children of the two last-named Unions are either orphans or deserted, whose education would be much interfered with if removed from the Monaghan school, would lead me to question the propriety of making a change now in this particular instance, and I should not be disposed at present to cancel the Monaghan School District Order; but I am so convinced that the advantages to be derived from the operation of such a system are fully counterbalanced by its evil effects, that I should regret to see it extended to other Unions.

I would beg to submit for your consideration, that it might be advisable to withdraw the power given to the Ballymoney, Ballymena, and Ballycastle Boards of Guardians to form a district school at Ballymoney.

I have the honour to be, gentlemen, your obedient servant,

HENRY ROBINSON.

To the Poor Law Commissioners.

No. 10.—REPORT from Mr. OTWAY, Poor Law Inspector.

Dublin, May 11, 1857.

GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your letters of the 9th and 11th of March and 2nd instant, I have to state that I made inquiries on the subject at Roscrea and Donaghmore on the 7th instant, and that I found that none of the children, as stated in the list sent to you by the clerk No. 6,359, as having absconded from Roscrea Workhouse, ever returned to the Roscrea Workhouse, and that it was not known what had become of any of them.

I also found, from inquiries at Donaghmore, that none of the children who absconded from Roscrea Workhouse had returned to Donaghmore Workhouse, and that it was not known there as to what had become of them. I also found that none of the children marked in the list as having returned to Donaghmore, are now inmates of the Donaghmore Workhouse, with the exception of J. R., who is now in the Donaghmore Workhouse; that on return to Donaghmore from Roscrea, the children alluded to were discharged, on application for discharge, and that none of them have since returned to Donaghmore Workhouse.

As to the arrangements made for the removal of the children from one union to another, and vice versâ, the master of the workhouse informed me, that when children between five and fifteen years of age are admitted at Donaghmore, he sends them to Roscrea with an order for admission to the master of the Roscrea Workhouse; that he sends them on an ass's cart, which he hires for 2*s.*; that he sends a careful messenger with them, and straw and rugs in the cart; that he also sends in the same way to Roscrea to bring from that workhouse to Donaghmore the children who are ordered to be discharged from Roscrea.

The clerk and master of the Donaghmore Union both informed me that the parents of children sent to Roscrea made great objection to their children being so sent, and that cases had occurred where deserted children and orphans had been taken out of the workhouse by their friends, as soon as it was heard that the children were to be sent to Roscrea.

A woman named E. H., left the Donaghmore Workhouse, and took her three children with her, two of whom were in Roscrea and one in Donaghmore Workhouse, stating that she left the workhouse and took her children because she did not wish them to be in Roscrea Workhouse.

A man named B., now an inmate of the Donaghmore Workhouse (without his wife), had two children with him in the workhouse, both of whom were sent to Roscrea; the boy J. absconded from Roscrea Workhouse, the other, A., the mother took out and got her discharge, stating that she did so sooner than let her stay in Roscrea.

From the circumstance that the children who absconded from Roscrea Workhouse have not returned to either Roscrea or Donaghmore; from the circumstance that the children who returned from Roscrea to Donaghmore, and took their discharge from thence, have not returned to Donaghmore or Roscrea; from the circumstance that of fifty-five admissions under the school order (made in December, 1855) now only fifteen remain in the Roscrea Workhouse, (these fifteen being all orphans)—I am led to believe that the working of the districts school order has operated as a new and most stringent test: that children have absconded sooner than remain in a workhouse removed from their friends and parents; that parents have taken their own and their children's discharge rather than allow their children to remain in the workhouse of another union; and that friends or relatives of deserted and orphan children have applied for the discharge of children sooner than allow them to remain in the workhouse of another union.

I have, &c.,

C. G. OTWAY.

PARAGRAPH 12.—QUERIES and ANSWERS as to UNION RATES, DISPENSARY DISTRICTS, &c.

QUESTIONS.	ANSWERS.
1. What rates are levied as Union rates? 2. What rates are levied on Electoral Divisions?	1 and 2. All rates are levied on Electoral Divisions separately.
3. On what areas are Medical Charities' rates levied?	3. There is no separate rate for Medical Charities expenses. The expenses under the Medical Charities Act are charged upon the respective Dispensary Districts. Those Districts always comprise one or more entire Electoral Divisions, and the charge upon the Dispensary District is apportioned to the several Electoral Divisions contained in it according to Net Annual Value.
4. Are Medical Charities' Districts always parts of one Union, or are they ever parts taken from more than one Union?	4. Medical Charities, or rather Dispensary Districts, are always parts of one Union, and always comprise entire Electoral Divisions; the 6th section of the Medical Charities Act requiring that each Union shall be divided into Dispensary Districts, and that in no case shall an Electoral Division be divided.
5. Are there any rates raised on other areas than Unions or Electoral Divisions.	5. In case of any alteration of the boundaries of any Union or Electoral Division, the Commissioners are empowered to order the making of a rate on the townlands affected by the alteration with a view to the necessary adjustment of liabilities; and under the Burial-grounds Acts it sometimes becomes necessary to make a rate on part of an Electoral Division—for instance, when the Division comprises a borough or town having Town Commissioners, the Guardians' jurisdiction as a Burial Board not extending into such towns. In no other case is a rate raised on any other area than the Electoral Division.

QUERIES ADDRESSED TO THE MANAGERS OF REFORMATORIES.

1.—Name of the Reformatory, in full, and for what sex?
2.—By what Act or Acts of Parliament is the Reformatory regulated?
3.—Names, description, and addresses of the Managers.
4.—Date of the Certificate, and by whom issued.
5.—Extent of land occupied by Managers, with Griffith's Valuation.
6.—By whom is the school inspected?
7.—Date of last inspection, and copy of the latest Report communicated to the Managers.
8.—Limits of age within which persons are sent to this Reformatory.
9.—Return of all persons now detained in the Reformatory, giving the age and creed of each; the offence proved against him; name of the court convicting, date of conviction, and period of sentence. Add in each case the parents' occupation.
10.—Return, for the last three years, of all persons, to be distinguished by numbers or letters, but not by names, who before the expiration of their sentence have been placed out from this Reformatory upon trial, showing the trade and religious denomination of each employer, the conditions of service, and the length of previous detention in each case within this Reformatory.
11.—Names and creed of any persons transferred at the wish of their parents or guardians from this Reformatory to other Reformatories, and the date of transfer.
12.—What is the accommodation afforded in this Reformatory—is it in one or more buildings?
13.—Is the accommodation completely occupied?
14.—Have you ever been forced to refuse admission from want of room?
15.—State upon what terms persons are received, distinguishing the allowance made by the Commissioners of the Treasury from the payment out of any local rate, and from the contributions of parents or guardians.
16.—What is the maximum contribution which parents of sufficient ability are liable to contribute? What means are taken to enforce payment by parents?
17.—A table of parents' payments showing for this date how many parents contribute nothing, and how many contribute at the various weekly rates up to the maximum sanctioned by the Act.
18.—Send in a copy of the last Balance Sheet as audited, with date and Auditor's name.
19.—What was the cost per head during the last completed year? How much of this sum was spent upon (1) food, (2) clothing, (3) industrial instruction, (4) literary instruction, (5) establishment charges, rent, repairs, &c.?
20.—What branches of industry are taught? Give the name, age, wages, and previous occupation of each industrial instructor.
21.—What branches of elementary education are taught? Give the name, age, wages, and previous occupation of each literary instructor.
22.—By whom and under what regulations is religious instruction given?
23.—Send in a time-table setting forth the daily occupations of inmates, and specify any variations in it caused by changes of season.
24.—Return the dietary for each day in the week, showing the hours of meals, and the kind and quantity of food served to each inmate.
25.—What punishments are employed towards the refractory?
26.—Have any persons absconded within the last twelve months, and if so, how have they been brought back?
27.—How often is the Reformatory visited by a medical man? Are all the inmates seen periodically by the doctor?
28.—Give the number of inmates under medical treatment on 1st May, 1868.
29.—Has the Reformatory ever been visited by an epidemic?
30.—Mention any diseases which have been prevalent within it at any time during the last two years.
31.—What mode of classification within the Reformatory is adopted so as to separate cases of accidental crime from contamination by habitual and hardened criminals?
32.—What species of labour have you found most effectual as a Reformatory instrument?
33.—What profit, if any, did the labour of the inmates yield in each of the last three years?
34.—What means do you take to trace the subsequent career of persons discharged?
35.—Do persons after leaving the Reformatory generally pursue the trades which they have learnt within it?
36.—Give a return of the career of all offenders discharged from this Reformatory at any time previous to the end of 1867, showing in a table:—
The mode of discharge; number dead, doing well, re-convicted, doubtful, unknown.
37.—Are you satisfied that the system adopted in this Reformatory actually works the reformation of a considerable proportion of those subjected to it?

MEMORANDUM by P. J. MURRAY, Esq., Inspector of Reformatories, at the time when the Returns were compiled.

With reference to Query 11, it is to be observed that in Ireland no removals from one Reformatory to another can take place on the motion of parents or guardians of the children, except by an amendment of the sentence on appeal to a Court superior to that which passed the original sentence. (See Act 21 & 22 Vic., cap. ciii., sec. 7.)

In only three cases since the passing of the Reformatories Act (1858) have removals been necessary on account of a mistake as to the religion of the juvenile offender.

All other transfers have been for disciplinary or similar grounds, and made by order of the Chief Secretary on Report from the Inspector of Reformatories, under 21 & 22 Vic., cap. ciii., sec. 20.

The advantages of such a power of removal, and the conditions of its exercise, will be apparent to anyone who remembers the advisability of removing, e.g. from Dublin to a remote place, unruly girls who are ill-disposed, and thus, as far as possible severing all connexion between them and their vicious companions.

The satisfactory result above-mentioned, the small number of transfers which have happened in the Irish Reformatories since the passing of the Act in 1858, is attributable to the fact, that while in England and Scotland the Court may commit a juvenile offender to any Reformatory School, the Irish Acts make it imperative that the child shall be sent only to a school managed by persons of the same religion as its parents or guardians, or (should this be unknown) the child itself professes. (21 & 22 Vic., cap. ciii., sec. 7).

P. J. MURRAY.

Query.

11. J. T., who was removed from this to the Protestant Reformatory in Dublin, on the 3rd February, 1861, by order of the Recorder, was the only boy transferred from this to other similar institutions.

12. There is accommodation for a staff of about 25, and for boys to the number of about 320. The Reformatory comprises several buildings, the principal being—first, that which is used chiefly for the accommodation of the staff; and, second, a long range of new buildings wholly for the use of the boys, containing their dormitories, lavatory, refectory, principal school-room, and kitchen. Besides these two buildings, there are several out-offices for the use of those who learn trades, as well as a gas-house, laundry, stables, &c., &c. There is also a chapel for the boys, made of wood, and in very poor condition.

Query.

13. No. There is still room for 10 or 20 boys.

14. Not during the last two or three years.

15. Six shilling a week per head from the Treasury; 3*s.* 6*d.* additional from the Dublin Corporation, for the Dublin City boys; 2*s.* 6*d.* per head from some other corporations for the boys from their respective cities; and smaller sums per head from most of the Grand Juries for the county boys.

16. Maximum 2*s.* 6*d.*—collected in Dublin Metropolitan Police District by persons selected and paid by Government; collected in the provinces by the Constabulary.

17. Total received from parents (average rate of payment 6*d.* per week), £167 10*s.* 10*d.*

24. DIETARY TABLE.

Breakfast at 8 o'clock.

Stirabout, made with 6 oz. oatmeal and 2 oz. Indian meal, and ¾ pint of milk, } Daily.

Query.

Dinner.

8 oz. boiled beef and 16 oz. bread, or 1½ lb. potatoes, } Sundays and Thursdays.

Beef broth and 16 oz. bread, or 1½ lb. potatoes, } Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday.

Vegetable soup and 16 oz. bread on Friday.

N.B.—Officers amongst the boys, and boys of the section of merit, get bread and butter and tea on Sunday evenings, and on some of the greater festivals. The allowance of potatoes at dinner sometimes supersedes the bread, when they are abundant and cheap.

25. For very grave offences, solitary confinement for a day or two, a few strokes of a cane, and shaving of the head. For minor transgressions, ordinary school punishments.

26. Yes, one, who was arrested in Dublin after a few days by two detective officers, and brought back by a member of the staff.

27. Once a fortnight as a rule; oftener when found necessary.

28. Three or four for accidents only.

29. Yes. Typhus fever and cerebro-spinal disease, in the spring of this year.

30. Typhus fever and spino-cerebral fever, March and April.

31. None is found necessary, nor would the nature of the buildings render it possible.

32. The different trades given in another page are equally effectual.

33. From the barren nature of the soil, there has been little, if any, profit in the farming department, about forty acres of the land having been reclaimed with great labour and outlay. On the whole, the expenditure in the industrial departments has considerably exceeded the receipts.

34. By having agents in different places, and encouraging frequent correspondence by letters and occasional visits to the institution.

MONAGHAN (SPARK'S-LAKE).—REFORMATORY SCHOOL FOR ROMAN CATHOLIC GIRLS.

REPLIES to QUERIES as required by the ROYAL COMMISSIONERS appointed to inquire into PRIMARY EDUCATION in IRELAND.—JUNE, 1869.

Query.

1. Monaghan.—Spark-lake Reformatory School for Roman Catholic girls.
2. 21 & 22 Vic., cap. 103.
3. Mrs. Beale and The Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly at the school.
4. Certified May 3rd, 1859, by the Chief Secretary.
5. 1 acre 1 rood 25 perches, value £6; value of buildings, £50.
6. P. J. Murray, esq.
7. December, 1866.
8. Any age within the Act.
9. See Return A, annexed.
10. Four, all doing well.
11. None.
12. Sixty, in two buildings.
13. No, we have only forty.
14. Never, we never had more than fifty at a time.
15. All sent under the Act are received.
    The Government pay 6*s.* per head per week, and we received £189 from rates. The parental contributions amounted to £23, but from these we receive no benefit.

16 & 17. The maximum is 1*s.* 6*d.*, the average is 6*d.* The collection is made in Dublin by the appointed collector, and in the provinces by the constabulary.

18. We have none. We furnish returns to the inspector.
19. See General Abstract.
    N.B.—The cost of literary and industrial instruction, establishment charges, &c., are included under the head of salaries and allowances of officers and repairs, which amounted to £220.
20. Embroidery, plain work, laundry work, employment in dairy and farm-yard—these are taught by the ladies of the establishment, the convent of St. Louis, to which the reformatory is attached.

Query.

21. Reading, writing, arithmetic—the teaching as in No. 20.
22. By the Sisters and by the Chaplain.
23 and 24. See Return B, annexed.
25. Confinement in a cell, reduced diet, and reduction in class.
26. None.
27. The physician to the convent visits the children when required.
28. None.
29. Never.
30. None.
31. On reception, they are kept apart from others, and when their disposition is known, they are classed.
32. We can see no difference in the reformatory effect in one species of employment over another. We do not approve of making labour or industry a punishment, we think it much better to make employment a duty, and to make it go hand in hand with religion, and we believe we have been successful.
33. About £8; we find it extremely difficult to dispose of the articles which we make, being so far from a large town is against us, and we receive, with one or two exceptions, no help from persons living in our neighbourhood.
34. By correspondence, through the local clergy, and through friends.
35. Yes.
36. See Return C, annexed.
37. Yes, we are satisfied, and considering the class of girls we have had under our charge, we have every reason to believe that the system we pursue is sound.

(Signed),

GENEVIEVE BEALE, Manager.

UPTON, CO. CORK.—ST. PATRICK'S REFORMATORY SCHOOL FOR ROMAN CATHOLIC BOYS.

Replies to Queries as required by the Royal Commissioners appointed to inquire into Primary Education in Ireland, 30th September, 1868.

Query.

1. Upton, county Cork—St. Patrick's Reformatory school for Roman Catholic boys.
2. 21st and 22nd Vic., cap. 103; and 31st and 32nd Vic., cap. 59.
3. Very Rev. Moses Furlong. St. Patrick's Reformatory School, Upton.
4. 5th July, 1860. By the Right Hon. E. Cardwell, Chief Secretary.
5. 110 acres 2 roods 34 perches; value of land, £88; value of buildings, £150.
6. Patrick Joseph Murray, esq.
7. 5th February, 1867. "Though the educational and industrial training of the boys is both well and carefully attended to, yet from the large tract of ground (110 acres) attached to this school, the manager, Rev. Moses Furlong, has thought it advisable to employ the greater number of the boys at agricultural labour.

   This has proved a valuable acquisition in cases of emigration; hence many of the boys have started to begin a new life in the new world of Brazil.

   The conduct of the boys discharged has been most satisfactory; and the Rev. Manager has spared neither money nor exertions to give them a fair chance of success. The band and drill are carefully attended to. The band is very good."—(Copy of latest Report.)

5.45—Leave work.
6.15—Drill: Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. School: Tuesdays and Thursdays. Ablutions, &c.: Saturdays.
7 —Supper and recreation.
8 —School.
9 —Night prayers and rest (sleep 8 hours).

Sundays.

A.M.

6 —Rise, say prayers, and wash.
6.30—Mass.
7 —Catechism in the schools.
7.30—Breakfast and recreation.
8.40—School.
9.40—Recreation.
10 —High mass, sermon, &c.

P.M.

12.25—Dinner and recreation.
1.30—Military evolutions for all the boys, half-an hour. Drill with music, one hour.
3 —Instruction and benediction.
4 —Recreation.
6 —School. (On wet Sundays and holidays at 5½ o'clock.)
7 —Supper and recreation.
8 —School.
8.30—Night prayers, and rest.

At meals silence is observed, while one of the boys reads aloud. At breakfast the Holy Scriptures are read; and at dinner and supper instructive amusing books are read.

N.B.—In winter time the boys engaged in farm work go to the study as soon as it is getting dark.

DIETARY TABLE.

Query.

24. Breakfast.

7.30, A.M. Stirabout made of 5½ oz. of oatmeal and 2½ oz. of Indian meal, ½ pint skim milk and bread ad libitum for each boy.

Dinner.

12.30, P.M. One pint of meat soup 1½ lb. of potatoes; bread ad lib.

On Sundays, each boy is allowed, in addition to the soup, ½ lb. of meat exclusive of bone.

On Fridays, pea or vegetable soup is served instead of meat soup.

Supper.

7, P.M. Same as breakfast.

NOTE.—(a.) Twice a week (as a change) rice is allowed instead of meal for supper. (b.) I have put down bread ad lib. inasmuch as it is not portioned out, the bread-baskets being placed on the tables, although, according to calculation, the number of loaves sent from bake-house will give each boy about 6¼ oz. for breakfast and supper, and 7⅛ oz. for dinner. There is always bread left after meals, and if more is required they get it, hence I have said ad libitum.

Query.

25. Principally such as is used in well regulated colleges. In very bad cases, of which only four have occurred in this school since the opening, we take advantage of 31st and 32nd Vic., cap. 59, and sec. 19, where it says: "Managers have the power to bring refractory boys before magistrates of petty sessions," &c., &c.
26. No.
27. Twice weekly. Yes.
28. None.
29. No.
30. None.
31. To prevent moral contamination in the first place, younger and elder boys are kept apart in the study-room, dormitories, play-ground; and secondly, our lads are always by day and by night under direct surveillance.
32. As a reformatory instrument I have found agricultural labour very effectual.
33. 1865, £243 0*s.* 5½*d.*; 1866, £352 11*s.* 4*d.*; 1867, £171 3*s.* 4*d.*
34. By direct and indirect epistolary communication. Frequently a youth will detail the whereabouts, the occupation, and the success of several companions within a radius of 50 or 80, or even 100 miles. Certain employers will occasionally favour us with a report of the Reformatory employés.
35. I believe the majority do.

RETURN

FROM THE

ALEXANDRA COLLEGE.

To the Royal Commissioners of Inquiry into Primary Education, Ireland.

Gentlemen,—Alexandra College was founded in the year 1866 for the purpose of supplying defects in the existing system of education for women of the upper and middle classes—of affording an education more sound, more solid, more systematically imparted, and better tested than was at that time to be obtained in Ireland. Foundation. Objects.

The age of admission was at first fixed at fifteen years, and afterwards reduced to fourteen years. Age of admission.

The college was established on a self-supporting basis, was set on foot by subscriptions from those more actively interested in the experiment, and has been sustained solely by the fees of the students. No endowment. Two annual exhibitions of the value of ten pounds each have been given by the Visitor of the college since its commencement, and a few special exhibitions by others. All of these are open without restriction to students of every denomination. Self-supporting. Exhibitions.

The college is governed by a Visitor and Council, who have the financial control and the final decision on all matters. Government.

The Committee of Education, consisting of the Professors engaged in the instruction of the first divisions, have the control of the educational arrangements, and appoint, subject to the approval of the Council, to all vacant Professorships, and have power to add to or diminish the number of subjects undertaken to be taught in the college. Committee of education.

The officers are—a Principal, who has a seat in the Council, a Vice-Principal, Bursar, and Secretary, a Lady Superintendent, and Assistant Ladies. Officers.

A body of lady visitors, nominated by the Visitor and Council, perform the duty of sitting by during the hours of lecture, and report to the Lady Superintendent on any matters requiring her care, which come under their observation. Lady visitors.

On the establishment of the college classes were formed and courses of lectures begun in— Classes first opened.

Subjects.	Professors.
1. Mathematics	Rev. T. T. Gray, F.T.C.D.
2. Drawing and Pictorial Art	T. A. Bridgford, R.H.A.
3. English Language and Literature	J. K. Ingram, F.T.C.D.
4. French Language and Literature.	M. D. Meric
5. German Language and Literature	Professor Selss, T.C.D.
6. Physical Geography and Geology	Robert Scott, M.A.
7. History, Ancient and Modern	Rev. R. T. Smith, M.A.
8. Latin	Rev. R. P. Graves, M.A.
9. Natural Science (Botany, Zoology)	Dr. E. P. Wright, T.C.D.
10. Science of Harmony	Robert P. Stewart, Mus. Dr., T.C D.
11. Theology and Church History	Rev. H. H. Dickinson, D.D.

The religious instruction is given in accordance with the doctrines of the Church of England and Ireland, but attendance on these classes is perfectly optional to the student. Attendance on religious instruction optional.

The manner of instruction in the language classes is that of advanced exercises in composition, vivâ voce questioning, reading of authors. In the literature classes it is carried on by means of lectures and taking of notes, &c. In science, by lecture, demonstration, and experiment. Method of instruction.

Attendance on a course of two years' study with examinations conducted by printed questions and written answers four times during the course is required from the candidates for certificates. Length of course.

These examinations take place in the college under the care of the Lady Superintendent, two hours being allowed to the answering of each paper of ten questions. The answers are sent to the teachers, by whom they are examined and marked to a fixed standard, and at the end of each two years' course the papers of the candidates for certificates are submitted to independent examiners, who sign the certificates conjointly with the teachers. Several of the classes were immediately filled with eager and attentive students, many of whom were able to keep pace with and profit by these advanced courses of study, yet in the constant recurrence to the underlying foundations of knowledge needed in a thoroughly sound educational process, the experience of a few weeks only was required to bring to light, the inaccurate, vague, and fragmentary nature of the education generally given to girls, the neglect of the rules of spelling, of the principles of grammar, the downright ignorance of arithmetic, the absence of any training of the mind, the meagreness of the so-called accomplishments on which so much time and energy had been wasted. The Council and Committee speedily became convinced that if the college was to exercise a really beneficial influence on the National education of girls and women of the upper and middle classes, one of two courses should be taken, either (1) the institution of an entrance examination, requiring proof to be given of acquaintance with the primary elements of knowledge, or (2) to subdivide the existing classes, and to add on classes for instruction in subjects not at first contemplated as requisite to be undertaken by the college. Examinations. Examiners for certificates. Recurrence to primary elements necessary. Inaccuracy and neglect in previous education. Two remedies. Entrance examination, or additional classes.

Reasons against entrance examination.

Upon deliberation, it was decided that the establishment of an entrance examination would have the effect of narrowing the sphere of action by imposing a barrier to the entrance of timid students, and would be an injustice to those students and parents who were anxiously desirous to enter at once upon a better system, and who looked to the College as affording them the means of doing so. It was believed that even had parents and schoolmistresses generally been contented to relinquish the straining after the phantom of a "finishing education," and had been willing to enter upon the modest and unattractive groundwork of study which an entrance examination should set forth, many years must elapse before such a radical change could be made widely effective. The question of entrance examination was, therefore, laid aside until there shall be sufficient proof that it can be instituted with general advantage to the community. Classes were then begun in the college for instruction in English language (i.e., rules of spelling, exercises in dictation, grammar, reading, punctuation, composition), arithmetic (up to decimal fractions), geography (physical and political), history (English and European, as connected with England), the elements of the theory of music and class singing, the elements of perspective and outline drawing, and in modern Continental languages, subdivision of the classes into three sections, beginning with the elementary principles of grammar. In addition to these a kind of tutorial system has been attempted by the appointment of a staff of student teachers, who sit by in the hours of professorial instruction, and prepare the less advanced students after the class hour in the next appointed lesson.

Study of elements unattractive.

Question of entrance examination laid aside.

Additional subjects introduced.

Subdivision of classes.

Student teachers.

Manner of teaching in subdivisions.

In all these subdivisions of classes and additional classes, the instruction is carried on by means of question and answer, and by compositions prepared at home, and by correction of exercises in class. Examinations are held at stated times in these, as in the higher classes, the results of which are made known to parents twice a year by the Lady Superintendent.

No rewards, prizes or publicity.

Average attendance.

Class rewards are not offered, nor have prizes been instituted, nor has it appeared either necessary or desirable that they should be. There is a very general appreciation on the part of the students of the value of the educational advantages offered to them. There has been a steady average attendance of 170 students since the commencement, and the exceptions to diligent earnest study are very few indeed.

Acknowledged advantages of the system.

Zeal of the Professors.

The system has won the confidence of parents, not so much from the actual amount of "facts and figures" acquired, as from its power of developing a spirit of observation and inquiry, from the stimulus given to self-improvement by the gradual working up to a high standard, from a certain recognition of what is true and womanly in character, which, young as the college is, may almost be called one of its "traditions,"—and, above all, from the laborious and unceasing efforts of the professors to impress upon their pupils the importance of diligent, accurate, and conscientious habits of study.

Demand for higher studies.

Higher classes added.

Accomplishments.

A very remarkable and encouraging fact in the working of the system is, the development and increasing demand for the higher studies, side by side with this necessity for elementary instruction, so that it has been found desirable to appoint Professors in many branches of knowledge which were at first omitted from the curriculum. Of these Ethnology* and the science of language, Greek, Hebrew,† Italian,‡ Astronomy,§ and elementary Physics, are studied with enjoyment by a fair proportion of students, who pursue them as an intellectual recreation after the main business of their education has been finished; while in the direction of accomplishments the scientific teaching of harmony has ripened into the practice of concerted music, both vocal and instrumental, of a strictly classical character.

I am, gentlemen, yours faithfully,

ANNE JELLICOE.

PAPERS

AND

IN

SOME FOREIGN COUNTRIES, AND IN SOME OF THE COLONIES.

EXTRACT FROM INTRODUCTION TO THE REPORT OF THE COMMISSION. (Vol. I., pp. 17, 18.)

"The Commission which investigated the state of Elementary Education in England deemed it expedient to have an inquiry instituted into the condition and methods of Primary Instruction in some Continental countries; and for this purpose, with the sanction of Your Majesty's Government, they employed three Assistant-Commissioners to visit France, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, and the United States of North America. As we had the advantage of being able to refer to the Reports of the Assistant-Commissioners who made those inquiries, we considered that our object would be sufficiently attained by procuring through Official Reports or other authentic documents such further or supplementary information as would complete the knowledge of the matter then acquired, and bring it down to the date of our own inquiry.

"Accordingly we addressed a communication to Your Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, requesting him to obtain for our use copies of the official regulations under which assistance is afforded by the State or by municipal or communal authorities to schools for Primary Education under the control or management of religious authorities, orders, or congregations, male or female, in Austria, Baden, Bavaria, Belgium, France, Holland, Italy, Portugal, Spain, Switzerland, and the United States of North America, together with the regulations respecting the training of masters, mistresses, and assistants, and the constitution and government of normal schools for Primary Education, and the latest Reports officially published of the Statistics of Primary Education, as to numbers, classification, and expenditure; and also copies of the regulations under which schools for agricultural education are conducted, with the assistance of the State in the same countries. We made similar application to Your Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Colonies, resquesting information of a like kind respecting Canada and the other American and Australian colonies.

"In consequence of these applications a large collection of documents was forwarded to us, giving very ample authentic information respecting the condition of Primary Education, and the methods and systems of the corresponding instruction in the foreign countries, and in Your Majesty's colonies, above mentioned. We take this opportunity of acknowledging our obligations to Your Majesty's Ministers for the valuable assistance thus afforded to us, and of recording our sense of the great courtesy displayed by the foreign and colonial Governments who cordially acceded to our wishes, and forwarded for our use those important documents."

Of the documents thus forwarded to the Commission, an abstract of those connected with Agricultural Education has been already published in the Appendix to the Special Report on Agricultural Schools (Vol. I., Part II., page 945 to 972).
